People Flee New Floods in Colorado

Grand Junction, Colo., June 11.—Scores of families are leaving their homes in the valleys of the Colorado and Gunnison rivers near here tonight following flood warnings from the weather bureau. Lowlands along the rivers' ...nks already are flooded and some f... inundated.

The Colorado river is two inches above the highest mark of last year and still rising. Reports from the upper Gunnison district say the river is the highest in years.

Town Cut Off.

Denver, Colo., June 11.—Silverton is reported cut off from all communication tonight. The town is sixty miles north of Durango.

Fears were felt tonight in Durango for the safety of Electra dam, seventeen miles north of that city. Electra dam holds 30,000 acre feet of water. The lake behind it is six miles long and from one-half to three-quarters of a mile wide. Its depth ranges from a few feet at one point to one hundred feet at another. Below the dam lies the rich Animas valley.

CHICAGO WOMAN AMONG DEAD.

In addition to Miss Loretta Griffin, another Chicago woman, Mrs. Charles H. Krueger of 3205 Warner avenue, met death in the Colorado floods, according to dispatches last night.

Mrs. Krueger's body was recovered from the wreckage of a Denver and Rio Grande train an hour after her husband and W. P. Frary, her father, had left Pueblo for Chicago. Attempts were being made to reach them in Denver last night. Mrs. Krueger leaves three children.

The death list from all points touched by the flood will total 106, the dispatches say.

WEDDED WOMEN OUSTED AS LAKE FOREST TEACHERS

A wife's place is home and not in the school room, the Lake Forest school board decided yesterday in discharging all married teachers and replacing them by single women.

Because they have been married within the last few weeks three of the teachers will not appear next year. Of two teachers resigning because they are soon to be married, Miss Jessie Hill is engaged to James Anderson of Lake Forest and Miss Jeannie Shaw will become the bride of William Burridge.

Miss Mabel Mathewson, third grade teacher and president of the Business and Professional Girls' Club, will not be back next year, as she recently became the bride of Robert Edwards, auto salesman. Miss Mary McNamara, Burlington, Wis., Miss Grace Stephenson, Chicago, and Miss Randy Stone, Palatine, will replace the married teachers.

"Whereas, the marriage of a woman teacher is inconsistent with the performance of her duties in the jeopardizing of that regularity and continuance of service which is essential thereto; now, therefore, the appointment of a woman teacher shall hereafter terminate upon her marriage, and this resolution shall apply as well to present as to future appointments of the board," was the decision of the board.

Federal Reserve Clerks Seized as Auto Thieves

Two youths who say they are mailing clerks in the Federal Reserve bank, were arrested this morning charged with trying to steal the automobile of L. X. Rest, 5322 Wabash avenue. They confessed, the police say, to have stolen five other autos. They were arrested by Motorcycle Policeman Frank Rhode and gave their names as Clarence Isaacsen, 1717 North Albany avenue, and Earling Fugle, 4142 North Keystone avenue.

BED GOLF

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

You start with a perfect four on the first hole.

A smashing drive and a phenomenal putt on the second hole give you a lovely two.

On the baby water hole your drive drops to within three feet of the hole.

Gradually warming up, you drive over the trees on the boomerang hole and land on the green, giving you a—well, call it a three, to be on the safe side.

You wind up the day with a card of 90, about twenty strokes better than your best score.

Having made this splendid score in bed, you then go out and slice a fooled drive seventy-five yards into the rough. Hain't it awful!?

HEART STOPS; IS STARTED AGAIN BY AN OPERATION

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—The case of a man apparently dead ten minutes being revived and living fourteen and a half hours thereafter is recorded in an operation performed on William Carrigan, Belleville, N. J.

Surgeons, resetting a broken hip, had placed Carrigan under ether. In the midst of the operation they became alarmed when they could not detect a pulse. The surgeons decided upon heroic measures.

An incision of six inches was made in the abdomen, and the chief surgeon inserted his hand in the opening until his fingers came in contact with the muscles enveloping the heart. Gently massaging this region with the fingers, there was a response. After two or three strokes the pulse at once "picked up," the beats gradually became normal, and within less than fifteen minutes they were counted slightly above normal.

Carrigan then came out of the anaesthetic.

Although in a weakened condition, Carrigan's mind at once became alert and he inquired about his family and how long he would have to remain in the hospital. The surgeons were jubilant, but after a time he went into coma, from which he never recovered.

THREE ARRESTED FOR CAMP GRANT PAY ROLL FRAUDS

Rockford, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Investigation of a pay roll scandal at Camp Grant has resulted in the detention of two sergeants and one former sergeant of the 78th field artillery, and the placing of twenty-eight other enlisted men under surveillance. This became known today. The amount involved approximates $1,500, covering a period of two months. The men in custody are: Personnel Sergeant Major James Dearing, of twenty-two years' continuous service in the army; Sergt. Claude R. Williams, Battery A, Grant, Mich.; former Sergt. Percy C. I. Douglass, Hammond, Ind.

Maj. William S. Woods, regimental commander, is said to have uncovered a conspiracy between the noncommissioned officers and certain privates. No "higher-ups" are involved, it is said. Dearing, by means of an ink eradicator, is said to have made the records show five months' pay due when only four was owing.

Austin, Tex., June 11.—A case of typhus fever at Temple has been reported officially to the state health department.

$100,000 A YEAR COST OF BEING GATES HEIRESS

$8,500 Month Dellora Angell's Expenses.

It seems to be an expensive experience—that of being the young heiress of Mrs. John W. Gates. It has cost Miss Dellora Angell of Lake Forest approximately $8,500 a month.

In the two years ending last November $179,892 was expended on the young woman, aside from $23,568 which represented her income.

Of Age Here; Minor in N. Y.

The facts were made public in New York yesterday when Referee Charles L. Hoffman filed his report. Miss Angell is 18 years old, of legal age in Illinois. In New York, however, she is still a minor and it was necessary to appoint a guardian for her because she desired to sell the John W. Gates stables.

Upon the strength of Mr. Hoffman's report Justice Guy of the Supreme court authorized Theodore Gibbons, the guardian, to sell the property for $65,000. Mr. Gibbons said Miss Angell had traveled extensively and her expense necessarily had been heavy. Until quite recently, he said, she had been in Los Angeles.

Now Has More Than Million.

Referee Hoffman reported incidentally that Miss Angell has inherited a summer place at Tomahawk Lake, Wis., worth $13,800; a house and lot in St. Charles, Ill., valued at $6,000; personal property worth $955,000, and cash and securities aggregating $110,000.

Under the terms of her aunt's will Miss Angell will also get half the residue of the estate from which she now receives an income of $90,000 a year. Her uncle also created for her two trust funds of $100,000 each, now nearly double their original principals.

Civil Service Test for Postmaster Set for July 1

Would you like to be Chicago's postmaster at $8,000 a year? The United States civil service commission announced yesterday that an open competitive examination will be held to fill the position. The examination will be held July 1—two weeks from Friday. Education and training must net 20 points, business experience and fitness 80 points.

Santa Cruz, Cal., June 11.—Two earthquakes were felt here tonight. The first, a slight tremor, occurred at 7:24 p.m., which was followed quickly by a sharp, heavy shock. The disturbance was felt here and in other Salinas valley towns. No damage resulted.

U. S. STANDS BEHIND AMERICANS ABROAD, GEN. WOOD DECLARES

MANILA, P. I., June 11.—The time has arrived when Americans abroad will have full protection from their government, Gen. Leonard Wood asserted to 3,000 Rotarians here on his return to Manila from a trip through the islands.

"The time has come," the general said, "when centurion's caution against mistreatment of Paul—'have a care; he is a Roman'—applies to Americans abroad."

Gen. Wood declared it was a pleasure "to see you Americans overseas who preserve the highest traditions of your country."

"In the future you can depend upon a strong foreign trade policy to support you," he said. "America is determined to have a share of the world's commerce, supported by a merchant marine and an adequate navy, notwithstanding the costly delay when the world's trade was within her grasp."

'ROBBED' DOCTOR SEIZED IN AUTO INSURANCE PLOT

Dr. A. A. Hirsch, with offices at 2322 West Taylor street, was arrested last night by Capt. John Naughton and Detective Sergeants Madden and Woodrick on charges of conspiracy to defraud. On June 3 Dr. Hirsch reported to the Oak Park police he had been held up by two men and robbed of $18 and his auto, insured for $2,600. A companion, George Palmer, was robbed of $5, he said.

Yesterday the car and Hugh Tucker were picked up by the Clinton, Ia., police. They promptly wired the police in Chicago, and the latter sent back Dr. Hirsch's report. Tucker then confessed, it is said, that he had been introduced to Dr. Hirsch by Palmer and the latter had paid him $200 to burn the car, that Dr. Hirsch might collect the insurance. Palmer made a statement similar to that of Tucker. Then Hirsch confessed, the police say.

He's 81 and Lonesome, So Will Take a Bride of 83

"I'm getting married again because I'm lonesome," said Samuel H. Merritt, 81 years old, 4845 Champlain avenue, and a veteran of the civil war, after he had obtained a license yesterday to wed Louisa V. J. Vaughan, 83 years old, 2358 Indiana avenue. They are the oldest couple to apply for a license in the history of the marriage license bureau, according to Chief Clerk Louis C. Legner.

UMPIRE LANDIS CALLS BUILDING LOCKOUT 'OUT!'

Accepts as Arbiter; Work to Start.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis said "yes" last night to the proposal that he act as arbiter in the building trades' wage dispute, and the indications were that $35,000,000 worth of construction which has been tied up since May 1 will be resumed by Tuesday.

Judge Landis accepted the post of umpire, making only one condition—that the lockout be dissolved immediately and that building be started full blast early on Tuesday.

He gave his acceptance to E. M. Craig, secretary of the Building Construction Employers' association, and Thomas S. Kearney, president of the Chicago Building Trades' council, at a conference in the Chicago Beach hotel. Both Kearney and Craig assented to his one condition.

Employers' Split Not Serious.

It is believed a disagreement between the Building Construction Employers' association and the Associated Builders of Chicago concerning the conditions for ending the lockout will be adjusted, and that members of both employers' organizations will work in harmony.

Judge Landis was in Crawfordsville, Ind., when he heard he had been asked to act as umpire. He was reached over the phone by Mr. Craig, and he came to Chicago on the first train.

At 7 o'clock last night he stepped off at the Englewood station and went to his apartment at the Chicago Beach hotel. Kearney and Craig were shown up to his room and laid the situation before him.

Rush to Work, Judge Orders.

"I think we can get everything settled and the men back to work by 4 o'clock Monday," the judge said. "That is the main thing. Start the work first. It has been tied up too long. The city is suffering. The men are idle. The contractors are idle. I know you can't reach all the unions today or tomorrow, but you can have them all by Monday, can't you?"

Kearney said he represented all but one union, the bricklayers'. This union had not agreed to allow Judge Landis to decide the dispute, but Kearney believed it would fall in line with the others.

May Settle Matter Tomorrow.

"How about the trouble between the two employers' organizations?" the judge then asked.

He was told that Craig represented most of the big contractors; that William Schlake, general manager of the Associated Builders of Chicago, an organization composed of many small contractors, would be in Chicago Monday, and that there was a possibility that his organization, seeing that work was to be started at once, would cooperate.

Both sides will present their arguments to the judge during the week, the workmen telling why a 20 per cent cut in salaries is unwarranted, the employers aiming to show the reasons for a reduction because of present costs of living.

Demand Unions Oust Grafters.

The Associated Builders protested against the arbitration program, declaring much more is at stake than the breaking of the present deadlock—that the whole building industry needs the mop and the scouring brush to cleanse it of conditions which the Dailey commission is dragging to light.

They took the stand that before arbitration can be considered the unions must go housecleaning and get rid of officials under attack by the commission.

The construction employers had sent word to all members that, contrary to original impressions, work was not to be resumed tomorrow—it was to wait until the various subsidiaries of the main body had signed agreements to stand by the main body.

This would take a day or two, they figured, and the pneumatic riveter would be beating a tattoo in Chicago again by the middle of the week. But this was not soon enough for the judge, and it went by the board.

Speed in Work Essential.

"The building industry cannot afford to have this arbitration plan fall through," Mr. Craig said. "A few weeks more and the season will be absolutely spoiled. Many kindred industries depend upon a renewal of building activities, and after long argument both sides have agreed to lay the whole wage question before Judge Landis, wide open.

"What is a fair wage now is the issue he will settle, not whether $1 an

River Gives Up Kidnaped Child's Body

New York, June 11.—The body of a 7 year old boy found floating in the Hudson river today off Piermont, N. Y., was identified tonight as that of Giuseppe Varotta, kidnaped May 24 and held for ransom. The identification was made by the boy's father, Salvatore Varotta, who went to Piermont with detectives as soon as the New York police were notified.

Ransom Is Demanded.

The boy disappeared while at play before his home and his parents believed he had been lost. After the police had searched the city for two days, the child's mother received a letter demanding $2,500 for the safe return of her son. The letter threatened the child and the other members of the family with death if the money was not paid.

A woman detective posing as a cousin of Mrs. Varotta, a few days later trapped five men who came in response to a letter from the mother offering $500 for the return of her child.

Search Is Continued.

The police believed that the arrests of these five men would frighten the other into returning Giuseppe. They continued their search, aided by private detectives and prominent wealthy persons who became interested in the case, but no trace of the missing boy could be found.

The five men are now in prison awaiting trial under $25,000 bail each on indictments charging them with being implicated in the attempted extortion of money from Varotta.

May Not Be Varotta Boy.

It was suggested tonight that the kidnapers might have dressed up the body of another boy in the clothing of the Varotta lad, and that Guiseppe still lived. This was based on the report of the Piermont police, the Rockland county officials, and the undertakers that the body found on the sandbar was that of a boy at least 3 feet 8 inches tall, whereas the height of the missing Varotta boy was given by the father and all the official police records as being only 3 feet. The Varotta boy was described as being diminutive but well formed.

STUDENTS REBEL AS OLD CUSTOMS ARE ABOLISHED

Madison, Wis., June 11.—Hundreds of University of Wisconsin undergraduates, gathered in a general massmeeting here tonight, condemned the recent action of their student senate in abolishing what were declared to be undergraduate traditions of more than half a century's standing.

The undergraduates shouted their approval of a resolution to override the action of their representatives and to take the enforcement of freshmen rules into their own hands through a committee composed of twenty-five class leaders and athletes.

Resentment of the last week against the move of the student senate in ordering that the wearing of green caps by freshmen, the class rush between freshmen and sophomores, together with cap night, be done away with, culminated in tonight's meeting.

HITS 'LOAFERS' OF FORCE IN BIG SHAKEUP

Three 'Workers' Are Made Captains.

Fifty-five Chicago policemen were ousted from their jobs last night in one of the most drastic disciplinary orders ever issued to the department. Eight were sergeants, forty-seven were patrolmen.

Three lieutenants were promoted to the rank of captain by Chief Fitzmorris. Five patrolmen were either advanced or awarded extra compensation.

The automobile section of the motor division was cut in half and nine officers were transferred to other departments.

Other Officials Fear Ousting.

The shakeup mandate was issued late yesterday afternoon. It is the chief's first big gun salvo since he issued his final warning six weeks ago.

The chief intimated another order may follow. He asserted some officers—captains and lieutenants—have not been working. He said he would fire an officer sooner than he would a patrolman.

The fifty-five men technically were suspended. But according to Fitzmorris it means they are "fired," and the civil service commission has recently shown a disposition to sustain his disciplinary mandates. The charges are loafing, spending time in theaters or saloons, riding on street cars between patrol boxes, and the like.

"Chicago Coppers Must Work.

"The offenses these men committed were bad, of course," a veteran policeman said, "but they did nothing that would have caused their discharge in the old days. It just shows that Chicago coppers must go to work. They can't stall a minute—if they do it's their job, that's lost."

A few typical instances of the charges are given below:

On May 5 Patrolman James J. Connelly was drinking in a saloon at 43d and State streets. The following night he was there again. On May 8 he took a bottle from a "drunk," and, after sampling the contents, sent the "drunk away and kept the bottle.

This Cop a Movie Fan.

On April 27 Patrolman Peter M. Mallon entered the Archer theater at 7:55 p. m. and remained for twenty minutes. Later he went to a saloon, and, on leaving the place, boarded a street car. On April 29 he spent forty-five minutes in the Archer theater. On May 2 he spent thirty-five minutes in the same theater. On May 11 he spent over an hour and a half in the movie.

On May 22 Patrolmen Fred J. Hlavaty and Anton Calek made a "pull" at Kedzie avenue and 22d street, then loafed at the box for an hour and five minutes.

On May 28 Patrolman Dominick Mullaney was in Shields' saloon drinking with three men. They were singing, cracking jokes, and were intoxicated.

Saloon and Poolroom Habitue.

On May 11 Patrolman John W. Walsh entered a saloon at 3814 West Roosevelt road, smoked his pipe, and drank three glasses of beer, for which he did not pay. He left the saloon and entered a poolroom, where he remained until midnight.

On May 2 Patrolman Helge Huitgna visited the Verdi theater. Later he visited the Archer movie. On May 6 and 17 he visited the Archer movie.

On May 27 Patrolman Michael A. Murphy sat in a doorway talking with a woman for thirty minutes. Later he went into Swift's saloon and played cards.

On May 4 Patrolman F. M. McNerney stopped in a barber shop at 2154 Larrabee street for a shave. He read a paper in the shop and later visited for fifty minutes with some firemen at a fire station.

Drinks in Drug Store.

On May 24 Patrolman Martin T. Laffery got a drink in a drug store at 400 West 63d street. He stayed until the store closed and then staggered down the street.

The suspension order grew in ferocity as the word of it traveled the grape vine system of the department. The whispers said, "Get out on the street and work," "stay out of the holes," "get going."

A drink in a friendly saloon, a visit to the movie on the beat, a few minutes' loaf in a drug store means "suspension," and suspension means "fired."

But the order revealed that the chief could reward as well as punish.

Hughes Called "Best Policeman."

Chief of Detectives Michael B. Hughes, who police rank was lieutenant, was made a captain and called "the best policeman in the world." Lieutenants Martin E. Mullen and John J. Naughton were also made captains.

Sergt. John A. Egan of the detective bureau, was given an extra compensation of $300 per year. Patrolmen Michael McFadden and James A. McCarthy were made temporary sergeants. Patrolman Edward Kennelly, third grade, was raised to second grade. Probationary Patrolman Arthur Murphy of the seventeenth precinct, was made a second class patrolman.

The three lieutenants promoted stood highest on the eligibility lists of the civil service commission. Their order as issued by the commission was: Naughton, 90.30; Hughes, 88.14, and Mullen, 88.11. Chief Fitzmorris marked them for efficiency in the following manner: Hughes, 100; Naughton, 97, and Mullin, 97. Because they stood highest and because "they were working," the chief placed their names opposite the three captaincy vacancies.

"They Worked," Chief Says.

The other five men were rewarded "in recognition of meritorious work rendered in apprehending four men in an automobile, who acted suspiciously, and when told to halt attempted to shoot the officers, who returned the fire and arrested the men after one had been wounded."

"These men worked," said the chief. "Mike Hughes is the best policeman in the world. He's brainy, he knows crime, and how to solve and prevent it. But the biggest reason he's a good copper is because he works. It is the same with the others I have promoted."

Chicago is now the only city in the country where crime is on the decrease, according to the chief.

"The reason is simple," he said. "The police are working. I am rewarding those who work and firing those who won't work. The system is successful.

Ousted Men Warned Three Times.

"Every man on that suspension list was warned three times. He disregarded the warning. He wouldn't go to work. I won't have loafers on the police force. I'll get a better job for every man who delivers, but the loafers must get out."

The work of investigating the police department commenced on May 1. The investigation was directed by First Deputy John H. Alcock, and was conducted by Capt. P. R. Crippon, department inspector.

"We have not 'piperized' the department" said the chief. "We just hired a special force of investigators. We want every patrolman to do $2,000 worth of work, and to receive that pay. The investigators found out what they were doing. Recommendations were made by Capt. Crippen to the first deputy and I have suspended every one so recommended.

"Working to Keep Down Crime."

"We're all working to keep down crime. That's what the mayor wants. He is with me to the limit, and the police department is going to deliver—or we'll get a whole new department. Right now the department is in better condition than it has been since its organization in 1837."

The cutting up of the auto detail caused a stir in the detective bureau. The new system of recovering and preventing the stealing of automobiles will take effect on June 13. After that day every garage in the city will register automobiles in the same manner hotels register guests. Each precinct will watch the automobiles in its territory.

VIERECK, MACH, ATTACK HOOVER ON CHILD RELIEF

Claim He Refuses Aid to Germans.

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Herbert Hoover is bitterly attacked by George Sylvester Viereck and Edmund von Mach in the June issue of the American Monthly, formerly the Fatherland.

Von Mach in a signed article charges that Mr. Hoover pledged himself to devote to Germany one-third of the $33,000,000 raised by the European relief council to feed starving European children, and that, after gaining the support of German-Americans in his campaign, he has violated the pledge.

Charges Letter Misled.

A special "American relief committee for German children" was formed, with A. Barton Hepburn as chairman, to coöperate with the European relief council in the drive, it is charged. This committee, under the signature of Mr. Hepburn, sent out a letter containing, it is alleged, the statement:

"We have Mr. Hoover's authority for assuring you that one-third of the sum collected will be devoted to the relief of children in Germany." Mr. Hoover never challenged this pledge, it is asserted, and by means of it obtained wide support from German-Americans. It is suggested the public prejudice against anything German led Mr. Hoover to turn the money elsewhere.

"Whether the charge is true that Hoover has deposited the entire fund with J. P. Morgan & Co. and is holding it to loan eventually on bonds to Czecho-Slovakia, Serbia, and Poland the writer does not know," Von Mach writes, "but no thinking man will deny that something is wrong."

Demands Hoover Resign.

The Von Mach article is supported by an editorial by Viereck, in which he calls upon Hoover to answer Von Mach's questions, or "resign forthwith, and slink into obscurity, well deserved."

"We have hesitated long before making public the facts in the case," Viereck writes. "We were persuaded partly by the political situation and partly by the tearful requests of well meaning philanthropists, who assured us that Mr. Hoover was so vindictive he would make the children of Germany suffer if we published the truth.

"We also were warned of the flood of abuse which Mr. Hoover's well oiled publicity machine would spew forth upon us, both here and abroad."

U.S. JOINS DRIVE ON BIG GRAFT IN BUILDING TRADES

20 Firms Capitalized at Two Billions Hit.

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Plans for a vigorous prosecution of twenty nation-wide combines in the building trades, capitalized at approximately $2,000,000,000, were discussed today by Samuel Untermyer, senior counsel to the Lockwood committee, and Col. William Hayward, United States district attorney.

The conference followed the announcement of Attorney General Daugherty that he had ordered Hayward to coöperate with the Lockwood committee.

Mr. Untermyer spent several hours in outlining for Hayward's benedit the scope of the Lockwood inquiry.

Gives Hayward Inquiry Facts.

Mr. Untermyer summed up the committee's findings in the cases of the National Erectors' association, the Iron Erectors' league, the Association of Steel Fabricators, the paint combination, the so-called linseed oil "trust," the Tile, Grate and Mantel association, and others.

"Mr. Untermyer and I are agreed on the complex nature of the task," Hayward said. "We realize that before these cases can be prepared for presentation to the proper authorities an immense amount of work on the part of lawyers and skilled investigators will be necessary.

Sees an Appropriation.

"Mr. Untermyer gave me an excellent idea of the scope of the work and has promised to furnish me in a day or two with a written digest of the committee's proceedings.

"As soon as the abstract comes I shall clear the decks and give it my immediate attention. Then I will make a recommendation to Mr. Daugherty. It seems clear that a special appropriation for the work will be necessary."

Dog Stuffers of Coney Won't Stuff—No Dogs!

New York, June 11.—Coney Island today faced labor troubles that may cause the thousands that flock to the great playground to go hungry during their visit. The cry of many venders of "hot dogs" may not resound tomorrow, for members of the Sausage Stuffers' union have decided that they will stuff sausage eight hours a day and no longer, while the employers insist they should work ten at reduced wages.

BUILDING TRADE UNIONS FORCE CARPENTERS OUT

Rejected Jurisdictional Decisions.

Denver, Colo., June 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—The suspension of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners—the largest building trades union in the country—from the building trades department will not affect its affiliation in the American Federation of Labor.

This announcement was made tonight by officials of the federation, to set at rest reports that the action of the carpenters' union in withdrawing today from the department's convention would also automatically result in its suspension from the federation.

The withdrawal of the carpenters' union from the meeting, followed the adoption of a resolution providing for the suspension of any international union that failed to obey the decisions of the national board of jurisdictional awards, which was established to prevent by arbitration the tying up of the building industry by jurisdiction strikes. The resolution was designed to meet a situation created by the refusal of the carpenters' union to comply with a decision of the board.

Debate Is Stormy.

The debate of the convention was long and stormy, President William L. Hutcheson of the carpenters' union leading the fight against the board, declaring that it was not representative and had not given his organization a "square deal." He was opposed by William Bowen, president of the International Union of Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers, who declared the board had saved the builders of the country millions of dollars and had been a great factor in stabilizing the building industry.

When the roll call revealed that the motion had been carried by a vote of 35 to 25 President Hutcheson led his delegation out of the auditorium, declaring that they could not comply with the board's decision because they were instructed by the national convention of their membership not to do so.

Action Saddens Gompers.

President Samuel Gompers of the federation was an interested spectator, but took no part in the debate. In an address to the convention later he deplored its action and said:

"Nothing sadder has come to my attention in a considerable time than what I have witnessed today. I am deeply and profoundly sorry."

"We consider ourselves suspended," said President Hutcheson of the carpenters. "I have ordered the payment of our per capita tax to the department stopped.

"I don't know what the American Federation of Labor will do about this, if anything. We will go along as usual in the organized labor movement."

May Call Peace Meeting.

President John Donlin of the department said that an attempt would be made to have the executive council of the department meet with the carpenters and attempt to get their promise to obey the board's decisions.

"If we fail in this, of course, we must suspend the union," he added. "They have not been suspended yet."

The department adopted a resolution authorizing the executive council to investigate the possibility of establishing a national building material supply company, and report back to the next convention.

President Donlin and Secretary William Spencer of the department were reelected to office.

John J. Lewis, president of the United Mine workers, who has been mentioned as a candidate to oppose Samuel Gompers for the presidency of the federation, declined to make any statement upon his arrival here today.

MRS. KABER, IN CELL, STARTS ON HUNGER STRIKE

With Girl, Pleads Not Guilty; Trial June 28.

Cleveland, O., June 11.—A venire of sixty names to form a jury to try Mrs. Eva Catherine Kaber and her daughter, Marian McArdle, for the murder of Mrs. Kaber's husband, Daniel F., two years ago, was issued late today after the two prisoners were arraigned before Judge Maurice Bernon this morning and pleaded not guilty to first degree murder charges.

Their hearing was set for June 28. They were refused bond, and then were taken to jail.

Since her arival here from New York late last night the accused woman and her daughter have eaten but a few spoonsful of bread and milk, and this under protest.

Refuses to Touch Food.

Mrs. Kaber refused to touch the tempting breakfast and luncheon served in her cell today, declaring she "would not eat."

Mrs. Kaber's refusal to eat is looked upon with concern by Sheriff Stannard because of her weakened condition caused by loss of blood in her attempted suicide in the New York jail.

A new arrest was made today. A man said to have introduced Mrs. Kaber to the woman arrested in Sandusky, O., several days ago, a midwife, alleged to have furnished poison said to have been administered to Kaber in his food, was arrested in his home here and, following a severe grilling of the suspect late today, detectives predicted the actual assassins would be arrested soon.

Mrs. Kaber and her daughter both identified the midwife now in custody as having made a poison portion for Mrs. Kaber, to be fed to Kaber, and charged she also aided in procuring the assassins who murdered him, police declared.

Woman Fights Back.

The midwife struck back at Mrs. Kaber almost before the identification was completed, charging her accuser with "wanting your husband, Dan Kaber, put out of the way."

Seven persons, five women and two men, are now in custody for complicity in the murder. They are:

Mrs. Kaber, indicted on two counts of first degree murder, one for poisoning and a second for stabbing her husband to death.

Marian McArdle, her daughter, also under indictment for murder.

Mrs. Mary Brickel, mother of Mrs. Kaber and grandmother of Marian McArdle, indicted for murder, following her confession of the part she took in the murder plot. Mrs. Brickel was removed from county jail today to a detention home, after being unable to obtain $5,000 bond.

Where Plot Went Amiss.

A midwife, arrested in Sandusky, O., several days ago, who, Mrs. Kaber charged, prepared the poison potion fed Kaber and procured the assassins who were "to beat him up," but killed him instead.

A woman friend of Mrs. Kaber, alleged to have fed one dose of poison to Kaber and to have introduced Mrs. Kaber to the midwife.

"The man with the cap," so called from Kaber's dying statement describing his murderer, was held as a suspect for several days, but is now regarded as probably having no part in the crime because of the failure of Mrs. Kaber or Miss McArdley to identify him today.

A man was arrested today under suspicion of having acted as the go-between in planning the stabbing.

IT'S UMPIRE LANDIS NOW

THOMAS S. KEARNEY, JUDGE K. M. LANDIS, AND EDWARD M. CRAIG.

Judge Landis last night accepted the job as wage arbiter in the building war. First the judge made Secretary Craig of the employers' association and Secretary Kearney for the unions promise the lockout would be called off immediately and building resumed in full blast by Tuesday morning. "Get the men back to work right now," was the judge's order [TRIBUNE Photo.]

UMPIRE LANDIS CALLS BUILDING LOCKOUT "OUT"

Accepts as Arbiter; Work to Start.

hour or $1.25 or some point between is the proper spot—the whole field is opened."

The split between the two big associations of builders arose early in the day, and it was accompanied by much explosive utterance. The Associated builders did not join the Construction Employers' association last week in withdrawing the original offer of $1 an hour for skilled and 70 cents for common labor. It accused the employers' association of a breach of faith in signing up the arbitration articles, stating that the understanding was that both organizations of builders should act in conjunction.

"What sort of arbitration is this?" said William McKinley, counsel for the Associated builders. "As we view it, the future of the building industry is the thing at stake, not the mere settlement of the present tieup. If we thought it was simply a matter of breaking the present tieup we could have settled weeks ago on a basis of $1 plus 1 or 2 cents an hour, just enough to save the faces of the union officials.

Demands Thorough Housecleaning.

"As we view it, the great concern is that of cleaning up the building industry of the black spots which are being shown up by the Dailey commission. What good is it to arbitrate until the public has some guarantee that the crookedness which has cursed building and which the Dailey committee is exposing is wiped out?

"Let the unions start housecleaning. Let's have a housecleaning for the entire industry—that's got to be the starting point.

"Without this, arbitration is camouflage. How much building would be resumed if wages were set at $1 an hour, but existing conditions, the levying of tribute and other crooked things, were not remedied? First and most important, the industry must rid itself of this incubus of grafting before the confidence of the building public will revive."

Wait Drop of Other Costs.

While some $35,000,000 worth of building actually under construction will start, builders are quite skeptical as to how much of the $100,000,000 worth of buildings projected, but not commenced, will be taken off the shelf.

The general feeling is that while a wage cut would start up some new building, the bulk of the pigeonholed projects will depend upon reductions in the costs of building materials.

INDIANA DEFENDS TRIAL OF CHILD IN MURDER CASE

Indianapolis, Ind., June 11.—Attorney General U. H. Lesh today made public a letter to Gov. McCray, defending the action of the state in trying Cecil Burkett, 11, for the murder of his playmate, Bennie Slaven, 7, in the Starke Circuit court.

Lesh's letter replied to criticism from Ohio officials, who were quoted as saying the trial of an 11 year old boy for murder was unthinkable.

"Manifestly the courts and the prosecuting attorneys do not consult the laws of Ohio for guidance in proceedings in this state, especially where our own laws clearly provide the mode of procedure in a given case," the letter said.

The jury of the Burkett case disagreed, but prosecutors have announced they will seek a new trial in October.

DOMINION HEADS REACH ENGLAND FOR CONFERENCE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON June 11.—Jan Smuts, the prime minister of South Africa, who will be the dominant figure at the imperial conference which will hold its first meeting at 10 Downing street next Thursday, arrived in London today and left immediately for Chequers, where he will be the guest of Prime Minister Lloyd George over the week-end. All the premiers of the dominions, except Canada, have arrived.

Prime Minister Smuts, besides being regarded as the empire's greatest statesman, occupies a commanding position in regard to the two great questions to be discussed by the conference—the Anglo-Japanese alliance and Ireland—because he is neutral on both.

NORTH IRELAND ELECTS SENATE, SOUTH SILENT

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BELFAST, June 11.—Sinn Feiners and Nationalists in the north of Ireland ignored the election of members to the senate of the Ulster parliament today. Unionists first nominated eighteen candidates for the positions, and later, as the Sinn Feiners failed to take advantage of their right to nominate six, they added six more, making up the requisite number. All nominated were declared to be elected.

The senators include Lord Pirrie, the Duke of Abercorn, the Marquis of Londonderry, the Marquis of Dufferin, Viscount Bangor and Viscount Massereens.

FOREIGN MINERS AND BOSS FORCED TO QUIT TOWNS

Princeton (Ind.) Vigilantes Run Illinoisans Out.

Princeton, Ind., June 11.—A modern Ku Klux Klan laid down its law in Gibson and Pike counties last night and today.

By driving the foreign element and workers imported from Illinois from the bituminous coal fields here, the members revealed the existence of an organization formed to gain its ends through the effectiveness of motor mobs.

County and city authorities, still recovering tonight from the surprise of the moonlit raids on Francisco, Oakland City, Petersburg, and Hosmer, declared that between 800 and 1,000 coal miners who composed the raiding parties make up the organization.

They are led by a former structural iron worker, a member of the Industrial Workers of the World, it is said, who forbade his cohorts to swear in the presence of women.

Confusing Reports on Raid.

There were conflicting reports of how the band forced the foreign element and Americans whom they termed "undesirables" to flee their homes. Some say they operated with systematic orderliness, the victims being frightened away, while other reports have it that some looting was done at Oakland City.

One man, Simon Crevar, was struck on the ankle by a club when he tried to prevent the raiders from entering his house.

Apparently there was no effort here tonight to catch the leaders, because authorities said they have no clew on which to work. Officials of the United Mine Workers of America said they knew nothing of the organization or of its plans. All of the American miners who were brought into this territory from southern Illinois carried union card.

Get Jobs for Native Sons.

First, the motor mob—they ride in automobiles—swooped down on Petersburg Thursday night. There they demanded that mine owners divide the work evenly among the miners to eliminate some unemployment instead of letting eighteen men do all the work. This was accomplished.

From Petersburg the shirt sleeve raiders drove to Hosmer, a village nearby, where ten nonunion miners were employed. These men were "let out" of employment.

Then last night crowds began to gather at Francisco shortly after dusk. Later they were joined by the others, who came quietly into the city in automobiles.

Run Mine Boss Away.

Supt. W. E. Cox of the Ayreshire Collieries company was called out on his porch. He refused to negotiate with the mob. A committee of five asked him why he had brought in "the undesirables." What took place then is not known, but Cox and his family had also left before Sheriff Fowler arrived.

After Francisco, the raiders visited Oakland City and more than 100 Austrians and Hungarians leaped out of bed and fled, terror stricken. The foreigners were not miners, but were laying railroad track from the Southern railroad station there to the strip mine of the George A. Enos Coal company of Cleveland, preparatory to starting operations at the mines.

Mine officials tonight said they would appeal to Gov. McCray if county officials could not furnish protection.

PRICE OF CIGAR WILL SAVE LIFE OF CHICAGO BABY

Free Ice and Camp Funds Now Open.

Twenty-five cents will buy a good cigar for a man who can smoke a cheaper brand or it will buy fifty pounds of ice for a tenement baby WHO MAY DIE WITHOUT IT.

Will you give two bits for a baby's life?

Will you give a dollar—or five or ten—so that baby's mother may spend two weeks in a wonderful camp on the banks of the Fox river, enjoying fresh air, evening breezes, good food, healthful exercises—have a bit of joy time amid the drab of life.

The TRIBUNE'S Free Ice Fund for 1921 is open to you!

The fund for the TRIBUNE Camp for Convalescent Mothers at Algonquin is open to you, too. You did your bit last year—aren't you going to do so again?

Chicagoans interested in the welfare of tenement babies and their work worn mothers have already had a taste of what the ensuing summer will be like in the way of heat. Both the ice fund and Camp Algonquin will be called on for service more extensively than ever this year. Destitute families have increased by the score since last summer and it is up to the ice fund and the Algonquin camp and hospital to be on the job.

On the Job the Year 'Round.

THE TRIBUNE Free Ice fund has supplied ice to thirty-two day nurseries in Chicago 365 days of the year. Distribution of ice to poor families with babies will begin for the season on June 15. THE TRIBUNE has arranged to obtain ice at wholesale rates, as in the past, but even at that the cost of the work is not small. The price has increased $1 a ton over last year and this means that friends of the fund will have to be a bit more generous.

The fund provided free ice to 3,878 poor families last summer, in order that the milk for the babies might be kept fresh and free from bacteria. This benevolence was paid for by readers of THE TRIBUNE who have the interest of helpless babies at heart to the extent of several thousands of dollars.

Camp Will Open June 13.

Now comes THE TRIBUNE hospital and camp at Algonquin, on the banks of the Fox river. The camp will open for the first 100 convalescent mothers and their children on June 13. And what is more, the children will have the best director of play to be found in the central states—Allen R. Carpenter, for some time play director at Hull House. He will also be the new superintendent of the camp, replacing Mrs. Laura J. Collar, who has resigned to take up work in the home service department of the Red Cross.

The camp will be enjoyed by groups of mothers and their youngsters throughout the summer and the month of September in periods of two weeks each. Last year 1,610 convalescing mothers and their children were cared for at the camp. For this work $9,062.07 was subscribed. Readers gave $5,204.08 and $3,857.99 was donated by THE TRIBUNE.

Results achieved at the camp last year can readily be seen from the statistics concerning the children who came there undernourished and underweight. Of 109 underweight children ninety-eight gained their normal weight while at the camp.

Here Are the First 1921 Givers.

The first ice fund helpers to get into action this year are Clarice and Richard Golden, Irving avenue and Lake street. They can be seen any hot day after school or on Saturdays in front of the Charles Bridoux Machine company, 160 North Irving avenue, giving away drinks of ice water. They have a sign informing those who accept their kindness that any money left with them will be donated the Free Ice fund.

You know what it means to a baby to have cool, fresh milk. You know how a tenement mother with a baby can be rejuvenated at Algonquin. It costs $100 to keep ten mothers and their children at the camp for two weeks. You can send two mothers there for two weeks for $20. It costs only $10 to give a worn out mother a two weeks' vacation. So let's go!

Contributions for the ice fund, the Algonquin fund or both should be sent to the cashier CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

LADY RANDOLPH CHURCHILL

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, June 11.—Lady Randolph Churchill, former Jennie Jerome of New York, the mother of Winston Churchill, has had her right foot amputated as a result of an accident two weeks ago, when she slipped on a stair and fractured her ankle in two places. Lady Randolph, who is 67 years old stood the operation well.

GIRL, 7, HORRIBLY MURDERED; HUNT BLACK IN JERSEY

Moorestown, N. J., June 11.—The body of Matilda Russo, missing since last Saturday evening, was found today buried in the cellar of a Negro's shack fifty yards from her home. The child had been stripped of clothing and the throat and abdomen deeply cut or hacked. She was the daughter of Michael Russo, a tailor. A physician today said she had not been attacked.

Police of Burlington and Camden counties tonight are seeking Lewis Lively, 35, Negro, in whose cellar the mutilated body was found. The crime was discovered yesterday and kept secret in hope of capturing the Negro and for fear that if it became known summary vengeance might descend upon him.

Lively's wife and a Negro boy he adopted are being held. They could give no explanation of the disappearance of Lively.

The charge resulted from an automobile party taken by the girls, Young, and other Muncie youths.

PARIS, June 11.—The world's greatest orgy, the Four Arts ball, came to an end this afternoon when Latin quarter students slowly sobered up on beer in Montparnasse cafes after spending the night at the Luna park skating rink, where the ball was held.

Old timers who attended Four Arts balls before the war, said no such revels as last night's affair had ever occurred in Paris. And at dawn women took off their clothes and joined a procession of unclad models and student painters, sculptors, doctors, and architects who were parading around the hall.

Tourists Are Barred.

The artists, who commercialized their wild time, exercised the greatest care to bar tourists, permitting only bona fide students to enter. There was great difficulty in obtaining tickets, and yet more than 500,000 francs was realized. Every one was required to be garbed in Carthaginian style.

On entering a committee asked every one what atelier he was a member of and who his professors and instructors were and he was made to describe them. Many failed to answer questions satisfactorily and were turned away.

Inside, while a forty piece orchestra blared American song hits, scanty clad or unclad men and women danced the shimmy, performed grotesque rites, and drank champagne from bottles while posed in daring attitudes.

With the Carthaginian robes the revellers had no pockets in which to carry their cigarets and money. Most carried their bank rolls in their sandals and, lining up to the bar, the men took off their slippers, laid them on the bar, bought drinks, counted out the money from the sandals, made change and then laced their footgear back in place.

Cocaine Is Popular.

Cocaine and other drugs were used freely and groups of men could be seen carrying out women who had fainted through overindulgence of alcohol or cocaine.

Beginning at 11 o'clock at night the ball lasted until 9 this morning, when a thousand unclad survivors of the bacchanalian revel marched out down the Champs Elysees.

MINNEAPOLIS DEDICATES DRIVE TO WAR HEROES

Minneapolis, Minn., June 11.—Victory Memorial drive, a new Minneapolis thoroughfare, was dedicated this afternoon to Minneapolis and Hennepin county's 555 men who died in the world war. Representatives of allied nations, the state, the city and 25,000 citizens joined in a parade and ceremonies, which included decoration of 555 elm trees along the drive, planted in memory to the dead. Nine airplanes flew overhead, dropping flowers.

Col. F. W. Galbraith, late commander of the American Legion, who was killed at Indianapolis Thursday, was to have been the principal speaker. A vacant chair, on which a wreath had been placed, marked the place reserved for him on the speakers' stand.

PORTER PLAN TO END WAR WINS IN HOUSE TEST VOTE

'Knox Move Hints U. S. Is Ashamed of Fighting'

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Adoption of the Porter peace resolution by the house Monday was clearly foreshadowed today when on a test of strength supporters of the measure won by a vote of 208 to 105.

Indications are that the majority will be even larger. Some Democratic congressmen who voted in the negative are expected to support the resolution on the final roll call.

The test came on a rule to close all debate and bring the Porter resolution to a vote at 4:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. The vote was along party lines with only five exceptions; two Republicans, Beck and John M. Nelson of Wisconsin voted against the rule, and three Democrats, Favrot and Martin of Louisiana and Lankford of Georgia voted in favor of it.

Firm Against Knox Plan.

Under the provisions of the rule no amendments will be in order. This means that the house is determined to stand pat on the Porter resolution and insist on the scrapping of the Knox resolution, which the senate passed six weeks ago today by a large majority.

The consequence of this will be interminable controversy between the two houses while the nation continues in a technical state of war with Germany.

Only direct intervention by the President could bring about prompt settlement of the dispute, it is believed, and reports have been in circulation at the capitol for some time that certain powerful influences in the administration are quite content to have the resolution remain in a state of suspense for a while longer.

Explains Long Delay.

In opening the debate on the resolution today, Representative Porter of Pennsylvania, chairman of the foreign affairs committee, explained the reasons for the long delay in bringing the measure before the house.

"It may not be out of place," he said, "to call attention to the fact that when the peace resolution reached the house the allies had invaded Germany for the enforcement of the adjustment of the reparations, and your committee decided that it should forego action until Germany had conceded the demands of the allies and had shown her good faith by the payment of the earnest money in the form of the first installment of the indemnity.

"We have given the allies the traditional American 'square deal,' and now we intend to put our house in order."

Not Ashamed of War.

Mr. Porter sharply criticized the language of the Knox resolution which repeals the declaration of war against Germany, while the Porter resolution merely declares a state of peace.

"I doubt whether there is a precedent in world history where a victorious nation repealed a declaration of war," he said. "We are without precedent to guide us, and it would be a rash mind indeed that would attempt to foresee its results. Moreover, the repeal would raise an inference that we had disavowed our justification for entering the war, and the annulment of it might be construed as a mild apology for our participation therein."

Democratic members, notably Representative Linthicum of Maryland, wanted to know when Mr. Porter discovered that the Knox resolution was so bad, the record showing Mr. Porter had twice voted for the Knox resolution last year.

Sees Bergdoll Pleased.

Representative Pou of North Carolina, Democrat, declared that "Bergdoll will hail the adoption of the resolution with delight."

Representative Campbell of Kansas, Republican, said the resolution was made necessary by the "dismal and lamentable failure of President Wilson to make peace."

"How about the failure to make peace during the past three months?" asked Representative Garrett of Tennessee.

"We've been busy cleaning up the most colossal waste and extravagance in the history of the nation," Mr. Campbell said.

GEN. FOREMAN BEGINS JOURNEY BACK TO HEALTH

Indianapolis, Ind., June 11.—Milton J. Foreman of Chicago, who was injured in the automobile accident in which F. W. Galbraith Jr., national commander of the American Legion, was killed, was able to sit up in bed for a few minutes this morning, it was said at the hospital.

First reports were that Gen. Foreman had sustained a fractured skull, but Dr. Edmund D. Clark today declared there was no fracture and that Mr. Foreman would soon recover.

Henry Ryan, chairman of the Americanism commission of the legion, who was driving the car at the time of the accident, has sufficiently recovered from the shock to be removed to his home here.

U. S. AND FRANCE LAY WREATHS ON GALBRAITH BIER

Funeral at Cincinnati of Legion Leader.

Cincinnati, O., June 11.—Thousands of persons from all walks of life this afternoon paid their last tribute to Col. Frederick W. Galbraith, national commander of the American Legion, who lost his life last Thursday morning in an automobile accident in Indianapolis.

The funeral services were held in Music hall under the auspices of the American Legion and were marked by simplicity. Brief addresses were delivered by the Rev. John Herget, chaplain of the 147th Infantry, which was commanded by Col. Galbraith in France; the Rev. Frederick McMillin, also an overseas chaplain; Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy; former Congressman Victor Heintz of Ohio, who was a captain under Galbraith; Col. Franklin D'Olier, and Marcel Knecht, director of the French information service in the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt's Tribute.

Mr. Roosevelt said: "In the great civic movements in our cities, as well as on the shell-torn battlefields of France, where service could be rendered there you found Col. Galbraith, at the forefront of battle. We mourn his death, but we are proud of his life. We shall miss him in the troubled days that lie before us, but our faith in our country is strengthened in that it can breed such men. Good citizen, tender husband and father, valiant soldier, splendid idealist—his death has left us poorer, but his life has left us richer. His pilgrimage is gloriously finished."

Col. D'Olier said: "The service man, and especially the disabled man, has lost his best friend; this city, this state, and this nation has lost one of its most useful citizens."

Gets Legion of Honor.

Capt. de Levergne, air attaché of the French embassy, posthumously conferred upon Col. Galbraith the grand cross of the Legion of Honor by direction of the president of France. In his brief address he referred to Col. Galbraith as a "hero and a great citizen."

The choir of the Calvary Episcopal church sang "Lead, Kindly Light," "Hark, Hark, My Soul," and two stanzas of "America."

At the conclusion of the military services the Scottish Rite conducted its impressive burial ceremonial. The body then was borne through the city streets on a gun carriage, followed by the largest military cortege seen in Cincinnati since the burial of Gen. Joseph J. Hooker.

The body was placed in a vault in Spring Grove cemetery, preparatory to interment in the Arlington cemetery in Washington.

France Sends Floral Tribute.

One floral offering among the hundreds attracted much attention. It consisted of palms bound with the tricolor of France. It was the tribute of the citizens of Chateau Thierry. Accompanying the piece was a card bearing the inscription: "To one of our bravest liberators."

Other floral pieces, orders for which were cabled from France, were from the Federation of French War Veterans and "Grateful Alsace-Lorraine."

Honor Col. Galbraith

Eleven shots were fired on the lake front yesterday in honor of Col. Frederick W. Galbraith, late commander of the American Legion, who was killed in an automobile accident Wednesday in Indianapolis. The shots were fired by a squad of the First field artillery, I. N. G., under the command of Col. Frank Schwengel. The gun used was one of those rushed to Col. Galbraith when, during the Argonne forest battle, he sent word to his commanding officers for more artillery.

GALBRAITH TREE TO KEEP HERO'S MEMORY GREEN

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Steps were taken here today by the American Forestry association to coöperate with the American Legion in planting memorial trees for Col. F. W. Galbraith, Jr., Legion commander who was killed in an automobile accident near Indianapolis.

"One of the last things Col. Galbraith did," said Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the association today, "was to plant memorial trees at the intersection of the Dixie and National highways at Vandalia, Ohio, near Dayton. The association has what is perhaps the last picture of the commander ever taken."

Battle of St. Mihiel to Be Re-enacted in Grant Park

A reproduction of the battle of St. Mihiel will be staged in Grant park at Van Buren street July 2, 3, and 4 by Sol-Sal-Mar post No. 228 of the American Legion. The proceeds will go to the service department of the Legion and to a post fund from which unfortunate soldiers can obtain aid.

SOLDIER'S WIFE MAY BE NAMED NEXT BY "FIFI"

Subpœna Servers Give Up Siege.

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—A woman known in society and wife of a man who saw service as an army officer overseas was reported likely to be named by Mrs. "Fifi" Stillman, defendant in the Stillman divorce action, according to information obtained today from persons associated with her defense.

John F. Brennan, Mrs. Stillman's chief counsel, would not confirm the report, but denied that any information definite enough to warrant such action had been obtained.

Subpœna Servers Quit.

Charles Wallace of Mr. Brennan's office, who, with two private detectives, had been watching the apartment of Mrs. Fannie Glidden at 507 West 184th street for the last two days in the hope of serving her with a subpœna to testify concerning Mrs. Florence H. Leeds, abandoned the attempt today. Although the beleaguering forces had been withdrawn, Mrs. Glidden apparently did not know it, for she remained barricaded in her apartment.

According to tenants and a former janitress, Mrs. Leeds visited Mrs. Glidden frequently at the West 184th street apartment, sometimes leaving her child, Jay Ward Leeds, with Mrs. Glidden for a day or two.

"Baby Guy" Angers Mrs. Leeds.

One of the women living in an adjoining apartment told a reporter that Mrs. Glidden told her Mrs. Leeds became very angry when she learned that a son had been born to Mrs. Stillman and began to press Mr. Stillman to get a divorce. Mrs. Glidden was reported to have said that Mrs. Leeds was anxious to legitimize her own son.

A former janitress of the apartment house said she could identify the man known as "Mr. Leeds," who visited Mrs. Glidden's apartment several times, as James A. Stillman.

Persons in the apartment house said that George Pasco, son of Mrs. Glidden and said to have been formerly employed as a clerk in the National City bank, acted as godfather at the baptism of Jay Ward Leeds. It was said that Mrs. Glidden told of this and said Mrs. Leeds had given Pasco a gold watch worth $100.

ACCIDENT FOLLOWS ACCIDENT.

Herrin, Ill., June 11.—Cash Perrine, superintendent of the Herrin waterworks, was killed and Fire Chief A. B. Luder, Mine Manager Rowe Wright and Harry Williams were injured when an auto in which they were returning from Marion skidded and overturned last night. Wright crawled from under the car and tried to flag a machine, but the driver put on speed and ran over him, breaking a leg.

STATE LAWYERS ASK PROTECTION OF HIGH COURT

Protest Change in Time of Judicial Election.

Dixon, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—What is considered an effort of the Chicago city hall machine to prevent popular defense of the bench against political raids such as was attempted in Cook county last Monday brought quick response today from the Illinois Bar association in its annual meeting here.

On Friday members of the association from Cook county passed an emphatic resolution against a bill introduced by State Senator Robert W. Schulze, a city hall follower, which already has passed the upper house at Springfield and is on first reading in the lower house on Monday.

Following this action, the entire association yesterday adopted similar resolutions denouncing the bill.

Text of Resolution.

The resolutions of the Cook county members read:

"Whereas, It was demonstrated at the late judicial election in Cook county that the people of Cook county preferred to elect judges who were independent of political control and obligation, and whereas, the decisive defeat of the candidates nominated by a political machine was the result of an aroused public sentiment in favor of independent and nonpolitical judges, and whereas, it has come to the knowledge of the members of the Chicago bar who are now in attendance upon the forty-fifth annual meeting of the Illinois State Bar association, that legislation is pending in the general assembly at Springfield designed to change the date of the election of the Superior court judges from June, 1922, to November, 1922, the time of the election of members of congress and incumbents of other political offices, and whereas, if this legislation shall become effective the question of the fitness of candidates for judicial positions in that court is certain to become confused with unrelated general political issues and questions, and thus those who design to obtain control of the judges will be enabled more easily to accomplish their purposes.

Urge Measure's Defeat.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved that we condemn the proposed change as another attempt to fasten upon Cook county a boss owned and machine controlled judiciary, and we urge its defeat by the general assembly of the state of Illinois. And be it further

"Resolved, That since the judges of the Superior court of Cook county are state judges, and as the Illinois State Bar association is directly interested in the maintenance of a competent and independent judiciary throughout the state, the said association be and is hereby earnestly requested to aid in defeat of the legislation above mentioned."

The resolution of the entire association follows:

"Whereas, It has come to the attention of the Illinois State Bar association that there is now pending in the general assembly at Springfield a bill which if passed will abolish the June, 1922, election of judges, and whereas, the independence of the judiciary and the election of judges in such a way and at such times as to insure a full expression of opinion on the part of the electorate, free from the confusion and partisanship frequently attending general elections, is vital to our system of government, and whereas, it is believed that the combining of the election of the Superior court judges with the election of political officers generally would tend to prevent a full and free expression of opinion on the part of the electorate based solely on the fitness of the judicial candidates. Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the State Bar association of Illinois, in forty-fifth annual meeting assembled, unqualifiedly condemns such legislation and urges the members of the general assembly to defeat it."

CHICAGO ASSOCIATION ACTS.

On the heels of the action taken by the Illinois Bar association in convention at Dixon, representatives of the Chicago Bar association yesterday issued a statement urging the defeat of the Schulze bill. In the absence of William Tracy Alden, recently elected president, the statement was signed by John R. Montgomery and Amos C. Miller, former president, William H. Sexton, vice president, and Carl R. Latham.

The statement says that for many years the Chicago Bar association has maintained that judges should not be chosen at elections at which political officers are elected, and that it would be distinctly a step backward to change the time of the election from June, 1922, to November, 1922, of the six Superior court judges.

"We urge all members of the house to defeat the bill," the statement concludes.

THOSE CHILDREN OF THE RICH JUST WON'T FATTEN UP

Infant Welfare Chief Finds Them Still Underweight

Does the "gold coast" need a visiting nurse? What can be done for the poor children of the rich?

Dr. Caroline Hedger, director of the Infant Welfare society, again raised the question yesterday when she announced that a woeful condition exists in the aristocratic section of Chicago.

In one exclusive north side school, she says, fully 50 per cent of the children are of subnormal weight, and more than half of these were recorded at 7 per cent under the correct weight.

Only 18% in Poorer Districts.

This condition does not obtain in the poorer districts. Back of the yards it was found that only 18 per cent of the children are underweight. In the tenements on the lower north side but one child in six is underweight.

Miss Sara B. Place, superintendent of the society, who made Dr. Hedger's report public, stated that the cause for the difference is that mothers in the poorer districts have learned the lessons taught by the society on the proper feeding of babies.

Too Much Rich Food.

"One other reason for the underweight of the 'gold coast' children," said Miss Place, "probably is that they eat rich foods that only an adult should attempt, instead of confining their diets to the simpler foods, which are so much more beneficial for children."

The Infant Welfare society has just completed a week's drive for $120,000. It is understood that most of the needed money already has been subscribed.

SMALL APPLIES ASSEMBLY LASH AS SESSION ENDS

Sends Out a List of Bills That Must Pass.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., June 11.—[Special.]—Gov. Small has issued a new batch of orders to the legislature for the final week of the session. The orders were formal in style and definite in text, issued in typewritten form to directors of departments and administration lieutenants, who in turn passed them along to senators and representatives.

The executive action increases the friction threatened for the getaway week of the general assembly. The house already is panicky over the fight staged for Monday evening on the omnibus bill and over the showdown to come Tuesday on the Lantz Board of Trade bill. The senate, torn by factional disturbance, is on the point of blowing up, with prospects that the state administration will lose whatever control it has had of both branches.

Gives Order of Passage.

Gov. Small's orders to the legislators stipulate the bills that are to be passed. The senate's list is headed by the mayor's local transportation district bill, followed by the governor's own public utilities bill, and joined up by the Wheeler bill that raids the state-civil service system. The house is directed to shoot through the bills that change the date of the primary elections from fall to spring and brings about the election of the Cook county committee for four year terms next April.

Here Are the Governor's Bills.

The "governor's bills," in the order in which they were listed in the official notice, are as follows:

HOUSE BILLS IN HOUSE.

542—Young's bill that doubles rates collected as inheritance tax.

715—Flagg's bill that changes primary election date from September to April and requires election of ward and precinct committeemen next April.

815—Tice's bill that authorizes the department of public works to appoint patrol officers for the hard road system.

483—Flagg's bill, similar in character to 715 and applying to members of the general assembly.

SENATE BILLS IN HOUSE.

187—Meents' bill recasting the roads building law and authorizing the department of public works to create "secondary" system of roads.

475—The administration's bill that reconstructs the state tax commission, with original powers of reassessment and control of county and local assessments.

HOUSE BILLS IN SENATE.

516—Mayor Thompson's transportation district bill.

741—The administration's bill that increases the number and salaries of public utilities commissioners and changes the name of that body to "Illinois commerce commission."

SENATE BILLS IN SENATE.

516—Meents' bill to amend the civil administrative code to raise certain salaries and to provide some new jobs.

496—Barr's bill to double inheritance taxes. Same as H. B. 542.

500—Wheeler's bill to create a state prohibition commissioner to enforce the bone dry law, and to be appointed by the governor.

521—Wheeler's bill to wreck the state civil service through exemptions.

528 and 529—Meents' bills to change primary dates, same as the Flagg bills in the house.

517 and 518—Meents' bills to permit the use of road funds in the state treasury to construct roads in the $60,000,000 hard road system.

The final week starts Monday evening in the house with a battle over the omnibus bill that is expected to destroy nearly everything that remains on the assembly calendars. The senate has 120 of its own bills and eighty house bills awaiting final action. The house has 153 house bills and eighty-four senate bills. There is no physical chance that any reasonable proportion of these can reach roll calls. Members whose bills drag are ready for war, and old timers predict the roughest finish a legislative session has known.

The Democrats will try to force Gov. Small to stipulate where three or four millions can be cut from the omnibus bill, and what should be the size of the school distributive fund. The senate said $12,000,000 annually; the omnibus bill carries but $8,000,000, and the Democratic caucus insists the governor take the responsibility.

Pit Bill Comes Tuesday.

The Board of Trade bill, that places control of the Chicago pit in the hands of the director of agriculture, will take up nearly all of Tuesday, it is expected. The leadership of the floor in behalf of the bill has been taken over by Lee O'Neil Browne, superseding, apparently, Representative Tice. This switch in leadership, it is understood, has not been satisfactory to some of the downstate representatives.

It is now reported extremely doubtful that the public utilities bill can be jammed through the senate, in view of a possibility of a general smashup of the organization that started to control the body last January. The prospects are brighter for the local transportation bill.

The Wheeler bill to put the state civil service may get through in the last minute, and the primary law changes are in the same shape.

JOBLESS MAN OF 65 ENDS LIFE.

Despondency over inability to obtain permanent employment is believed to have caused Joseph Marchall, 65, to commit suicide by gas in his home at 1334 West Division street yesterday.

PLAY RULES FOR A DAY

Children from the playgrounds and settlements—5,000 of them—yesterday took part in a parade down Michigan boulevard and a demonstration in Grant park. The occasion was the city play festival, sponsored by the Boy Scouts, the Drama league, the Civic Music association, the North American Gymnastic association, and all park settlements. In Grant park the children performed in six arenas. The program included clown "stunts," calisthenic drills, acrobatics, games, and folk dancing. NEW PARLIAMENT OF ITALY OPENED BY KING VICTOR

ROME, June 11.—King Victor Emmanuel opened the session of the new Italian parliament here today, and the speech he had prepared for the occasion made a strong appeal for coöperation by all political parties in the reconstruction of the country. Italy will continue to coöperate with the allies in dealing with international problems, the speech declared.

Today's session was looked upon as a mere formality, as the only business before the chamber of deputies was the address from the throne and the swearing in of the members. On Monday, however, the new president of the chamber will be elected, and a contest of some magnitude is forecast, as several political parties have placed candidates in nomination.

Belief was expressed that no serious attack would be made upon Premier Giolitti for some time in the chamber of deputies.

DUBLIN, June 11.—Irish volunteer forces attacked an auxiliary bicycle detachment last night near Ennis. A battle ensued in which the Irish lost one man killed and the crown forces one wounded. After fighting an hour, the insurgents retired.

MADRID, June 11.—Fourteen persons are known to have been killed and many injured when an express train from Madrid collided with a train from Toledo near Villaverde today.

SCOTCH GREET CANADIAN AND U.S. ROTARIANS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

EDINBURGH, June 11.—Glasgow and Edinburgh vociferously welcomed the Rotarians arriving on the Cameronia with bands and bagpipers. The streets of Edinburgh are alive with people wearing Kansas sunflowers, boosting Wichita, and adorned with armlets and hatbands extolling the merits of a hundred cities and towns in the United States and Canada. It is estimated that 1,500 Rotarians have been assembled.

Today was given up to sightseeing. Tomorrow there will be special services in all the churches in Edinburgh, at which there will be a uniform text. The afternoon will be devoted to garden parties.

The convention proper assembles Monday, when the Rotarians will be welcomed officially by the lord provost.

Plan Appeal to Harding on 25% Lumber Duty

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Members of the Minnesota congressional delegation decided today to appeal to President Harding against the 25 per cent ad valorem duty on finished lumber proposed by the house ways and means committee. The members will visit the President in a body to urge him to use his influence. In view of the present housing situation, it is declared that such a duty is not justified.

LENIN PREPARES RADICAL CHANGES IN RADICAL RULE

RIGA, Letvia, June 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—Three more important decrees, making radical changes in the previous communistic system, are declared in Moscow dispatches to newspapers here to be in preparation by Nikolai Lenin, Russian soviet premier, and their early promulgation is predicted.

The first of these reported decrees permits virtually unlimited deposits and checking accounts by individuals in the state coöperative banks.

The second limits the power of the toheka, the bolshevik inquisitorial body, to cases of open armed revolt, banditry, and conspiracy, transforming it into a purely government secret service for such crimes, while all other cases will come before the courts.

The third decree abolishes free trave on the railways and free postage, substituting tariff schedules.

Say Chile Contemplates Tacna-Arica Plebiscite

BUENOS AIRES, June 11.—It is reported here that the Chilean foreign minister is preparing a draft of conditions for a Tacna-Arica plebiscite which he will present for the consideration of the foreign relations committee of the Chilean senate next week. The foreign minister has just returned to Santiago from a tour of Brazil, Uruguay, and Argentina, wheer he went as the head of a special embassy.

CITY HALL 'S O S' GOES OUT FOR UTILITIES BILLS

Asks Democratic Aid at Last Moment.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Having delayed action in the state senate upon the two bills designed to make the voters believe that Mayor Thompson and Gov. Small are redeeming their campaign pledges concerning traction and public utilities, the city hall now sees both measures in serious danger.

In order to put over the resolution embodying the organization's pacifist platform, which had been rejected in the state convention, it was necessary to line up six Democratic senators. But, following the tremendous anti-city hall demonstration in the judicial election last Monday, it has been found that most of those six are no longer subject to persuasion.

Therefore both the Chicago and the state branches of the Lundin machine, since the adjournment of the senate on Thursday, have been trying their utmost to gather in the votes necessary to stave off extremely bitter defeat.

Small Appeals to Democrat Chief.

One of these desperate efforts left no doubt of the situation. Gov. Small personally sent word he would be pleased to see a Democratic leader who, in his eyes, is considered the nearest approach to a successor of the late Roger C. Sullivan.

Unmistakable notice has been served that any Democratic representative or senator who hereafter votes for a measure solely at the request of the machine can expect no further organization support. Candidates will be put in the field against them the next time they run.

Anti-city hall Republicans from Cook county are even more bitter than usual in their opposition to the "bunk" traction and utility bills. And downstate Republicans, some of whom have aided Gov. Small in the past, are publicly expressing doubt that these two measures can pass.

Utilities Bill "Bunk," Says Dailey.

"There is a question whether the utilities bill will ever reach conference," said Senator Richard J. Barr. "We're having a hard time rounding up enough votes to pass it in the senate."

Senator John Dailey of Peoria, Republican, has described this bill as a "mess" and as "bunk." It has been pointed out that more than half of it was taken from the present public utilities act, and that as the new bill now stands it is little different from the present law except that it changes the name of the utilities commission to the "Illinois commerce commission."

This is done, it has been explained, to create the appearance of repealing the public utilities act. In fact, Mayor Thompson, in his judicial campaign speeches, even went so far as state flatly that the utilities act already had been repealed.

Traction Bill in Worse Fix.

If Gov. Small's utilities bill is in danger, Mayor Thompson's "transportation district" bill is even more seriously threatened. Its own advocates admit that the scheme of operation is impractical—is not workable. Heavy attacks upon it as a scheme to deliver all the transportation lines of Chicago into the hands of the Lundin Thompson machine are certain.

Detailed criticism of the proposal to establish fares arbitrarily and then, if there is a loss at the end of five years, to make up the difference by heavy taxation or an immense jump in fares also will be made.

Both bills were allowed to pass the house without serious opposition, but in the senate this week—the last of the session—both will be torn to pieces by debate.

BRITAIN OPENS TRADE MISSION IN RED CAPITAL

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, June 11.—W. Peters, chief agent of the British board of trade, who conducted the negotiations for a trade agreement with soviet Russia, has returned to London from Moscow, where he has fixed up permanent headquarters for a British trade mission.

McLeod Hodgson, formerly a commercial attaché in Russia, has been appointed chief of the mission, which will be composed of from twenty to twenty-five persons, including a physician.

Mr. Peters reported that food and transport conditions were still very bad, and the British mission, which starts for Russia in a few weeks, will be supplied with food from London.

3 DAY GENERAL STRIKE IS CALLED BY MUNICH LABOR

MUNICH, June 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—A general three day strike was called today by the labor unions, workmen's councils, social democrats, independent socialists and the communists as a protest against the murder Thursday night of Deputy Gareis, leader of the Bavarian independent socialist party.

Street car service is tied up, stores are closed and the only newspaper issued is the Battle, officials organ of the independent socialists, which charges Gareis was killed by communists in order to precipitate a crisis.

The Bavarian government, in a statement today, deplored the murder of Herr Gareis and offered a reward of 10,000 marks for the arrest of his assassins.

Leipsic Student Is Found Not Guilty of War Crime

LEIPSIC, Germany, June 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—Max Randohr, a Leipsic student, was acquitted today by the court trying war criminals on the charge of having ill treated and imprisoned Belgian children at Gramont in 1917.

Randohr was released and the imperial treasury will pay the cost of the trial. The case was brought at the instance of Belgium.

FIVE HELD ON BOOZE CHARGES.

Five men charged with the illegal transportation of liquor were arraigned before United States Commissioner James R. Glass yesterday and their cases set for hearing June 21. They are John Shea, Ernest Fontana, John Delaney, John Neal and Michael Gara.

BEG YOUR PARDON

In its report of the death of 3-year-old Robert Ahrens last Wednesday's TRIBUNE stated that the child darted in front of a machine driven by Mrs. Julia Gibson and was killed. Edward Griesz, the boy's uncle, says that Robert was not on the street. He asserts that the car, because of a faulty steering apparatus, swerved into the curb and crushed the child against a fire hydrant.

OPEN VERDICT ON GAS DEATHS.

A coroner's jury investigating the death of Mrs. Mae Duncan Primrose, 1249 Rosedale avenue, and her son, Lee, 4 years old, failed to fix responsibility yesterday and returned an open verdict that they "came to their death accidentally or otherwise." They were found dead in a gas filled kitchen.

JOYCE'S LAWYER WANTS PEGGY TO TELL ABOUT GEMS

Hot Fight Impends Over Placing Her on Stand.

A bitter fight is predicted when an attempt is made to bring Peggy Joyce to Chicago for oral testimony in the hearing of her suit against her millionaire husband, James Stanley Joyce, for $10,000 a month alimony and attorney's fees.

Attorney Weymouth Kirkland declared at the last hearing before Judge Joseph Sabath in the Superior court that Peggy should not be subjected to a "fishing" expedition in which Alfred S. Austrian, counsel for the wealthy lumberman, will seek to learn the hiding place of the $739,000 worth of jewels Joyce gave her.

Austrian Gives Reasons.

"In the ordinary course of a divorce procedure where temporary alimony is being asked," said Mr. Austrian yesterday, "it is the usual custom for counsel of both sides to rely on the written pleas of complaint, action and cross action, and argument of the attorneys for both complainant and defendant.

"But here we have a different situation. Mr. Kirkland was not satisfied with the written charges in the bill of complaint and the answer of Mr. Joyce, and insisted that my client should be made to appear in person at this preliminary hearing in the suit.

Will Ask for an Order.

"We have as much right to ask the same favor from the court, and in my argument next Wednesday morning I intend to make a motion asking Judge Sabath to issue an order for the appearance of Margaret Hopkins Joyce before him for examination."

Among the list of jewels Mr. Austrian will seek to locate are a pearl necklace valued at $325,000, which was purchased from Black, Starr & Frost in New York in March, 1920. At the time Mr. Joyce traded in a pearl necklace worth $23,500, which he had given Peggy some time before.

On March 27, 1920, he bought her a marquise diamond ring, paying $54,150 for it, and on the same day he gave her a square diamond ring worth $64,600.

Other Gifts of Jewels.

In May of the same year he gave her a square diamond bracelet, a square emerald bracelet and a square diamond ring which cost him $138,000 for the three. Another emerald cut diamond ring cost $17,000, while for an emerald and diamond bracelet $35,000 was sliced from his bank roll.

The list of his gifts continues with items at $2,800, $3,600 and a mere trifle of a cigaret case at $425.

As an evidence of Joyce's disregard for value while lavishing gifts on Peggy he traded one stone in for her jewelry at a loss of $36,000, and in another transaction with Tiffany & Co. he was loser by $53,000.

Though she had been given $125,000 in cash, Peggy says she has left only $25,000 in a Paris bank. Her honeymoon clothing cost $71,000.

Since the romance of Peggy's rise from obscurity to the darling of millionaires and princes has been aired in the courts, the office of Joyce's attorneys has been flooded with letters.

One came yesterday from a girl who signed herself "A Little Country Church Mouse," which read as follows:

"Mayer, Meyer, Austrian & Platt—Gentlemen: I have read of the great generosity of your client, Mr. Joyce, to his sweethearts and to Peggy Joyce. To my mind he is the ideal 'Prince Charming' every girl is looking for.

"I have often dreamed of such a man, a Croesus to whom the love of a girl is of more value than all wealth. It would not be modest of me to say that I am beautiful; let Mr. Joyce judge that for himself. If he is ever free to marry again, and I hope he will be, I would be deeply indebted to you if you could arrange an introduction."

ROMANCE BLOOMS AFTER 60 YEARS; FADES IN MONTH

Husband's Long Walks Kill Love of Aged Woman

A childhood romance of sixty years ago came to life again, then, after a month's trial marriage, faded and was lost in the divorce courts. Yesterday Mrs. Matilda Schubert petitioned for a separation from her husband, Louis Schubert.

Schubert is 74 years old, so is his wife. As children they attended Scammon school. At 14 they believed themselves deeply in love. At 24 she left to visit friends in the east and was married there. Later her husband died. Schubert was a widower.

Last April Mrs. Schubert visited friends at 3026 Clifton avenue. Schubert lived in an apartment below. They were introduced, and mutual recognition took place.

Then Mrs. Schubert left for Milwaukee. He followed her and proposed. They were married here on May 3.

"But he took me for such long walks," she told her attorney, Stanley C. Armstrong, "I could not stand it any longer.

"One day he took me to the cemetery and we walked and walked and walked. I was tired out. Then he said we would take a street car ride. We rode to Lincoln park. Again we walked and walked."

On May 26 she left him, moving upstairs while her trunks still remained unpacked on the rear porch of her husband's home.

$122,000,000 U. S. GAIN IN FOREIGN TRADE IN MAY

Washington, D. C., June 11.—Both exports and imports continued to fall off in May, but the month's trading resulted in a favorable balance of $122,000,000 for the United States, figures made public today by the department of commerce showed.

Exports for May totaled $330,000,000, as against $340,000,000 in April and $746,000,000 in May, 1920, while imports for the month were $208,000,000, as compared with $256,000,000 in April and $431,000,000 in May the year before.

For the eleven months ended with May exports totaled $6,180,000,000, as against $7,480,000,000 for the corresponding months of 1920, while imports aggregated $3,472,000,000, as compared with $4,686,000,000.

Gold exports for the month totaled $1,062,521, while imports were $58,209,918. Silver exports for May totaled $2,352,609 and imports $6,956,077.

THREE CALLED IN BUILDING GRAFT QUIZ LEAVE TOWN

Graham and Two Griffiths Fail to Appear.

For the first time since the Dailey building investigation was launched the committee yesterday found itself with out witnesses. The afternoon had been set aside especially for the testimony of John Griffiths, head of John Griffiths & Son, contractors; his son, George Griffiths; John Ruettinger, general superintendent of that concern; and Ernest R. Graham, architect.

Graham and Griffiths previously testified that in all their building experience they had paid out no graft. Since then other witnesses have given testimony said to refute their statements. This evidence was strengthened by testimony given Friday by Charles E. Fox, the architect. It was the plan of the committee to reëxamine the witnesses at length.

Absence of Men Explained.

Mr. Ruettinger appeared in answer to a subpoena with the information that Mr. Griffiths had been taken ill and had left for Detroit Friday night. George Griffiths, he said, was called to New York unexpectedly on Thursday.

"And Mr. Graham has notified me he had been unexpectedly called to New York," added Attorney Joseph B. Fleming, counsel for the committee.

"Our deputies have been trying to serve these men with subpoenas all week," Mr. Fleming told Senator Dailey. "They were left with their secretaries, who promised to give them to them. Besides, I had the personal promise of both Mr. Griffiths and Mr. Graham that they would be here today. They were both in the same office when seen by myself and one of the other assistant attorneys."

Ruettinger was told his testimony would not be taken until the others were present. He promised to appear again a week from Tuesday with both the Griffiths.

Woman Tells of Graft.

With the main witness missing, the only one left to examine was Mrs. Agnes Jamm, 2260 North Clark street, who with her husband, John M. Jamm, owns an apartment building at 1628 Fargo avenue.

Mrs. Jamm is the first woman to appear before the committee to tell of graft payments. She testified her husband was compelled to pay $150 to a business agent for the painters' union about two years ago. A nonunion decorator John Rogney, was working in the place at the time, she said. The building was picketed and attempts were made to stop the delivery of coal and milk. Threats were made that the building would be wrecked unless the money was paid. Two threatening letters were written by the business agent to Mr. Jamm, she said, before payment was made.

Police Chief Testifies.

The principal witness at the morning session was Chief of Police Charles C. Fitzmorris, who told of his negotiations to settle labor difficulties on the Drake hotel at the instance of Mr. Fox.

Chief Fitzmorris explained he and Mr. Fox had been friends for years, and it was purely because of this friendship that he tried to use his offices in settling the labor difficulties at the Drake.

Fitzmorris said he knew Mike Artery and asked him as a personal favor to call off a strike of teamsters, which

Mrs. Agnes Jamm of 2260 North Clark street yesterday told the Dailey building committee she was forced to pay a union business agent $150 graft because a nonunion decorator had worked on an apartment house for her.

Artery did. He said he called in Simon O'Donnell and asked him about a strike of carpenters, but O'Donnell said he knew nothing about it and suggested he call in Dan Galvin, secretary of the Carpenters' District council. The chief said he saw Galvin and the trouble was settled.

"I was never offered any money nor asked for any during these negotiations," the chief said.

Says Police Are Aiding State.

The committee thanked the chief, and Senator Dailey asked him if he knew of any threats made in connection with the investigation. The chief replied he had been told of threats made when the Booth Fisheries were tied up, and there also had been some trouble with the shoemakers' strike, but he had furnished protection wherever asked.

"I have conferred with Mr. Gorman," he said, "and we are coöperating along this line."

Attorney Lewis F. Jacobson, counsel for Ascher Brothers, testified he believed the theater men had been compelled to pay out approximately $100,000 in graft. He asked he be not questioned concerning the alleged payment of $15,000 strike insurance on the Roosevelt theater to Tom Kearney until he obtained a release from his clients. He promised to get in touch with Nathan Ascher in New York and have him appear before the committee.

Misquoted, Nelson Says.

Henry Wade Nelson, member of the contracting firm of Mellon, Stewart & Nelson, informed the committee he had been misquoted concerning a remark said to have been made by Mr. Fox following his testimony before the committee. Mr. Nelson was quoted as having said the architect remarked, "I couldn't do anything else except deny everything and expect to continue in business."

"What I said was that Mr. Fox stated he had been 'disconcerted by the testimony of John Griffiths,'" Mr. Nelson said.

"You mean that he had thought Griffiths would tell more than he did?" asked Chairman Dailey.

"Yes."

HAYNES BEGINS DUTIES AS DRY LAW ENFORCER

Kramer, Retiring, Tells of Difficulties.

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Roy A. Haynes of Ohio took the oath of office as prohibition commissioner today, succeeding John F. Kramer. Mr. Haynes made a brief statement, declaring that he expected to "bring to the administration of the office every ounce of ability and energy that is in me."

Mr. Kramer in a valedictory reviewing the difficulties of prohibition enforcement, took occasion to denounce some untrustworthy men who had managed to get into the enforcement service.

"To maintain an organization that will be loyal to him," said Mr. Kramer, "and to do the work he has to do, is one of the problems of the new commissioner.

Law Violators Amaze Kramer.

"The amazing thing to me is that men and women will take an oath of office to defend, protect, and uphold the constitution, and then proceed to tear it down by selling out to its enemies and thus becoming constitutional anarchists. This, however, some of our officers as well as local and state officials do.

"I do not marvel so much at the lower element in the community violating the law, but it is an amazing thing that to have so-called good citizens lending their aid and their comfort and their support in word and deed and act, to those who are engaged in violating the law."

Matson Made Deputy.

Francis G. Matson, former Chicago newspaperman, today was appointed deputy commissioner of internal revenue in charge of the divisions of information, supplies, and equipment, tobacco, oleomargarine, and miscellaneous taxes.

Mr. Matson was born in Ogden, Utah, and is 28 years old. He came to Washington in 1919 with the Sixty-sixth congress as compiler of the congressional directory. During the last presidential campaign he was employed with the publicity department of the Republican national committee under Scott C. Bone.

LANDIS PLEADS FOR MORE LOVE FOR COUNTRY

Crawfordsville, Ind., June 11.—[Special.]—Judge K. M. Landis of Chicago delivered the commencement address at the eighty-third commencement of Wabash college this morning and received the degree of doctor of laws.

Judge Landis denounced socialism and other anti-American sentiment and made an appeal for a greater Americanism and love of country.

"Three fundamentals are of vital importance to this country today," he declared. "They who obey the laws must make the laws; they who are friendly to America must rule America, and they who bear the burdens must reap the rewards."

Judge Landis arraigned the present railroad policy of the United States, declaring freight rates must come down before commerce and industry are restored.

U.S. MAY BUY THE CAPE COD CANAL FOR $11,500,000

Washington, D. C., June 11.—Purchase by the government of the Cape Cod canal for $11,500,000 has been recommended to congress by Secretary Weeks.

If congress approves the purchase, recommended by the secretaries of war, navy and commerce, the only appropriation required will be $5,500,000 less any cash now in the treasury that has accrued from the operation of the canal by the war department since Feb. 29, 1920. The remainder of the new purchase price is represented by $6,000,000 worth of 5 per cent bonds having thirty-nine years still to run.

Under the agreement the government may assume these bonds and call them in at its option or allow them to run the full thirty-nine years.

CONGRESS STUDY OF SECOND CLASS MAIL PROBABLE

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Representative Longworth of Ohio introduced today a bill providing for postponement of the increase in rates on newspapers and magazines entered as second class mail matter and for an investigation of postal costs and second class rates.

The measure directs the appointment of a joint committee consisting of three members of the senate and three members of the house postoffice committees to report on the cost of the second class mail service and to determine principles upon which charges for such service should be equitably assessed.

FRENCH WRITER TELLS EXPLOITS OF "SEA TANKS"

Says Steel Nets Do Not Make Harbors Safe.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, June 11.—François Canac, the naval expert of the evening newspaper, Intransigeant, in an article today reveals the daring exploits of Italian "seagoing tanks" and German submarines during the war in raids on harbors protected by steel nets.

The development of steel cutting and melting devices leaves fleets in harbors unprotected from raiding submersibles, regardless of steel nets or other protections which were used in the war, M. Canac points out.

Commandant Pelligrini of the Italian navy, using a "sea tank," climbed over three nets and torpedoed the Austrian battleship Viribus Unitis at Pola, the writer declares.

Another Italian sea tank hung a weight over the top strand of a net, sagging it down twenty feet, passed through and torpedoed a battleship.

German submarines equipped with electrical apparatus melted steel cables and nets, passing freely through into protected areas.

M. Canas points out the necessity for the French navy department to develop net cutting devices and to formulate protective measures to guard harbors and naval bases from submarine attacks in case of future wars.

I. C. C. AND LABOR BOARD ATTACKED IN TEXAS SUIT

Austin, Tex., June 11.—The Texas attorney general's department announced today that the Supreme Court of the United States had granted its request to file a suit attacking the constitutionality of the interstate commerce commission and the United States railroad labor board.

The Supreme court informed the department that a subpoena had been issued to the two organizations requiring them to appear before the court and defend their position, which the Texas suit attacks.

BOTH TURKS AND GREEKS SANGUINE ON EVE OF FIGHT

Expect New Conflict to Be Decisive.

BULLETIN.
CONSTANTINOPLE, June 11.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Greek battleship Kilkis, formerly the U. S. S. Mississippi, today shelled Inebors (Ineboli, on the Black sea.) There were numerous casualties, and many buildings were damaged, including the official residence of the government.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—The historic capital is again resounding to the hum of military activity, on the eve of what may prove to be a decisive conflict for the domination of Asia Minor, with the Greeks on the one hand and the Turkish nationalists on the other as the most active combatants.

The city is crowded with allied forces, and additional British troops are arriving from Malta, while the imposing Franco-British fleet is on the scene.

From the Armenian frontier on the one side and the Ionian sea on the other, the opposing armies are reported marching to the impending battles over this ancient fighting ground, which has echoed from time immemorial to the clash of arms.

Both Sides Confident.

Regardless of the sanguinary history of the last seven years, all the forces involved are going ahead with their military preparations in apparent cheerfulness, proclaiming confidence in their arms.

Over at Angora, the Turkish nationalist seat of government, Henri Franklin Bouillon is making an effort on behalf of the French government to patch up a peace with the militant organization of Mustapha Kemal Pasha, whose government repudiated the agreement made by its representatives in Europe for a settlement of the outstanding difficulties with the French.

Peace Signs Are Few.

Declarations are heard here also by representatives of all sides that they are anxious for peace, but, while the word "peace" is frequently heard, it is far from being present, in fact, at the moment, and few indications are evident here that there is much prospect of realizing it for the troubled near east.

Thus far bolshevik troops in large numbers have not joined the nationalists, but they are watching and have ready several divisions for the Turks, with a distinct offer of twelve. The bolshevik concentrations in Bessarabia also may be used if the opportunity presents.

The beginning of the offensive, it is feared here, will be the signal for new outrages by bandits and irregular troops in Thrace and Asia Minor on the part of both the Turks and the Greeks. The Greek population in Samsun and other points is being deported into the interior and 3,000 Armenians have been deported by the Turks from Bilejek and other places in the Brusa zone.

GREEKS RENEW WAR ON KEMAL

What experts believe will be a decisive conflict between the Greeks and the Turkish nationalists was opened yesterday and is expected to be in full swing before the week is over. King Constantine, accompanied by a big staff, is on his way from Athens to Smyrna to inspect the Albanian front. Numbers on the accompanying map indicate:

1—Ineboli, a Black sea port which was heavily shelled yesterday by the Greek battleship Kilkis, formerly U. S. S. Mississippi. There were many casualties and much property damage.

2—Samsun, also on the Black sea. From this port Greek inhabitants have been ordered into the interior, and a bitter struggle is expected in this neighborhood.

3—Smyrna, upon which the strongest Greek front is based and from which it is thought King Constantine will direct operations of his troops.

Waukegan High Schools to Teach Cafeteria Trade

Waukegan, Ill., June 11.—Waukegan High School board, upon suggestion of Principal Paul G. W. Keller, last night decided to add a course in cafeteria and restaurant operation next year, under the vocational training law. Pupils taking the course will be given credits. The cafeteria will be operated for benefit of high school students who buy their lunches at school.

ALTITUDE RECORD HOLDER WILL FLY AGAINST PIGEONS

Maj. R. W. Schroeder, holder of the world's airplane altitude record, will pilot one of the machines in the airplane-pigeon races to be started at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Municipal pier as a preliminary to the big pigeon races to be held in connection with the Pageant of Progress exposition. If Springfield pigeons arrive in time, Maj. Schroeder will fly to the capital in competition with them.

Maj. Schroeder will be accompanied by Lieut. P. Malcolm Semmes, formerly in charge of the pigeon activities at Wilbur Wright field at Dayton, O., during the war. Lieut. Semmes will take a number of birds up with him and release them from the plane.

Three thousand birds will be released in the various events of the afternoon, carrying messages to Aurora, Batavia, Milwaukee, Great Lakes and other points. The exhibition halls on the pier, where the Pageant of Progress exposition will be held July 30 to August 14 will be open for public inspection this afternoon.

BRITISH UNCOVER A PLOT TO SEIZE CONSTANTINOPLE

Bolsheviks and Kemalists Back of Scheme.

BY AMBROSE LAMBERT.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, June 11.—The details of a suspected Kemalist-bolshevist plot to seize Constantinople have been discovered by the British secret service, according to reliable diplomatic sources here.

A Red military concentration was reported from the Ukraine two weeks ago which, at the time, was believed to be intended for an advance on Roumania. Later some of the Sultan's ministers at Constantinople pleaded, on sentimental grounds, for the allies to withdraw their fleet from the Golden Horn in accordance with the allied offer made at the London conference.

Plan for Coup.

Had the allies been simple enough to acquiesce, Trotzky and Kemal would have been ready to take immediate advantage of the situation.

The Bosporus and the Sea of Marmora would have been carried by a fleet composed of bolshevik, Turkish, and Bulgarian craft, of which there are many lying off the Bulgarian port of Varna, an important Red center. A quantity of floating mines would have been carried to the Dardanelles, impeding the return of the allied fleet.

Aim at Greeks.

In the meanwhile the bolshevik army would have been transferred to both shores of the Bosporus, possibly to Varna. The northern half of the Greek army in Asia Minor would have been attacked and annihilated. The Turks, Reds, and Bulgarian communists would have invaded eastern Thrace and an effort made to secure a rising of Gen. Wrangel's refugees at Gallipoli and elsewhere against Greece and the entente. A general massacre of Christians in Constantinople would have ensued.

MRS. DECKER IS FREED; 2 OTHER SONS TO TRIAL

Warsaw, Ind., June 11.—[Special.]—Mrs. Lydia Decker, mother of Virgil Decker, convicted of the murder of Leroy Lovett, was released from the county jail here late this afternoon upon orders issued by Judge L. W. Royse.

Mrs. Decker was indicted with her three sons, Virgil, Fred and Calvin, for first degree murder. Prosecutor H. W. Graham requested her release because there is not sufficient evidence to convict her. She left immediately for Elkhart, Ind.

Attorneys for the state announced this afternoon that they will push the cases against the other two defendants, Fred and Calvin Decker, on "conspiracy" in an effort to collect $24,000 insurance.

Attorneys for Virgil Decker announced they will file motion for a new trial.

30 FINED FOR AUTO LICENSE VIOLATION

Fines of $5 and costs were assessed yesterday by Judge Asa Adams in the Speeders' court against thirty violators of the law requiring motorists to have two state license tags on their automobiles.

KNOW BUSINESS IN ALL BRANCHES, GRADUATES TOLD

Graduates of commercial schools soon learn there is no such thing as "specialization" when it comes to real success in business, according to Prof. L. C. Marshall, dean of the school of commerce of the University of Chicago. He was the principal speaker at the dinner of the graduating class of the school of commerce and administration of the junior college at Medill High school, held last night in the Hotel La Salle.

"There are at least eight major features that a man in administrative work must know in order to serve successfully," he said. "Students who have their minds made up as to what they want to do at the time they enter school always consider some features of the course as unnecessary. But they soon learn that a change in the system of one business department may make it necessary to turn the entire operation and selling plan of the concern upside down. Consequently, it is necessary for them to know something about the other departments."

Others who spoke were Mrs. Frances E. Thornton, member of the board of education; A. L. McDermott, dean of the school, and Avon S. Hall, principal.

POOLE, ASSAILED BY FORMER BOSS, DEFENDS BUREAU

"You Know I Work Hard," He Tells Adamowski.

Russell J. Poole, secretary of the city council's high cost of living committee, upon whom Ald. Max Adamowski, former chairman of the committee, launched an attack yesterday, made answer late in the afternoon.

RUSSELL J. POOLE.

ALD. MAX ADAMOWSKI.

The alderman asserted the bureau had "gone to seed and is nothing more than a drain upon the public purse." He added that he would introduce a resolution in the council to abolish the $5,000 a year job held by Poole and the $3,000 a year job held by Robert S. Iles, attorney for the committee.

Poole Strikes Back.

"If you have been correctly quoted you are greatly in error," said the letter addressed to the alderman by Mr. Poole. "You know I work hard in this office — you found me here late one night and laughed at me, saying I was a fool to work so hard."

The alderman charged Poole and Iles had taken out papers in Springfield for a retail merchants' association and "are using their office and the help there to further the association, of which Poole has made himself president."

Defends Retail League.

"In the first place, the association is merely in the formative stage," continued Mr. Poole's letter. "The only thing done so far has been to obtain a charter and select temporary officers. All expense has been paid by me and the office in the city hall has not aided in any way. The charter was obtained by Mr. Iles and the charter fees and postage were paid by him. The association's address is at his private office.

"As to the Allied Retail Merchants' association, its purposes are directly in line with the attempt the people are making to readjust business on a normal basis and take the high cost out of living."

Disastrous New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Forest Fires

Halifax, N. S., June 11.—Wide stretches of fine timber land in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick today were being swept by fire.

With thousands of dollars' worth of lumber turned to ashes and several hamlets threatened, fire fighters who prayed for rain were battling under a burning sun, against a stiff wind and flames that licked their way through woodland dry as tinder.

Many sections reported fires, but the centers of the gravest danger were Cumberland, Colchester and Pictou counties. The latest blaze was reported by Trenton, a mining town in Pictou county, to which men have been rushed from New Glasgow.

Girl's Airplane Marriage to Great Lakes Gob Will Be Feature of Aviation Week.

Miss Helen Stoser didn't exactly leave Kemper Murray, Great Lakes naval station gob, waiting at the church yesterday. But, after everything had been arranged for their wedding she informed him she would like to have the ceremony performed in the air.

So it will be. Murray and Miss Stoser, who lives at 1056 Oakland avenue, will be one of five couples whose aeroplane weddings will be a feature of what is heralded as the "gala bazaar" of the Aviation Club of Chicago, extending from June 28 to July 2.

The adventurers will set sail on this uncharted sea of matrimony from the club's new field west of Evanston on the closing day of the bazaar. As the ceremony is being solemnized a pirate plane will circle over the wedding ship, bombing it with rice.

A beauty contest will be another feature of the bazaar, which is to be a benefit for unemployed former service men.

KILLING OF BRAVE DRUGGIST LEADS TO GANG'S ARREST

Youth Confesses, Naming Others in Band.

Three men entered the Pegram & Lawrence drug store, 1259 West 79th street, yesterday forenoon and demanded money. Albert N. Lawrence, one of the proprietors, seized a bottle and struck a robber with it. He was shot in the head and in the arm, the latter bullet penetrating his left side. He died late last night in Auburn Park hospital.

A short time after the shooting two squads of detectives, one led by Sergt. Charles Gratton, the other by Sergt. Michael Grady, came on an abandoned automobile. The license plate, which was under a seat, had been issued to Joseph Jablonski, 19 years old, 4334 South Knox avenue.

Frightened Youth Arrested.

The detectives started for that address. At Cicero and Archer avenues Sergt. James Scully saw a young man who appeared frightened. He jumped out and grabbed the youth, who proved to be Jablonski. The detectives' chauffeur, Louis Testa, noticed blood on Jablonski's coat. He jerked out his revolver.

"You're the man who murdered the druggist this morning," he said.

Jablonski confessed, named the others, and within a few hours the police had cleaned up the case. They arrested Frank Rychlewsky, 2850 Keeley street; Charles McDonald, who lives at the Auto inn, 4852 Archer avenue; Frank Spry of Moline, Ill.; Hugh Tinman of the Auto inn, who Friday shot Probationary Policeman William Kirby; Walter Siggins, proprietor of the Auto inn; and Leo Matuszuk, the inn porter.

Trio Identified by Druggist.

Jablonski, Rychlewsky, and McDonald were taken to the hospital, where they were identified by the druggist. They said they hid their revolvers in the Auto Inn, and named the others as members of a band that robbed several places in the last few weeks. Search of the inn revealed quantities of silk shirts, hosiery, and women's underwear.

Tinman and Spry were taken in the barn back of the inn. They attempted to fight until they saw they were surrounded. Tinman claims the shooting of Kirby, which occurred in the saloon of Siggin & Leafer, 5342 Archer avenue, was accidental. The policeman also said Tinman was showing him a gun when it was accidentally discharged, but he didn't explain how he was shot in the back of the neck by a revolver at which he was looking. He will be questioned further about the affair and about his friendship for Tinman.

ALLIES REACH AGREEMENT ON SILESIAN PLAN

Expect to Pacify the Poles This Week.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

OPPELN, June 11.—Gen. Lerond, commanding French forces in Upper Silesia, declared today that the allies finally had reached accord on a plan which is expected to be put into execution this week for progressive withdrawal of Poles and reoccupation of the insurgent territory by allied troops.

Although the French general did not detail this program, he stated the Poles would be ordered to evacuate a certain territory each day through a series of ultimatums, a policy which woud likewise be used with the Germans.

French Give in to Plan.

The French finally conceded, after much argument, that the Poles should withdraw before the Germans, as the Poles were responsible for the situation.

Up to yesterday the French were using pressure here and at Berlin for immediate disarmament of the German defense troops, which were supported by the British and Italians on the ground that refusal to let the Germans, who were obeying British orders and suggestions, defend themselves would be showing partiality in favor of the Poles.

Peaceful withdrawal of the Poles from Rosenberg and the Gleiwitz region following receipt of an ultimatum from the allies indicates that a settlement of the Silesian problem will be effected without bloodshed.

The allied commission here is urging the supreme council to apportion Upper Silesia immediately and thus decrease the allied zone.

Millions of dollars worth of damage done by the Poles by blowing up homes and factories and looting will probably result in heavy claims against the allied governments, who are responsible for maintenance of order in Upper Silesia.

British Victim Buried.

Following the appointment of a board to inquire into the shooting of a Black Watch sergeant near Malapane Wednesday evening resulting in his death the following day, there are numerous conflicting reports tending to make it appear uncertain whether the death was caused by German or Polish bullets.

The victim, Sergt. A. Sylvester, was buried in the Oppeln cemetery today.

BIRTH OF FLAG TO BE HONORED NEXT TUESDAY

"The one hundred and forty-fourth anniversary of the adoption of the American flag will be next Tuesday, June 14. Flag day, which annually commemorates this great event of 1777," read an information bulletin issued by Dr. B. J. Cigrand, president of the National Flag Day society, "will this year be unusually observed. Thirty-nine governors, hundreds of mayors, and the federal government have proclaimed that the flag be displayed on all buildings and that lodges, posts, and patriotic organizations as well as industrial and business institutions arrange programs.

"All speakers will please remember that Flag day exercises are free from political or sectarian expressions. Keep close to the history of the flag.

"The pledge is as follows: 'I pledge allegiance to the American flag and to the republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.'

"Give the American flag one full and unmolested day, and inculcate lessons of patriotism that this is the only true symbol of American freedom 365 days of the year. All other flags please take notice and govern yourself accordingly."

HUGHES INSISTS DUTCH EVADE OIL CASE FACTS

Makes Public New Note Sent to Envoy.

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—A new note by Secretary Hughes, made public today, regarding the Dutch East Indian oil fields insists that this government made its representations to the Netherlands government before the proposed Netherlands law had been enacted and not "too late," as Holland would try to make it appear.

The latest note, addressed on May 27 to William Phillips, the American minister at The Hague, instructs him "to express the American government's regrets that the Dutch government should regard the desire expressed by the American government, and expressed on repeated occasions, that American citizens should be allowed to share in the development of the oil industry in the Dutch East Indies as Dutch citizens were permitted to enjoy similar concessions in the United States as having been presented too late to receive consideration by the Dutch government."

Hughes Cites the Record.

The legation was instructed to make reference to a number of communications which in the course of the last year had been exchanged between the Netherlands government and the United States. Secretary Hughes listed communications sent to Holland beginning as far back as June, 1920, bearing on the subject in controversy, long before the Dutch oil legislation was enacted, and added:

"The legation was instructed to remind the foreign minister, if the government of the Netherlands felt the introduction of the bill to constitute a final decision, that the legislation in question was only introduced into parliament on November 22, 1920, and that several weeks prior to that date the United States government had already made its representations with reference to the matter and a reliable American corporation had applied to the Dutch government for a share in the development of the oil lands.

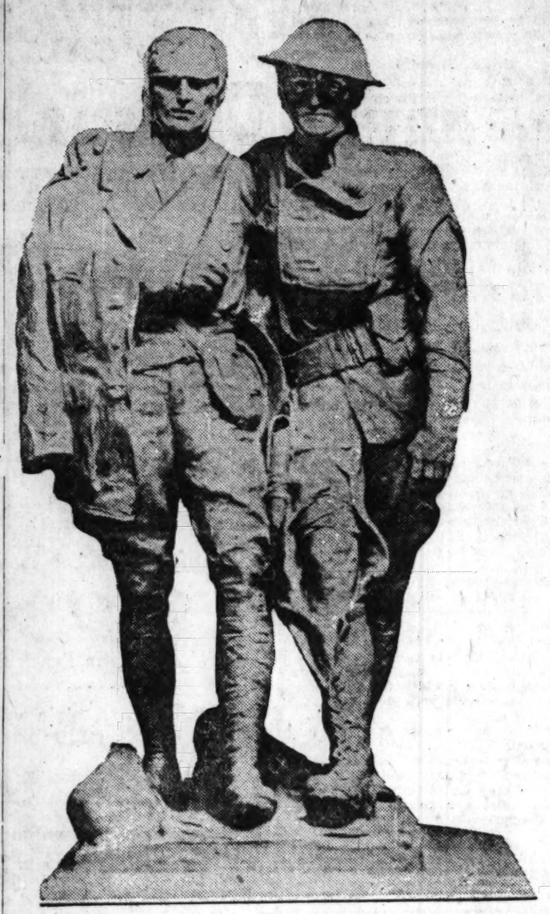
Dutch Reply "Impossible."

"If the government of the Netherlands desired confirmation as to the assurances conveyed by the legation of the United States at The Hague in respect to the attitude of the government of the United States and of American companies, such confirmation would appear to be furnished by the fact that in March and April, 1921, before any vote on the proposed legislation had been taken in the second chamber, another United States company had communicated in specific terms its wish to obtain a share in the concession under discussion.

"Accordingly, the legation was instructed to state that the United States government finds it impossible to regard the applications of American companies or its own expressions of interest in the matter as having been communicated too late to the government of the Netherlands. . . .

"The minister was finally instructed to express the hope of this government that the government of the Netherlands would find itself yet able to settle this question in accordance with the fundamental principle of reciprocity, which is regarded as of the greatest importance in relation to the exploitation of natural resources."

"BROTHERS IN ARMS"



The comradeship in arms of American and Canadian college men in the world war was symbolized in the unveiling of a statue, "Brothers in Arms," at the University of Chicago on Friday. The ceremonies took place at the Alpha Delta Phi house at 5747 University avenue, the statue being that fraternity's war memorial. The occasion was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Chicago chapter. It brought together 200 alumni from New York to Los Angeles, including the eight living charter members of the local chapter. The statue was done by Robert Aitken and is highly regarded as a work of art. A replica is to be placed in each of the twenty-five chapter houses of the fraternity.

CHINA'S FAMINE DEATH TOLL CUT BY YANKEE AID

Red Cross Highways Are Roads to Life.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

YUCHENG, Shantung, China, June 11.—Two splendid highways, more than thirty miles long, which were built by the American Red Cross as a means of saving the lives of 120,000 Chinese famine victims were turned over today to Shantung province in the presence of a distinguished assemblage.

The keynote of the speeches made by the Chinese authorities was deepest appreciation of the timely aid of the Americans which not only saved directly many thousands of lives, but also set an example which warded hundreds of thousands of famishing Chinese from death by starvation.

Opens New Way to Sea.

As the result Shantung province owns one of the finest highways in China which, with the new road now being built from Yuchang to Haifeng will open this section to a new route from the sea which greatly will facilitate grain distribution in the event of another famine.

Hundreds of thousands of American dollars went into construction of the road and only famine victims were employed, and these were paid in rations sufficient to provide food for their families.

Fewer Deaths than Expected.

Owing to the mildness of the winter season the famine's toll was lighter than it was expected to be. Better transport was possible, and owing to the American campaign in behalf of the victims sympathy and coöperation were so stimulated that grain was taken almost continuously to Anping for distribution.

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Miss Patricia Collinge, the actress, was married last night to James Nichols Smith, son of Harry A. Smith, president of the National Fire Insurance company of Hartford, Conn.

Miss Collinge scored her first New York success as Youth in "Everywoman." She was in George Tyler's production of "Pollyanna." She last appeared on Broadway during the past season, where she played in A. E. Thomas' comedy "Just Suppose."

FACULTY OF LAKE FOREST COLLEGE HIT BY SHAKEUP

President Herbert Moore of Lake Forest college yesterday announced the names of ten additions to the faculty of the institution and of seven who will leave the school this week. It is the biggest shakeup in the history of the college.

According to the announcement, the college will enter upon a new objective. In the past it has been noted as a liberal arts school, but in the future its chief distinction will be preparation of teachers for high schools and of young men and women for business careers.

The factulty has been rearranged with this idea in view. Three professors, five instructors, and successors to the dean of women and men's athletic coach have been appointed by the board of trustees. Miss Mary Hamilton, dean of women, is going to Europe for a year and will be succeeded by Miss Margaret Kehr, a Wellesley graduate. Ralph Glaze, Dartmouth all-American end for two years, and who pitched several years for the Boston American league team, is the new director in athletics, succeeding Randall Derby of the University of Illinois. Dr. M. Bross Thomas, thirty-three years a professor of biblical literature, resigned and was tendered a farewell dinner by President Moore.

Synod's President Must Give All His Time to Job

The Augustana synod of the Swedish Lutheran church yesterday continued its deliberations on the proposed new constitution. The most important change made specifies that henceforth the president shall give all his time to the work of the synod. The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary society of the synod elected for the thirtieth consecutive year Mrs. Emmy Evald of Chicago as president. The treasurer reported that the society had raised $79,000 for missions during the last year.

"HOME OF THE BABY LOBSTER"

The North American Restaurant is in one of Chicago's finest buildings. You can't miss it. The entrance is right on the corner of two of Chicago's busiest Streets—State and Monroe Streets. It is only one block South of Madison Street and one block North of Adams Street. It is only a step or two from the financial district, important office buildings and shopping places. The restaurant itself is the last word in restaurant architecture in America. Its decoration, in a rich cream color, its high ceilings and its system of cooling and ventilating, which provide a constant flow of pure washed air, make it without doubt the most attractive and comfortable dining place in the City. In fact, it is known throughout the Country as the

And you are provided with snowy white linen and silverware glistening with cleanliness. Everything possible is done to make the restaurant attractive, comfortable and homelike.

We are always glad to have you linger at your table for after lunch or dinner cigars or conversation. You will see many business men, shoppers and family groups spending a pleasant hour or two here. And you are welcome to stay just as long as you wish.

But for those whose time is limited, or who wish to dine quickly, the North American is ideal. There is a table ready for you—always. And dining "A la North American" has the great advantage of instantaneous selection from an array of tempting food always displayed before your eyes. Much of it is cooked before your eyes. There are no annoying delays. You get just what you want and you get it immediately.

And because you dine "A la North American" (which means all superfluities are eliminated and you are charged only for food and the necessary cost of preparation) the portions are big—often ample for two—and the prices far below what any good restaurant or hotel must charge to include service.

You can't get a mere cup of coffee here. But you do get an individual two-cup pot of coffee for 10 cents—a lower price than most good places charge for a single cup.

One of the best ventilating systems ever installed keeps the air pure and cool

TAXI WAR QUIZ BY ALDERMEN TO OPEN TOMORROW

City Will Slap $10,000 Bonds on Drivers.

The city council local transportation committee yesterday ordered the heads of every taxicab concern in the city to appear before it tomorrow morning for a rigid inquiry into the causes of the feud.

At the same time an ordinance requiring every taxi driver to put up a bond of at least $10,000 was ordered drafted at a meeting of the council committee on taxi regulation. The legal department began work on the ordinance immediately.

Chief Fitzmorris was also authorized to revoke the license of any taxicab chauffeur found with a revolver or other deadly weapon in his possession. This allows the police to search chauffeurs.

Twenty-three Checker Crivers were arrested in the loop yesterday for not having cab stand licenses.

Abe Schwartz, arrested Friday night following a shooting at a Yellow cab station at the Checker garage at May and Harrison streets, of which he was superintendent, was discharged yesterday in the Maxwell street court. Frank Spera, Checker chauffeur, arrested the same night for alleged assault on Yellow taxicabs, was also freed by Judge Schulman.

M. J. Dempsey, president of the Diamond Cab company, protested against the action of the police department in arresting seven chauffers of his company for failure to have public cab stand licenses. He declared a check covering license payments in full had been refused by the city when submitted.

PLUMB LEAGUE ADVOCATES FIGHT ON RAIL PAY CUT

Scathing Attack Made on Demands of Roads.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—"Railroad managers taste blood and want more" is the caption to a statement issued here by the Plumb Plan league regarding the recent cut ordered in railroad workers' wages.

This organization, which is agitating nationalization of the railroads with employés as participating partners, hints that the workers will not accept the wage cut, and there are rumblings in labor quarters here of a general railroad strike, although officials of the workers' unions in Washington are silent on the subject.

Resistance Is Urged.

In giving encouragement to resistance of the wage cut by the workers the Plumb Plan league goes on record with the following:

"The railroad managements have licked their lips over the 12 per cent cut in wages to take effect July 1, decided it tastes pretty good for a starter, and are howling for more, as is evidenced by a demand made upon the railway labor board at Chicago last week for the total elimination of the entire raise in wages granted last August.

"At the same time they are demanding, in curt terms and with much show of heat, that wages be cut to the bone; they are importuning senators and congressmen to pass a bill giving them right to collect over $700,000,000 alleged to be due them out of the national treasury.

Cites Another Demand.

"And they demand the right to have fifteen years to pay the $800,000,000 they owe the government.

"In other words, they want the people to pay them all they claim the government owes them without delay and without investigation, despite the fact that the contracts entered into between them and the government expressly stipulated that any amounts due them should be deducted from what they claim the government owes them.

"They claim that if the money they allege Uncle Sam owes them is to be offset by what they owe him they will fail in paying the interest on bonds and dividends on stock, which will drive them into bankruptcy.

"Please page the senators and congressmen who voted for the Cummins-Esch bill!"

600 Princeton Students Sign Wilson "Platform"

Princeton, N. J., June 11.—The signatures of more than 600 Princeton undergraduates to the platform of the Woodrow Wilson society of Princeton will be personally presented to the former president tomorrow in his Washington home.

The tribute is made to Mr. Wilson as "Princeton's foremost graduate," and is strictly nonpartisan.

The society, a part of the national council of Wilson clubs for collecting historical data and founding Wilson scholarships, was formed to "commemorate the ideals and achievements of the former president dufing the war."

STANLEY FIELD TELLS OF SERVICE MUSEUM OFFERS

Practical services of the department of geology of the great Field museum of natural history in Grant park were pointed out yesterday by Stanley Field, president of the museum.

"In the geological department a large space is devoted to the economic collections, in which mineral substances are grouped and labeled according to their industrial uses," he said. "These include collections numbering about 10,000 displayed specimens of ores of the precious and base metals, representatives of some of the simpler metallurgical processes, collections of various alkali minerals and their products, such as salt, soda and potash, and many varieties of clays, each specimen of these being accompanied by a burned briquette showing its character when burned.

"There are also collections illustrating varieties of coal and asphalt and their products, and about 300 specimens of crude petroleums from various fields in the United States, some o fthe prodults of these, and a collection illustrating the more important derivatives of coal tar. A few typical metallurgical processes, such as the smelting of iron and the cyanide process of gold extraction, have been illustrated by models so designed and labeled as to make the nature of the processes very evident.

"The interest and eagerness with which all these exhibits are studied lead the museum authorities to believe that many people have acquired through them a much clearer idea of the relations of their individual work to the industry in which they are engaged."

GAMBLING RAID TRAPS SEVEN.

William Margun, owner of a saloon at 600 West Madison street, was booked on a charge of operating a handbook and six other men were booked as inmates of a disorderly house as the result of a raid yesterday by Detective Sergeants Wragg and Andre.

VAST INCREASE IN INDUSTRY HAZARD SHOWN FOR 1920

Employers of labor in Illinois paid approximately $1,250,000 in benefits under the terms of the wrkmen's compensation act in 1920, according to an incomplete report made public yesterday by the Illinois industrial commission. This figure is almost two and one-half times greater than for 1919.

The report, which will be ready for submission to the governor July 1, indicates that the 1920 total of 55,814 industrial accidents, 597 were fatal. In addition, there were about 6,000 noncompensable accidents. In 1919 the total was 38,289, of which 535 were fatal. The compensation paid that year aggregated $544,645.

26 Die from Polluted Water.

Of the nonfatal accidents of last year, fourteen resulted in total disability. In addition to those listed as "fatal accidents," twenty-six deaths resulted from drinking polluted water, and compensation was paid on those.

The report is expected to show again, as it did last year, that the miner follows the most hazardous occupation of any Illinois laboring man. The 1920 figures are not complete on this, but in 1919 there were more deaths and more disabilities among miners and consequently more compensation paid them than any other group. Total number of cases, 7,797.

Other Hazardous Work.

The metal products workers came next in 1919, with 4,123 cases in their group, which includes workers in foundries, lead industries, ornamental iron workers, sheet metal laborers, stamping mill employés, makers of plumbing, gas, and electric fixtures, and jewelry and watch makers, as classified by the commission.

The compensation act provides that in case of death from accidents in the occupations listed therein, the dependants shall receive a sum equal to four times the average annual earnings of the employé, but not less than $1,650 nor more than $3,500. A widow with one child receives $1,750 as a minimum, and if there are two or more children the minimum is $1,850.

The act also provides varying amounts of compensation for the loss of fingers, toes, hands, feet, eyes, etc.

The attitude of labor toward the employer just now is illustrated, according to A. V. Becker, secretary of the commission, in the extra number of men coming in with complaints.

SOON WE'LL BE THE HEALTHIEST OF ALL CITIES

Again Health Commissioner Robertson asserts Chicago is becoming the healthiest of cities. If present conditions continue, Chicago will have the lowest death rate in the world, he announced yesterday.

Chlorination of water, pasteurizing milk, and enforcing the health laws without fear or favor are some of the reasons, he said.

Deaths from tuberculosis were 225 fewer during the first five months of 1921 than the first five of 1920. There were a total of 2,649 last year, and 4,169 in 1915.

BANKERS TO GET BUSY HERE ON LIVESTOCK NEEDS

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Possibility of meeting additional credit needs of the live stock industry through private banking channels rather than by government loans will be canvassed at a conference of bankers of the west at a meeting in Chicago next Wednesday.

The conference was called by Secretary of Treasury Mellon today following yesterday's gathering attended by treasury and federal reserve board officials, governors of federal reserve banks at New York and Kansas City, and J. P. Morgan.

Secretary Mellon will not attend the Chicago meeting but will be represented by John R. Mitchell, member of the federal reserve board, and Eugene Meyer Jr., managing director of the War Finance corporation.

BILL TO REGULATE PACKERS CALLED BOON TO PACKERS

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—The packing control bill, known as the Haugen measure, which passed the house last week, was characterized here today, by Benjamin C. Marsh, legislative director of the Farmers' National council, as "a gold brick, which the packers' lawyers helped prepare to cripple the federal trade commission and tie the hands of an attorney general who might not be subservient to the packers."

"The packers' monopoly," Marsh said, "their strangle grip on producers of live stock and their exploitation of the consumers will continue as long as the packers privately own refrigerator cars. As congress turned the United States treasury and the interstate commerce commission over to the railroads, the American people won't get real packer control legislation at this session."

FALL FATAL TO AGED MAN.

READY FOR CHICAGO AND VICINITY

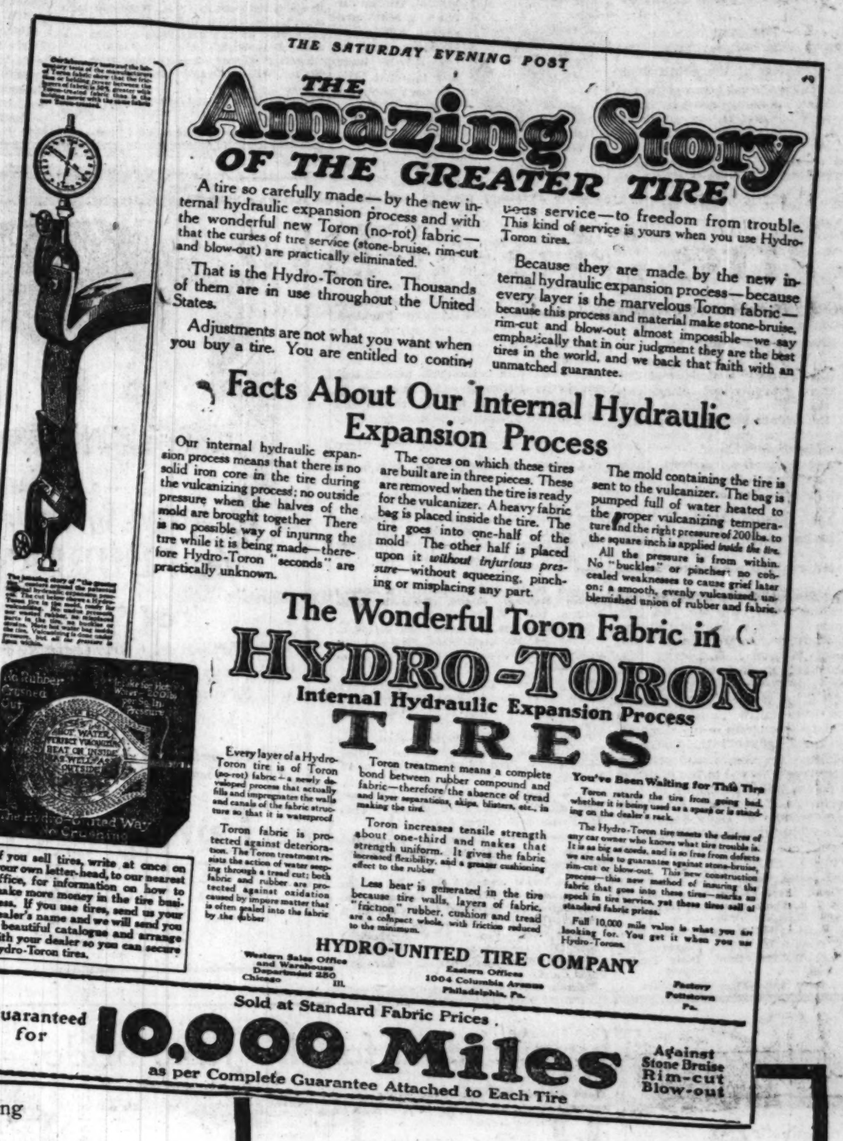
Greater tire mileage—an unheard-of guarantee—a tire made by an improved process, with a rot-proof fabric: These are some of the advantages we now offer tire dealers and car owners in Chicago and vicinity.

You will want Hydro-Toron tires when you know how they are made—what mileage they are guaranteed for—how they are built to prevent the common tire troubles.

Big as cord tires—made of Toron rot-proof fabric—under the wonderful internal hydraulic expansion process.

BETTER than any cord tire, and yet sold at STANDARD FABRIC PRICES.

We PROVE our claim that Hydro-Toron tires are better than cords by guaranteeing them for 10,000 MILES AGAINST STONE-BRUISE, RIM-CUT and BLOW-OUT. (Read full-page advertisement from Saturday Evening Post here reproduced.)



THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

THE Amazing Story OF THE GREATER TIRE

A tire so carefully made—by the new internal hydraulic expansion process and with the wonderful new Toron (no-rot) fabric—that the curses of tire service (stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out) are practically eliminated.

That is the Hydro-Toron tire. Thousands of them are in use throughout the United States.

Adjustments are not what you want when you buy a tire. You are entitled to continuous service—to freedom from trouble. This kind of service is yours when you use Hydro-Toron tires.

Because they are made by the new internal hydraulic expansion process—because every layer is the marvelous Toron fabric—because this process and material make stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out almost impossible—we say emphatically that in our judgment they are the best tires in the world, and we back that faith with an unmatched guarantee.

Facts About Our Internal Hydraulic Expansion Process

Our internal hydraulic expansion process means that there is no solid iron core in the tire during the vulcanizing process; no outside pressure when the halves of the mold are brought together. There is no possible way of injuring the tire while it is being made—therefore Hydro-Toron "seconds" are practically unknown.

The cores on which these tires are built are in three pieces. These are removed when the tire is ready for the vulcanizer. A heavy fabric bag is placed inside the tire. The tire goes into one-half of the mold. The other half is placed upon it without injurious pressure—without squeezing, pinching or misplacing any part.

The mold containing the tire is sent to the vulcanizer. The bag is pumped full of water heated to the proper vulcanizing temperature and at the right pressure of 200 lbs. to the square inch is applied inside the tire.

All the pressure is from within. No "buckles" or pinches; no concealed weaknesses to cause grief later on; a smooth, evenly vulcanized, unblemished union of rubber and fabric.

The Wonderful Toron Fabric in HYDRO-TORON Internal Hydraulic Expansion Process TIRES

Every layer of a Hydro-Toron tire is of Toron (no-rot) fabric—a newly developed process that actually fills and impregnates the walls and canals of the fabric structure so that it is waterproof.

Toron fabric is protected against deterioration. The Toron treatment resists the action of water seeping through a tread cut; both fabric and rubber are protected against oxidation caused by impure matter that is often sealed into the fabric by the rubber.

Toron treatment means a complete bond between rubber compound and fabric—therefore the absence of tread and layer separations, skips, blisters, etc., in making the tire.

Toron increases tensile strength about one-third and makes that strength uniform. It gives the fabric increased flexibility, and a greater cushioning effect to the rubber.

Less heat is generated in the tire because tire walls, layers of fabric, "friction" rubber, cushion and tread are a coherent whole, with friction reduced to the minimum.

You've Been Waiting for This Tire

Toron retards the tire from going bad, whether it is being used as a spare or is standing on the dealer's rack.

The Hydro-Toron tire insures the choicest of any car owner who knows what tire trouble is. It is as big as cords, and is so free from defects we are able to guarantee against stone-bruise, rim-cut or blow-out. This new construction process—this new method of insuring the fabric that goes into these tires—marks an epoch in tire service, yet these tires sell at standard fabric prices.

Full 10,000 mile value is what you are looking for. You get it when you use Hydro-Toron.

The Greater Tire
HYDRO-TORON

Internal Hydraulic Expansion Process

These tires are made in non-skid only. See price list below. The 30x3, 30x31-2 and 31x4 sizes are made in clincher style only.

All other sizes are made in straight-side only.

Special attention of both dealers and car owners is called to the panel at the right of this page.

We emphasize the point that in our internal hydraulic expansion process every Hydro-Toron tire is made with the same pressure and strain on the inside of the tire that it has when in service on the wheel.

Our factory has been using this process exclusively for three years.

The experience that Hydro-Toron users have had in that time enables us to make this 10,000-mile guarantee against stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out.

The Internal Hydraulic Expansion Process

Cord tires are all made by an internal expansion process, usually using air for the expansion.

In our internal hydraulic expansion process we use water, which, besides giving a more even pressure than can be applied by air, enables us to vulcanize the tire from the inside and outside at the same time by heating the water to vulcanizing heat before putting it inside the tire.

This means uniform vulcanizing—with layers, cushion, breaker, etc., in proper place when the tire is finished, and preventing the buckles, blisters and separations common in most tires.

What "TORON" Means in Tire Building

The Toron treatment of cotton materials is a patented chemical process—owned by the Pratt Products Co. of Boston, Mass., and controlled for treatment of tire materials by the Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. of Boston—one of the largest fabric manufacturers.

It is our belief that all good tires of the future will eventually use the Toron treatment of tire materials.

Such treatment means better tires because it produces greater tensile strength in the fabric, absolutely seals the fabric against rot, prolongs the life of the tire, causes the fabric to take up more rubber, creates greater adhesive power, and thus makes more mileage a certainty for every user of Hydro-Toron tires.

BOLTING HORSE PERILS CROWD AT CLUB'S SHOW

Frightened Animal Stages Thriller at South Shore.

Thrills not on the program were furnished visitors at the South Shore Country club's annual horse show yesterday when the horse driven by Harry Newman bolted and threw the driver from his seat in the rig. Several men rushed out and rescued Newman.

Cries of alarm from thousands of women frightened the horse, which ran around and around the track. Each time he passed it was feared he would plunge through into the grandstand.

Women hurriedly left their places in the boxes. Men called out in a futile attempt to calm and stop the maddened animal, which at each turn whirled the light carriage crashing against the frail wooden fence separating women and children from danger.

Student Stops Runaway.

After the horse had made several rounds David Jones, a student of Culver Military academy and former captain of the Culver Black Horse troop, one of the events at the horse show, mounted and galloped in pursuit of the frothing thoroughbred.

Catching up to the runaway, Jones swung his mount in front of the horse's head and drove him steadily to the fence, where he brought him to a stop. The crowd held its breath at the masterly horsemanship of young Jones, then burst into a loud cheer for him when they realized the danger he had averted.

Among the boxholders who witnessed the thrilling chase were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Heyworth, Samuel Cozzens, George M. Reynolds, William du Pont, Thomas E. Wilson, J. K. Dering, Otto W. Lehmann, E. J. Lehmann, C. D. Peacock, and George M. Whitney.

Hundreds of children from orphan asylums were taken to the show in trucks and automobiles in the morning. Society women gave up their boxes to the kiddies. Ice cream and crackerjack were freely served to the children. Ponies driven and ridden only by children performed. "Dempsey" and "Carpentier," William E. Dee's boxing ponies, occasioned much merriment.

MOVE TO OPEN UP PERSHING ROAD TO FOREST PRESERVES

ALD. J. B. McDONOUGH.

The preliminary council committee action will probably be taken tomorrow to make Pershing road (old 39th street) a through street from Lake Michigan to the site of the Chicago Zoological garden in the forest preserves, Ald. Joseph B. McDonough of the Fifth ward has taken a leading part with the Chicago Plan commission in urging this improvement.

From Halsted street to Racine avenue Pershing road is now closed, and for part of the distance Bubbly creek occupies the path of the road. Ald. McDonough has prevailed upon owners of the property abutting the creek to consent to filling it in and making a street 108 feet wide.

A large delegation from the Central Manufacturing district and Packingtown appeared last week before a subcommittee composed of Ald. Timothy Hogan, W. J. Lynch, and Robert Mulcahy, and this committee will recommend the improvement tomorrow to the council committee on streets and alleys. No opposition is anticipated.

Girl Scorns Swain Who Faked Robbery to Be Hero

"I wished to be a hero in Angela's eyes because I love her," Frank Groenwalx, 2250 Farragut street, said recently concerning his attempt to pose as the victim of robbers who supposedly had entered the home of Angela Porst, 2248 Berwyn avenue. Judge Morgan put Frank on six months' probation to keep him away from Angela after her father had said the girl wished nothing more to do with the youth.

Groenwalx was found tied to the Porst sink Thursday. Gas jets had been turned on, chairs overturned, and apparently there had been a struggle. Groenwalx told of "five bandits." Later he confessed staging the affair because he had been unable to give Angela a $900 ring.

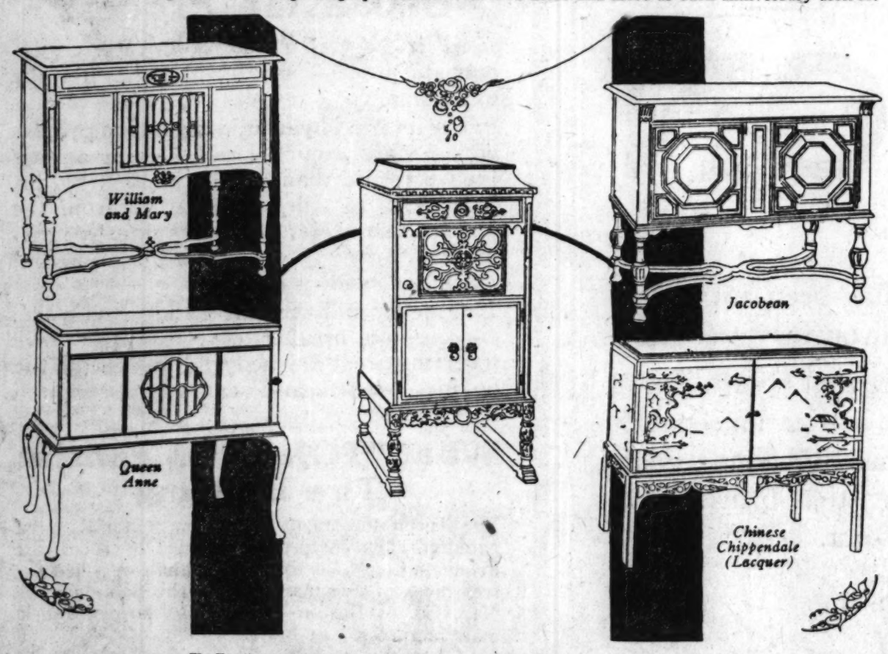
The gift ideal for the June bride:

A "Period" Vocalion

Your gift of this supreme musical phonograph will be treasured more and more as each anniversary arrives.



The Vocalion shown in the center is a Florentine Period model—a beautiful example of the technique of the Italian styles when they were world leaders in the arts and crafts. The decorations on this case are in polychrome on walnut finish, done in a very restrained manner, and would be as worthy of admiration in any well furnished room as a picture that might be placed there for decorative purposes only.

The Aeolian Company has just brought out an entirely new line of Console and Upright "Period" Designs

—a comprehensive array of Art cabinets, every one of which is calculated to harmonize perfectly with modern home interiors. The motifs of these designs have been taken from historic pieces, all known to furniture connoisseurs. The styles of Chippendale, the brothers Adam, Sheraton, Hepplewhite and Duncan Phyfe (Early American) are represented, as well as those of unknown cabinet makers of earlier periods —Jacobean, Italian (Florentine), Queen Anne, Gothic, William and Mary, and others. In addition to the beauty of cabinet design, these models' charm is intensified by exquisite finish—rich mahogany, English brown mahogany, shaded walnut, lacquer, polychrome, and antique oak. Prices $300 and upward.

The high musical quality of the Vocalion is further enhanced in these Period Models. Each is equipped with the famous Graduola Tone-Control, Universal Tone Arm—which plays all records in a superior manner; Automatic Stop—simple to operate and famous for its accuracy—and a unique and convenient record filing arrangement.

This week, special introductory terms---as low as $10 monthly.
Very liberal exchange allowances on phonographs and talking machines of other makes.

E. O. EXCELL, SONG PUBLISHER AND EVANGELIST, DIES

Long Chorister Ally of the Noted Sam Jones.

Prof. Edwin O. Excell, world famous evangelist and wealthy publisher of religious song books, died yesterday afternoon in Wesley Memorial hospital after an illness of more than six months.

Prof. Excell had been known in evangelistic circles for more than a quarter of a century. Born in Uniontown, Pa., Dec. 13, 1851, he married Ella Jane Bell of Brady's Bend, Pa., when he was 20 years old and moved to the Pacific coast.

There, according to his friends, he was a brick mason, studying music in his odd hours. According to the story, he had a habit of singing at his work. One day Sam Jones, "the Georgia evangelist," visited the place where he was working. Attracted by Prof. Excell's voice, he engaged him as a chorister, and for the next twenty years the two were inseparable.

Begins Publishing Hymn Books.

In 1881 Prof. Excell began the publishing of hymn books. These rapidly attained a wide usage in Protestant churches the world over.

Since 1914 Prof. Excell has been an officer of the International Sunday School association and acted as musical director and choir leader at its conventions. He had visited virtually every state and province on the North American continent.

Divorce Suit Aggravates Illness.

Prof. Excell entered the Wesley Memorial hospital on Nov. 1, 1920. At that time he was reported as suffering from sclerosis of the spinal cord and heart disease.

This was aggravated, members of his family declared, by the filing of a divorce suit against his grandson, Edwin O. Excell. Edwin's wife charged that the evangelist had attempted to alienate Edwin's affections.

Prof. Excell was a Methodist and a Prohibitionist. His publishing offices were located at 410 South Michigan avenue. His home was at 4308 Oakenwald avenue.

Associate Pays Tribute.

"Mr. Excell was possessed of a voice which for range and power was said by competent authorities to have been without an equal during his younger years," said Charles H. Gabriel, famous gospel hymn composer and friend and associate of Mr. Excell for forty years, who resides in River Forest. "He could sing from low C in the bass to upper G in the tenor register.

"He was the owner of the largest hymn book publishing house in the world, selling annually well over 1,000,000 books. He was without doubt the best, greatest and last of his line in the profession of 'song-evangelist,' choir director and leader of multitudes in song. There were no choirs in his earlier career and he would often lead as many as 20,000 or even 30,000 persons in song unassisted.

"I traveled throughout the United States and Canada with Mr. Excell for many, many years and knew him for a great man."

FARMERS LAUNCH HUNDRED MILLION FINANCE LEAGUE

Final steps in the organization of the $100,000,000 Farmers' Finance corporation were taken here yesterday when the executive committee of the United States Grain Growers, Inc., received word that the articles of incorporation and by laws had been filed at Washington, Del.

C. H. Gustafson, Lincoln, Neb., was elected president; Frank M. Myers, Fort Dodge, Ia., secretary, and W. G. Eckhardt, De Kalb, Ill., treasurer. These officers hold similar positions in the U. S. Grain Growers, Inc., of which the Finance corporation is a subsidiary.

The election of the officers of the Finance corporation is temporary and they will serve until the next meeting of the full board of directors, when permanent organization will be effected.

The Finance corporation was designed to enable the farmers' grain marketing machinery to finance the movement of crops raised by its members. Under the articles the corporation is authorized to give financial assistance to all cooperative organizations concerned with the marketing of farm products.

Phone Girl's on Job if It Is Only Dog Chasing Rat

The alertness of a telephone operator resulted in a Main 13 call to the Grand Crossing police early yesterday. As she answered the flash on her switchboard she heard a series of crashes and a barking dog. The telephone was in the automobile repair shop of Clarence Holland, 216 East 63d street. When a police squad, revolvers in hand, pried open a rear door they found Holland's dog worrying a freshly caught rat. The overturned telephone and furniture were mute testimony of a wild chase.

Justice Boyer Honored by Cook County Association

John F. Boyer, police magistrate of Evanston, was elected to succeed himself for the fourth term yesterday as president of the Cook County Justices, Police Magistrates, and Constables' association. He said yesterday he intends to combat efforts now being made at Springfield to do away with the office of justice of the peace. Justice of the Peace Samuel Harrison was chosen vice president.

Harvester Company Cuts Trucks $100 to $900

The International Harvester company last night announced a cut in all one to five ton trucks. Reductions range from $900 on a five ton truck to $100 on the one ton capacity.

ALIBI FREES BANDIT SUSPECT.

An alibi to the effect he was not in Joseph Wroblinsky's saloon, 7419 South Western avenue, when it was robbed and a son of Wroblinsky was wounded by four bandits caused the state yesterday to nolle prosse charges of robbery and assault to kill against Richard Lasner, 3528 Garfield avenue. The saloon owner identified Lasner in court as one of the bandits.

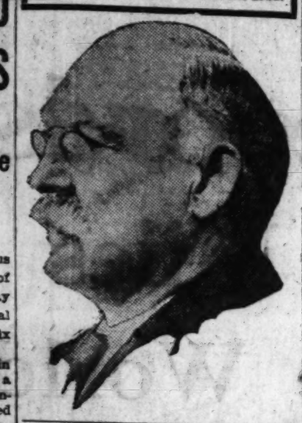
Born Dec. 13, 1851. Died June 11, 1921.



CHARGE ERROR IN PRESCRIPTION AT MURPHY INQUEST

The inquest over Miss Anna R. Murphy, Delaware hotel, who died Friday after a fall from the thirteenth floor of the Stock Exchange building, was postponed yesterday until next Thursday.

Miss Irene Murphy, her sister, told the coroner's jury that the woman had been ill for some time and was subject to fainting spells. She said Dr. William A. Peterson, 5053 Winthrop avenue, had given her sister a prescription last Tuesday, which was filled in a drug store.

"My sister took two doses, which affected her like an opiate," Miss Murphy said. "Two hours later a boy came from the drug store to say the prescription had been mistakenly filled."

Dr. Peterson testified he had prescribed a mild tonic for Miss Murphy and on Friday had examined her and found her apparently in good health.

JUDGE LIKENS HER BOY TO THE STRAYING LAMB

Mrs. Anna Paulius, 1779 Glybourn avenue, had Judge Trude puzzled yesterday.

"When my son is good he can stay with me," she said. "When he's bad he can't. I don't want him."

"Where's he going?" demanded the judge. "You turn him out on the street and you're sending him to hell. Don't you read the Bible? Didn't you ever hear how the Good Shepherd went out to find the lamb that had strayed from the fold? Stick to your boy. And Henry, stop worrying your mother. Make her love you. She ought to be the best friend you've got."

The judge will have another session with Mrs. Paulius and Henry, who is 17 years old, in the Domestic Relations court on June 20.

State Places a Special Guard Over Orthwein Jury

Assistant State's Attorney Lloyd Heth, in charge of the prosecution of Mrs. Cora Isabella Orthwein for the murder of Herbert P. Zeigler, announced yesterday that "owing to reports received by his office" he had placed special guards around the jury chosen yesterday. Prosecutor Heth refused to make public the nature of the reports. Taking of testimony in the case will begin tomorrow.

FLEX-A-TILE your roof

For cottage or mansion—for re-roofing, or for the new building, or right over the old shingles—use beautiful Flex-a-Tiles; the durable, fire-resisting, all-weather protection of asphalt, shingles or rolls.

Put on a roof that will last for years and years; that makes the house, with its attractive covering of Flex-a-Tile green (or red if you prefer) a beauty spot on the landscape.

UNVARYING QUALITY BUILT IN

The well known Richardson felt from our own mills is saturated and coated with Flex-a-Tile natural asphalt scientifically processed in our refineries, and then the slate chips from our own quarries are rolled into the hot asphalt. This really enamels the surface with a natural colored slate.

We control every material—every process—so that the quality must be right. Delicate instruments test the felt and asphalt; insure proper saturation; gauge the thickness and weight accurately. And skilled workmen, faithful to the practices of over half a century of felt and roofing manufacturing experience, take a pride in every foot of Flex-a-Tile they turn out.

YOUR DEALER KNOWS

how well made, how easily applied, how long-lasting Flex-a-Tiles are. Ask him to show them to you. See how beautiful, how perfect they are. And this real quality costs you no more than ordinary roofing.

Visit our mills and we'll gladly show you how Flex-a-Tiles are made up to standard all the time.

Paige Breaks All Speed Records for 5, 10, 20, 25, 50, 75 and 100 Miles

Now Stock Car Champion of the World

The Paige Six-66 Daytona model has proved itself the fastest stock car in the world. Here are the official figures of the A. A. A. Contest Board, under whose supervision these records were established and by whom they are officially approved.

May 2, 1921—Uniontown, Pa., Speedway

Distance.	Speed.	Time.
5 Miles	91.893 M. P. H.	3 Min. 15.88 sec.
10 "	91.958 "	6 " 31.48 "
15 "	92.157 "	9 " 45.96 "
20 "	92.132 "	13 " 1.48 "
25 "	90.186 "	16 " 37.94 "
50 "	90.160 "	33 " 16.43 "
75 "	89.976 "	50 " 00.80 "
89 "	89.000 "	60 " 00.00 "
100 "	89.702 "	66 " 53.26 "

Compare these records established by Ralph Mulford in a stock Paige with the speeds attained by special racing cars in the Memorial Day race at Indianapolis. The Paige, though a stock car which anyone can buy, is practically as fast as the greatest racing cars the world can build.

Notice especially the distance covered in one hour—just 89 miles. And the former stock car record for an hour was 83 miles. Remember that the Paige Daytona Model Six-66 broke the world's stock car record for one mile at Daytona Beach last January by making a mile in 35.01 seconds—102.8 miles per hour.

Speed—Power—Endurance Achieved Thru New Efficiencies

The Paige 66 is quite obviously a car of new efficiencies heretofore unattained. Its up-to-the-minute design—the superiority of its exclusive power plant—have been proved in a way none can doubt.

The Paige 66 also holds famous records for hill-climbing. It made the fastest official time of the year on the Pike's Peak climb. It holds more than a hundred local hill-climbing records in as many cities throughout the United States.

Paige dealers and owners have competed with every car of consequence in climbing hills at high speed and at low speed in high gear. These tests have demonstrated that the Paige exclusive motor delivers the most marvelous, steady power of any engine yet developed.

All Paige Prices Just Reduced

This week we announced new prices on all Paige models. This is the second reduction in 8 months. The Paige factory is determined to lead the industry in good value, as well as in performance.

Present Paige models, both the Six-66 and the Six-44, are the highest efficiency cars of their size it is possible to produce today. They were designed within the year. You do not need to fear depreciation from new models. They are now being built of recently purchased material. For the man who wants up-to-the-minute design, satisfying performance and close value, there is no car quite equal to the Paige today.

A group of business men from loomington, Ill., have made arrangements to ride on the Dempsey-Carpenter special fight train. Doc Krone will run over the New York Central. LEONARD TO GET $15,000 FOR BOUT ACROSS THE LAKE

Leonard has been given a flat guarantee of $15,000. Freedman also has been given a liberal guarantee, with a percentage privilege. This expense, and others, will put Fitz on the "nut" for $35,000.

In the Wake of the News

DEMPSEY'S WAR RECORD.

JACK DEMPSEY, because of his war record, or what most of his critics regard as a lack of one, will enter the ring against Carpentier July 2 carrying the sneers of a large part of the American sporting population. These same persons ordinarily would be "pulling" for a Yank victory against an invading titleseeker.

The Wake holds no brief for Dempsey. We, too, would have regarded him more highly if he had offered his services for active service—although it is almost a certainty he would never have entered the trenches because too valuable as a raiser of funds for athletic equipment or a boxing instructor at some army camp.

Dempsey did have dependents—his father, mother, and sisters—and contributed to their support. He did give his services for boxing shows for the benefit of soldiers' funds and many thousands of dollars were raised thereby. He did—although it is not generally known—finally decide to waive exemption and enter regular service, but the armistice came just at that time.

In our opinion, Dempsey is not a personal coward. He did not fear the danger of war. But he was badly advised by those who could profit by his ring earnings. He did not have the strength of character, or whatever it was, to disregard such advice.

Then came those fatal shipyards photos of Jack in patent leather shoes and brand new overalls. Before the men who fought overseas, Dempsey stands convicted as a slacker, despite his acquittal in a government trial.

Jack Dempsey never will be a popular champion in the true sunse.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

It looked like Grover Cleveland Alexander's arm had decided to hurl in its old accustomed style, when the big fellow faced the Boston Braves yesterday at the north side park and trimmed them neatly. The Cubs won, 6 to 3, but the three tallies credited to Boston didn't belong to them. Aleck should have had a shutout game, regardless of the lively ball and everything, but his mates bunched three blunders in one inning and handed the Braves their trio of tallies.

GROVER ALEXANDER.

Aleck allowed just five hits during the contest, and they were scattered over that many innings. He seemed to have the old speed; he threw many a curve, and fooled the boys with it, too. Toward the finish he got even faster, and was cutting loose as if keyed up with his own prowess—not having been able to show much in the way of prowess so far this year.

In Batting Limelight.

With the exception of the one inning, Aleck was given swell support both in the field and at bat. They piled up eleven base hits all told, but Aleck himself was the swatting hero, as well as the defensive star of the game.

He poled a three bagger over the center fielder's head in the third, a dandy liner. Nothing came of that, but in the fourth when the Cubs were behind, Aleck delivered a single that sent two men home and put the Bruins one run to the good. That one was all he needed.

Joe Oeschger, ace of the Braves' pitching staff, was sent to the slab by Manager Mitchell, who would have liked to win this game just to get even with some of the noisy rooters back of the Cub bench. Joe didn't have his usual control and seemed compelled to ease up a bit at times. The Cubs stung him hard.

Lasts Four Innings.

Oeschger was removed after the fourth inning in favor of a pinch hitter, and Mr. Mule Watson took the job. The Cubs treated him rather harshly.

Max Flack, who was in a swatting mood, started the first Cub attack with a single and galloped all the way home a moment later when Hollocher poled down the left line for two sacks. Perhaps that bit of an attack right there would have won for Aleck if the boys hadn't blundered.

In the fourth Barbare was safe on Holly's wide throw. Southworth singled, Cruise sacrificed, and Boeckel was allowed to walk., filling the bases. Holke slapped to Terry, who in his eagerness to start a double play messed things all up. One scored and three were still on. Ford's sacrifice fly let in another and then Daly made a wide peg to third, letting in another.

Cubs Come Right Back.

Singles by Barber, Warner and Aleck, with a pass to Sullivan, got three for the Cubs in the fourth. Terry's single and Barber's double added one in the fifth and Warner's pass and Flack's double made victory sure in the sixth.

CARP'S BACKERS ASKING 3½ TO 1

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Wall street's attitude toward the big fight is overwhelmingly in favor of Jack Dempsey. Little Carpentier money is in sight and those betting on the challenger are asking 3½ to 1.

Darneli & Co. of 44 Broad street, betting commissioners, report one offering that will probably find many takers. They have been handed $1,000 with instructions to place all or any part of it on Georges Carpentier to knock out Dempsey at odds of 1 to 20.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Boston, Mass., June 11.—[Special.]—Dominick Mulrennan came close to making this date historic in the annals of Woburn, which is one of the spokes of the Hub. A thousand of his fellow townsmen came to Fenway park to root for him, and for seven innings he looked like the best pitcher in the league, but in the eighth fortune frowned and he lost the opening game to the Red Sox, 4 to 2.

Mulrennan had good control and good support all the way to the eighth spasm and shut out the Duffites with only seven hits. In the same chapters the Sox (White), with a little help from Mike Menosky, gave Dominick a two run lead. He clung to it tenaciously until the breaks came in the eighth.

Pratt Leads with Double.

Pratt led off with a two base crack to the scoreboard back of Falk. Hendryx followed with a screamer to short and it squirted off McClellan's fingers for a single, scoring Pratt. McInnis laid down a bunt toward first and Sheely fielded it in plenty of time, but hit the runner in the back with the ball, and before it was retrieved Hendryx was on third and Stuffy on second.

Mulligan staved off the defeat by plucking a hot bounder off John Collins' bat and retiring him without letting McInnis home. Scott lofted a Texas leaguer into short center and scored Hendryx.

Pennock Drives in Run.

Faber was summoned to the slab with two on and one out. Mulligan again came to the rescue by nailing Ruel's bounder and retiring McInnis at the pan. But Pennock won his game with a clean drive to center, on which Scott rode home. Mostil flung the pill wildly to third and it got away from Mulligan, permitting Ruel to go home with the tally that cinched it.

The Gleasons scored their first run in the sixth on McClellan's single, Mulligan's sacrifice and Eddie Collins' single. A double play closed the chapter. In the seventh Mostil led with a single and Sheely hit one against the fence for two bases, scoring Johnny.

Before the game Mayor Golden of Woburn, heading a committee of prominent citizens, presented Mulrennan with a $300 diamond ring.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

In which sport are you most interested at the present time—baseball or boxing?

Where Asked.

Dearborn and Washington streets.

The Answers.

Miss Fannie Watinsky, 325 South Robey street, home girl—I like baseball best, because I don't know anything about boxing. I watch the baseball games and enjoy them. I wish I was a boy; I'd play baseball. Boxing is too brutal, from what little I know of it, but baseball is a nice clean sport.

Jack O'Keefe, 2359 Grand avenue, café owner—I like boxing. I think the art of self-defense should be taught in the public schools. It helps a man go out in the business world and make good and be able to face any conditions. Boxing teaches a man to fight in more ways than one.

Mrs. Birdie Hart, 2642 West Warren avenue, housewife — I like baseball. I have seen lots and lots of baseball games and I am crazy about them. I never saw a prize fight. Some people say they are not the proper things for women, but I would like to see one some time. Maybe then I would change my idea about which one I liked.

Charles F. Reynolds, 4754 West End avenue, salesman—It's a tossup with me. I like both of 'em. They should have boxing in Illinois. A fellow has to go up in Wisconsin to see a bout, and it costs you three times as much money as it should. If boxing is a success in other cities, why not in Chicago?

Miss Emma Potter, 763 East 43d street, saleswoman—I saw a boxing match and liked it. But I've seen more ball games. I like both of them. They are both fine sports and bring out the best there is in a man. And all the women admire athletic men, you know.

BROWN SETS NEW 1,000 YARD RECORD

Philadelphia, Pa., June 11.—Lawrence A. The record was held since 1910 by Melvin W. Sheppard of the Irish-American A. C. of New York.

"CARP" REMAINS FISTIC MYSTERY TO RING SCRIBES

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

Manhasset, L. I., June 11.—[Special.]—With Gorges Carpentier rounding out another week at his most exclusive camp, we find there are many things which still puzzle us to the lowdown on the real racket going on behind those barbed wire entanglements and stoutly locked gates.

The experts have had no opportunity to do much experting for the reason that only two days every week have been set aside for them to sit in and pass judgment on the Frenchman's chanses against the champion, Jack Dempsey.

Write Own Ticket.

The French champion has a habit of cutting out all boxing on the days set aside for the scribes, with the result that the expert crew is just out of luck, that's all. However, Georges Carpentier looks like a well conditioned fighter, and so does Jack Dempsey. That about makes it fair all around, doesn't it? Well, now you can step out and write your own ticket.

Among the few things we discovered during our trips to the Carpentier workshop was that Carpentier is sailing along on a smooth, even keel, trying to pack on some extra beef. Georges wants to be within a respectable distance of Dempsey's weight when they toe the scratch in the Jersey City arena next month.

Air of Mystery Pervades.

When the experts show on the scene they see nothing except just what Georges wants them to see. His work in the gym is done with the grace of an artist. The boxing he shows the expert gang is done in the same finished manner, but the air of mystery surrounding the entire camp has everybody doing some tall guessing.

Has the Frenchman got an ace up his sleeve which he does not care to flash? Or is there something lacking in his makeup which he is afraid will be revealed before the day of the contest? Whatever it is, the reason is not apparent to those of us who write pieces for the paper so that the world might learn the exact facts concerning the challenger and his chances against the American scrapper.

Right Wallop Powerful.

Carpentier has shown us what we believe to be his best asset, a wonderful right hand wallop. Jack Dempsey has let us in on everything he has in the fistic line and does not care a whoop what anybody thinks about his style or chances in the coming conflict with Georges.

Can that sharp shooting right of Georges offset the larruping shots of the title holder? Will Georges be able to sneak one by on Jack? Can Georges spot the Utah mauler about twenty pounds and beat him?

These are some of the questions which are puzzling the experts and fight fans, and final opinion in the matter is being reserved until the Frenchman lifts the ban and consents to step out and show us more of his wares.

A SEAT FOR EACH TICKET, PROMISE FOR TITLE FIGHT

Ample Protection Will Prevent Disorder.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—Tex Rickard's arena in Jersey City is nearly finished. Tex did not wait until the last day this time, and nothing has interfered with the progress of the work. The huge yellow pine structure will seat more than 60,000.

TEX RICKARD. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Some of the bouts in New Jersey, run by reckless promoters apparently only out for the money and caring little about making a lasting reputation, have been almost a scandal. There has been little effort to protect the purchasers of high priced seats.

Scandal at Leonard Bout.

At the Kansas-Leonard affair in the Harrison ball park crowds scaled the fences and seized the best seats near the ring. People coming in with tickets found no ushers and were unable to locate seats they had paid for, and, in many cases, ushers or fake ushers put chairs in the aisles and sold them, defrauding both the management and the government.

Pickpockets worked the crowd in gangs and there was general disorder. Thousands who came from New York resolved never to cross the river again to see a fight. Some who went by automobile were caught in such a jam that they didn't get back to New York until 5 o'clock in the morning.

But Tex Rickard has always been remarkably competent in handling crowds.

Tex Promises Order.

"There'll be no confusion at the big fight," Tex told me. "My arena has eighteen entrances. Ticket holders will find their entrance gate and go directly to their seats. The different seat sections are separated by board fences. I am not using barbed wire as I did at Toledo, because I won't need it. I arranged for complete police protection when I took the bout to Jersey City.

"One thousand policemen in uniform—regular city police—will be stationed in the arena and at the entrances, and there will be no shifting into seats nearer the ring.

"I advise all spectators from New York not to go to New Jersey by automobile. The arena can be reached easily from the tube or any of the ferries. The best way will be to cross the river by tube or ferry and walk to the arena. It's only a short distance.

No Chance for Crowding.

"There will be no crowding because there are many streets leading to the arena, and because of the many entrances."

The cash ticket sale has now reached a sum that will cover Rickard's outlay. Rickard had to take in a little over $900,000 before he could see a dollar profit. Financially, this is the biggest sporting event in the history of the world.

Carpentier's chance to make something out of the fight, after all the talk of a huge purse, depends upon winning. Of course, as world's champion he could make a great fortune. The moving pictures will be worth little if Dempsey wins in two or three rounds, more if it goes the limit, and a tremendous sum if Carpentier wins.

In that case the pictures would earn millions in Europe alone. In this country they could be shown only in New Jersey, owing to the extremely unpopular law in this country that prohibits interstate commerce in moving pictures of ring contests.

No Plans for Movies.

Rickard owns half the motion picture rights, and Dempsey and Carpentier each one-quarter. So far the pictures have cut little figure in the fight and arrangements for taking them have not yet been made.

Building the arena was figured at $100,000, and it has gone to $200,000. Rickard always has had hard luck with his arenas. They invariably cost him more than the estimate, but he never had one run up like this before.

He built a big arena for the Jeffries-Johnson fight in Central park in San Francisco and when Gov. Gillette sidestepped the event at the last moment Rickard jumped to Nevada and had a new arena started at Reno within twenty-four hours. He had the Frisco arena wrecked and the lumber sold for a fraction of its original cost and was out the lease and labor.

The Reno arena was expensive because it was a rushed job.

At Toledo the arena ran about $40,000 over the original estimate, but it was enlarged to hold the huge crowd that never turned up, which caused a serious loss.

The first rush for tickets to the Jersey City fight cleaned out the $50 section, but there are still plenty of seats unsold, and the arena is so arranged that the cheaper seats give fully as good a view of the ring as those nearest the platform.

SIX ILLINOIS PLAYERS ON BASEBALL STARS OF BIG TEN SEASON

BIG TEN ALL-STARS

First base—McCurdy, Illinois.
Second base—Fenner, Ohio State.
Shortstop—Mee, Illinois.
Third base—Stewart, Illinois.
Catcher—Vick, Michigan.
Pitchers—Dixon, Michigan; Barnes, Illinois; Jackson, Illinois.

BY ALBON HOLDEN.

Picking the Big Ten conference all-star baseball team this year presents few problems. There were few stars overlapping at the same positions.

"ROWDY" ELLIOTT, Wisconsin.

Illinois and Michigan, finishing first and second, and Wisconsin, which pulled up into third place in a fine finish, were the class of the conference, outdistancing the rest of the teams with ridiculous ease, and showing superiority at practically every position. The Ohio State team was fair and Indiana played some good baseball, but was not a steady winner. Little can be said for the others.

Two Slugging Fielders.

Two outfielders stood above all others as the sluggers of 1921. Vogel of Illinois and Elliott of Wisconsin were terrific hitters, slamming the ball to every corner of the field and getting more extra base hits than singles. Vogel hit .465 for the third outfield post. He was a fine fielder and a good hitter, but not a slugger.

McCurdy, captain-elect of Illinois, gets the first base assignment, by a slim margin. He was a good all-around ball player. Shackleford of Michigan hit like a fiend late in the season, but he was an awkward fielder. Dixon of Chicago, a star on a mediocre team; J. Williams of Wisconsin and Slyker of Ohio State were other good first sackers.

Second base goes to Capt. Fenner of Ohio State, who had slightly more finish than Uteritz of Michigan and Hellstrom of Illinois, two sophomores who will be great ball players before they finish college.

Julie Mee a Crack Shortstop.

There can be no question about Julie Mee of Illinois for shortstop. He was head and shoulders above any other Big Ten infielder, and a hard hitter. The Detroit Tigers have grabbed him. Capt. Van Boven of Michigan, Bliss of Ohio State, and Farrington of Wisconsin rate as first class short fielders. Stewart of Illinois gets the third base selection by a narrow margin over Karpus of Michigan, who erred a bit too frequently. Reudiger of Wisconsin was a close third.

Vick, Michigan's stocky backstop, was the best of the catchers. Huffman of Ohio State was the next best, and Dougherty of Illinois and Davey of Wisconsin were reliable men. Hiser of Purdue was a heavy hitter, but more at home at first base than behind the bat.

Pitching Talent in Evidence.

There was a quantity of good pitching on the first division teams and a lack of it on the tail enders. Dixon of Michigan and Barnes and Jackson of Illinois are chosen. McCann of Illinois, Paddock of Wisconsin, Walker of Indiana, Leverance of Michigan, Crisler of Chicago, who was laid up most of the year with a lame whip; Fish of Ohio State, and Wagner of Purdue all twirled several good games.

KENOSHA, 4; BARRY, 1.

Kenosha, Wis., June 11.—[Special.]—Eddie Stack was touched for ten hits this afternoon when the Simmons company team put the Barry council team of Chicago to flight, 4 to 1. Howard twirled stellar ball for Kenosha. Score:

Barrys	010	000	000—1 4 2
Simmons	010	030	00*—4 10 2

Batteries—Stack and Delaney; Howard and Dobbins.

Members of the championship team in 1896 played three innings with the varsity. The old timers, who are just a year or two short of the 50 year mark, won, 7 to 2. Score:

LAKE FOREST ACADEMY PASSES RECORD YEAR; CHAMPION IN 4 SPORTS

UNDER the directorship of Ralph Jones, formerly on the coaching staff of the University of Illinois, the Lake Forest academy has just closed the most successful athletic year in history. Alumni and students of the school feel they have won the midwestern championship of the academies in football, basketball, baseball, and track.

Only one prep contest was lost during the entire year, that being in baseball, and the Lake Forest boys retaliated by defeating that rival a week later. The year was wound up by Lake Forest winning the academy track meet at Stagg field.

In football Lake Forest scored 326 points to 26 for its rivals. In basketball Lake Forest counted 323 points to 144 for the opposition. In twelve games of baseball Lake Forest scored 148 runs, against 35.

DEMPSEY TEARS THROUGH DRILL AS A BIG ROMP

BY RAY PEARSON.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 11.—[Special.]—Just three weeks from this time Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, will hop through the ropes of the arena at Jersey City to defend his title against the French invader, Georges Carpentier. This far in advance of the international clash Dempsey is found in great condition, confident and cheerful. He doesn't look ahead to July 2 with any fears of what might happen to Dempsey.

RICHARD CROKER. [U. & U. Photo.]

The champion was a big happy kid today as he went about his work in the indoor gym, and although he didn't box, he displayed an abundance of pep. He was fast and the punchiest ring man we ever looked at. One reason for the pep was a change in the weather. It was just warm enough to be comfortable.

1,000 Fans Await Appearance.

Jack stepped right smartly in traveling from his cottage to the hangar, a distance of a quarter of a mile, and when he got there he found a mob of eager fans waiting to see him go into action.

He started off with a merry tattoo on the punching bag, while the gang, which numbered probably 1,000, cheered him. Then followed a bit of shadow boxing and the big leather hand bag got a mauling for the finishing touch.

The show wound up with a couple of bouts between Dempsey's sparring partners. Larry Williams and Battling Ghee, the big Negro from Memphis, went to it first and fists were flying for two rounds, with neither having the margin. Then Jack Renault took on Ghee for another two rounds.

Motor Ride Helpful.

The layoff of yesterday, when Dempsey made a 200 mile motor trip, seemed to have been beneficial, for it took the champion's mind off the training grind and in his present form he doesn't need to worry in the least about being ready for Carpentier. The motor trip did not end until 7 o'clock last night.

There was a distinguished visitor at the camp this morning. It was Richard Croker, former Tammany chief. Croker is a great admirer of Dempsey, and made the trip here to see the champion and have a little chat with him.

Among the big crowd watching Dempsey training this afternoon was Mayor Bader. The city executive is certainly mighty strong for boxing. Nearly every day finds him out at Airport.

Works in Open Today.

Dempsey will do his work in the open tomorrow if the good weather continues, but will not box unless there is a change in present plans.

The cut over his left eye is practically healed, and Monday he will take on a couple of husky Negroes, one being Battling Ghee. The Jamaica Kid, who helped Dempsey train for the battle with Jess Willard at Toledo two years ago, will be on the job here Monday.

Nothing is said about Dempsey's poundage, but if one may judge by appearances, Jack will knock off a few pounds before clashing with Georges.

M'GOORTY BIT FASTER THAN PHIL HARRISON IN SCRAP AT AURORA

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

Decisions of Tribune boxing representatives are:

At Brooklyn—Kid Williams won on foul from Frankie Edwards [9]; Joe Tipitz beat Charles Pitts [10].

At Aurora, Ill.—Eddie McGoorty beat Phil Harison [10]. Bud Christiano beat Frankie Schaeffer [10]. Georgie Corbett beat Howard Smith [10]. Jimmy Kelly beat Joe Mandell [10].

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Eddie McGoorty, who is matched to meet Mike Gibbons in Minneapolis Friday night, earned a shade victory over Phil Harrison in the ten round windup of the boxing show staged by Jim Mullen at Aurora yesterday afternoon in the presence of 5,000 fans.

EDDIE McGOORTY. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The bout failed to be as interesting as was generally expected. Both fighters tired badly after the fourth round, and in the final session neither had enough steam in the punches to make an impression. McGoorty showed to good advantage in the early sessions, but Harrison took all that Eddie could hand out and landed telling blows himself.

McGoorty More Aggressive.

While Harrison fought as well as his admirers expected, McGoorty was entitled to whatever edge there was by his leading and aggressiveness. Eddie repeatedly stuck his left hand in Harrison's face without returns and he executed the one-two punches with damaging results on several occasions.

In the third round Harrison planted a right swing on Eddie's left eye which caused the optic to swell. McGoorty returned the compliment in the seventh session and also cut Phil's lip with a left jab in the third session.

Christiano Beats Schaeffer.

In the semi-windup Bud Christiano won all the way over Frankie Schaeffer. The former forced the milling throughout and landed telling punches at close quarters. During the last half of the mill Christiano took every round by wide margins, while honors in the five sessions were about even.

The opening bout between Georgie Corbett and Howard Smith was one of the most interesting of the program. At the end of the tenth round Corbett had a slight advantage. He made Smith miss repeatedly with wild swings and in return planted stinging left hooks to the jaw and rights to the body.

Kelly Victor Over Mandell.

Jimmy Kelly fought one of the best fights of his career when he beat Joe Mandell of Rockford in the second bout. The west side Italian surprised the crowd when he put Mandell to the canvas in the first round for the nine count with a straight right to the chin.

JOHN L.'S OLD RUBBER SEES CARPENTIER AS "SHO' A DEBBIL MAN"

UNCLE Matthias Framingham Livingston Smith, who in the "good old days" was a masseur in John L. Sullivan's camp, has seen Georges Carpentier and says he "sho' is a debbil man."

Uncle walked all the way from Port Washington, L. I., to Manhasset to get a peek at the challenger. The old darky, who claims to have known all the fighters of the bare knuckle days, now is employed by a wealthy resident of the section as a masseur for saddle horses.

This was his verdict:

"You just bet your socks dis young fellah ain't no frost. Some folks say dat Georgie ain't in condition, but yo' can tells 'em dat your Uncle Matt knows diff'ent—'deed he do."

MINISTERS VOTE PROTEST ON TILT AT JERSEY CITY

Atlantic City, N. J., June 11.—The Atlantic City Ministerial union today adopted resolutions protesting against the holding of the Dempsey-Carpentier contest at Jersey City July 2.

The term "boxing contest" as applied to this event, the resolution asserts, is misleading. The match is a revival of the outlawed prize fights, the resolutions declare. The ministers further objected to the daily exhibitions at Dempsey's camp, particular stress being laid on those held Sundays.

SEBOOMOOK VICTOR IN THIRD RACE OF CHICAGO YACHT CLUB

E. W. Schnabel's Seboomook carried off first honors in the third race of the first series sailed at the Chicago Yacht club yesterday afternoon. Seboomook, a Seawanhaka type of boat, which has been campaigning on lake Michigan for about twelve years, put it over the more modern Universal rule boats by making the fastest elapsed time around the club course. Illinois, another old time craft, finished second, only forty-five seconds astern of the winner.

The race developed into a drifting match when the fluky breeze, which shifted five times during the contest, dropped down to nearly a calm when the finishing line was in sight. The smart boats of the R class fared badly by running into numerous soft spots which ruined their chances of finishing with the leaders. Sari won in the R class, Springtime led the others of the twenty-one foot raceabout class, Mavourneen led in the Universal division and Alert showed the way in the one design class.

The light breeze ruined the race in which fifteen boats started over the Jackson park course. None of the boats was able to finish within the time limit. This afternoon women skippers of the Chicago Yacht club will engage in a race with the one designers. The contest will start at 3 o'clock with eleven entries.

WOODS and WATERS by LARRY ST. JOHN

STILL MORE MUSKIE STUFF.

ORDINARY bass size lures may be used for casting for muskellunge if they are of good quality; the cheap kinds, with their poor hooks, will not hold a big muskie.

The large muskellunge size wooden plugs are for trolling, not for casting. They are great weed catchers. I presume that they catch muskies, too, but I have never heard of one doing so. They do take salt water game fishes, however, for I have taken quite a variety of sea fishes with them.

In casting for muskies one wants a rod a bit heavier than that commonly used for bass casting. Not that a large muskie cannot be landed on a light casting rod, but one needs a rod with considerable backbone in order to hook the bony-mouthed critters—a rod weighing not less than 5¾ ounces in the five foot length; what the experts call a "heavy plug rod."

The ordinary No. 3 size casting reel will do nicely for muskie casting, although if a reel is bought especially for the purpose, the No. 4 size, with its larger line capacity and faster retrieve, is preferable, in our opinion.

Any good wearing, hard braided silk casting line testing 20 or 22 pounds will be found serviceable and of ample strength if care is taken to break off the last two feet or so when it begins to run flat and show signs of weakening. (Muskie casting is a great game if your tackle doesn't weaken.) A strong wire leader or trace should be used between the end of the line and the lure.

A longer rod may be used for trolling. Rods for muskie trolling have been greatly refined in late years. The lighter sea rods are fine for muskie fishing, having enough stiffness to hook the fish without undue sacrifice of resiliency and "play."

A double multiplying reel, capable of holding 100 yards of 15 thread Cuttyhunk line, is much favored by trollers, although the reel is of minor importance.

The 15 thread line, which tests thirty pounds, might be considered too heavy by some light tackle anglers, but a little too much strength in the tackle of the inexpert is better than not enough.

The muskie troller might well follow the tactics of the sea angler in using a long wire leader—three or four feet of tinned steel wire, No. 9 or .022 gauge. About a foot above the swivel connecting this leader with the line, pinch on a coin or rudder sinker of about ⅞ inch in diameter; this will prevent the line kinking and will hold the hook point up.

In river fishing a guide is almost indispensable. He guides the craft while you fish. In the opinion of most experts, the fishing for muskies in rivers is miles ahead of lake fishing. The fish do not run as large. That is, the biggest muskies are nearly always caught in lakes, but the river fish average as big, they are stronger and more active, and, best of all, they strike casting lures more willingly.

The young muskieteer should not expect too much in the way of big fish. Really big muskies nowhere are common.

HIRE A GUIDE!

ORDINARILY it pays well to hire a guide when going to the north woods. The majority of these men are students of the muskellunge and his ways; they know where to find the fish; they know how to cook; they do the heavy end of the carrying.

RECORDS FALL IN A.A.U. TRIALS FOR NATIONAL GAMES

Two Central A. A. U. records were broken at Northwestern field yesterday in the sectional tryouts for positions on the team to compete in the national championships at Pasadena next month.

PERCY GRAHAM. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Milton Angier, a freshman at the university of Illinois, threw the javelin 188 feet 3 inches, breaking the mark made by Racine Thompson of the I. A. C. last year. Angier's heave was ten feet farther than the new record established in the Big Ten conference meet last week.

James Shanahan of the I. A. C. also was a record breaker, heaving the 56 pound weight 33 feet 2½ inches, adding a foot to his own record.

The competition at Evanston qualified men for the $1,200 purse to go towards traveling expenses for the coast meet, and all first place winners were entitled to a split.

Joie Ray Wins Mile.

Joie Ray, the veteran I. A. C. distance runner, walked off with the mile, stepping the distance in 4:24 1-5. He eased up at the finish, and appeared to have plenty of reserve left. It was his first race since last winter, when he pulled a tendon.

The pole vault brought out some of the best competition of the day. Ed Knourek of the I. A. C. cleared 12 feet 9 inches. Percy Graham of the C. A. A. and M. Slaughter of the I. A. C. did 12 feet 6 inches, with "Laddie" Myers of the C. A. A. fourth with 12 feet.

Badger Captain Wins.

Capt. Nash of the University of Wisconsin won the half mile in fast sprint with Phil Spink of the C. A. A., winning by inches in fast time, and H. L. Frentress of the I. A. C. ran the quarter in :49, the best time made on a midwestern track this year.

The first place winners follow:

100 yard dash—J. S. Prescott, C. A. A. Time, :10.

220 yard dash—H. E. Hagen, I. A. C. Time, :22 1-5.

120 yard high hurdles—Earl Gilfillan, I. A. C. Time, :17 2-5.

220 yard low hurdles—J. S. Prescott, C. A. A. Time, :25 2-5.

440 yard run—H. L. Frentress, I. A. C. Time, :49.

880 yard run—C. L. Nash, University of Wisconsin. Time 1:56 2-5.

One mile run—Joie Ray, I. A. C. Time 4:24 1-5.

Five mile run—B. French, I. A. C. Time, 28:24 3-5.

Three mile walk—A. Zeller, C. A. A. Time, 23:46 4-5.

TENNIS VOLLEYS

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

CHARLES E. HAGGETT has been engaged as tennis professional at the Skokie Country club, which has put its courts into fine shape and has outlined a program of activity in the racket sport in addition to its golf.

Haggett, who played in almost all the European countries, began his career at the Queens club, London, where his father was professional, and the younger Haggett formerly was at the West Side club, Forest Hills, L. I. He trained the American Davis cup team of 1914, and many times has been acclaimed as the world's best tennis player, having to his credit victories over the late Anthony Wilding, Maurice McLoughlin, the famous Doughertys of England, and other international stars.

Haggett will meet the local player, Charles L. Johnston, in an exhibition match at the Skokie club, Glencoe, at 5 o'clock this afternoon.

Entry blanks for the national clay court men's singles and doubles will be issued this week. This tourney, which already has drawn the entry of prominent stars from the Pacific and Atlantic sections, will be played at the Chicago Tennis club beginning June 25.

Work has been intensified on the preparation of the two championship turf courts at the Onwentsia club, Lake Forest, which will be the scene of the coming semi-final Davis cup team "tie," in which it is almost an assured fact that the French and Japanese teams will meet. Seating accommodations for 5,000 persons will be arranged.

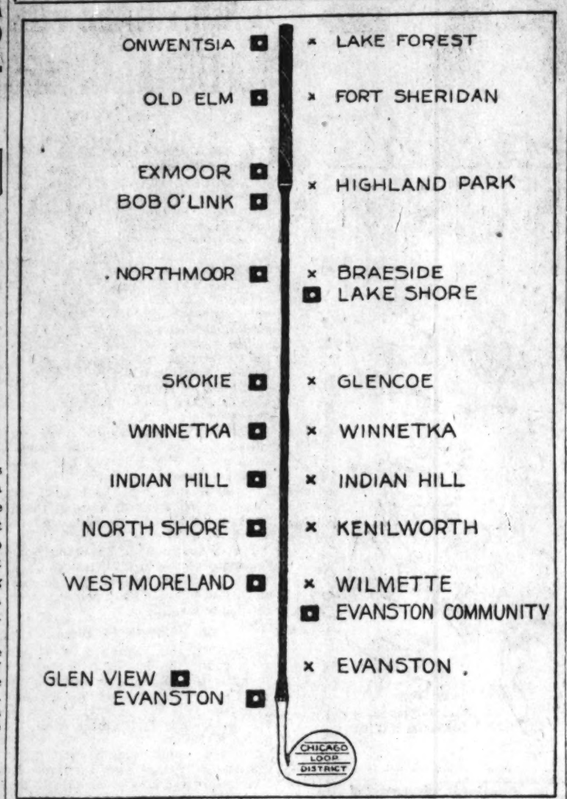
SOME GOLF COURSE



BETWEEN Evanston and Lake Forest, a distance of approximately fifteen miles, there are fourteen golf clubs, one for each mile, or nearly so. All of them, with perhaps a single exception, are full up. Indian Hill has a waiting list of close to 200, and there are so many in line at Skokie that prospective members have no hope of getting in for years. The new Briergate club, located at Deerfield, a little west of Highland Park, is not shown in the picture, but the members are playing on a temporary course. A municipal course at Highland Park is planned, but work has not been started. Between Evanston and Racine there are nineteen clubs.

ALL ST. ANDREWS KEEPS KEEN EYE ON YANK GOLFERS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, June 11.—Never in golfing history has so much interest been taken as in the forthcoming British open championship matches and the struggle which shortly will come off for the blue ribbon of British golf. This already sedate, gray old city of St. Andrews—Mecca of the world's golf—is agog with excitement.

It is interesting to walk along the market street in this Scottish university city and hear the multitude of American idioms.

All the Americans except Jim Barnes this afternoon engaged in what is known in American "golfingese" as a "syndicate."

In reaching the final of the Glenegles 1,000 guineas professional tournament today, young Joe Kirkwood, the Australasian professional champion who will return to Chicago as soon as he is finished with the British championship play, did much to upset the quiet confidence which reigned in the British golfing camp. Abe Mitchell beat him today, 7 and 6, but Kirkwood has good stuff in him.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

With one world's record holder, two national champions, and several winners of events in sectional conference meets topping the list of entries, the first track and field games of the National Intercollegiate A. A. will be held on Stagg field next Saturday.

EARL THOMSON. [Hurdles champion.]

One of the most prominent athletes to be seen in action will be Earl Thomson of Dartmouth, holder of the world's record in the 120 yard high hurdles at :14 2-5. The Dartmouth timber topper has been unbeatable in his specialty and his appearance will attract a lot of attention. Thomson will also compete in the 220 yard low hurdles.

Murphy in High Jump.

Johnny Murphy of Notre Dame, National A. A. U. high jump champion, who won the event in the western conference meet, will perform in his chosen event. Brutus Hamilton of Missouri, national pentathlon and decathlon champion, who was the individual star of the Big Ten games with eleven points, will be a prominent factor in all field events.

Truman Gardner of Yale, who tied for first place in the pole vault at the eastern intercollegiate, will be a contestant in his event and will meet with stiff competition from Merrick of Wisconsin, who won the event in the Big Ten meet. George Krogness of Harvard, who finished second to Thomson in the high hurdles at the Cambridge meet, will attempt to duplicate his performance Saturday.

Hayes and Butler Entered.

Athletes who won first places in the western conference will again be seen in action. Bill Hayes will try to duplicate his win in the 100 yard dash, Wilson of Iowa in the furlong, Butler of Michigan in the quarter, Higgins of Ames in the half mile, Wall of Wisconsin in the mile, and Wharton of Illinois in the two mile.

Merrick of Wisconsin should meet with stiffer opposition in the pole vault. Aside from Hamilton, colleges and universities in the Missouri Valley conference will send a galaxy of stars.

FASCINATING HIGH BIDS.

HIGH bids have a fascination for all players, especially when a double is attached, as is usually the case.

In general these bids are of two kinds: hopeless bids made by foolish bidders—all the cards with declarer and dummy and the opponents helpless; or deals in which the declarer is obliged to make one trick more than his cards warrant and the game narrows down to a question of the relative merit of the opposing players.

THE BIDDING.

Score, 0—0, rubber game. North dealt and bid two hearts, east two spades, south three hearts, west four clubs, north four hearts, east and south passed, west bid five clubs, north and east passed, south doubled, and the bidding closed. North had the original lead.

West secured eleven tricks.

North did not make his second play without careful study. Either south or west might have the five of hearts, so far as the showing on the first trick was concerned. It ought to be in the south hand on account of the bidding. But a player might support an original two bid with a singleton trump, and if that were the case, north would never have another opportunity to make his second heart.

On the other hand both the ace and king of spades should be in the south hand, to make the bid of three hearts sound. But what really lost the rubber for north and south was the knowledge possessed by the former that the bids of the latter were not always sound, and the second heart lead was the result.

The declarer saw his opportunity and played it to the limit, putting south in the hole at trick nine.

The biggest soccer match of the season from a local viewpoint is scheduled for this afternoon at 35th street and Wentworth avenue, where the Bricklayers and Pullman teams will meet in the twelfth annual final for the trophy donated by Peter J. Peel. The Bricklayers are the present holders, while Pullman in its palmy days won the trophy four times. Play will start at 3 o'clock, with Johnston as referee.

KYNASTON WINS NET TITLE.

Hartford, Conn., June 11.—Percy L. Kynaston of the Westside Tennis club, Forest Hills, N. Y., this afternoon won the New England title on the courts of the local golf club, defeating H. H. Hyde of this city, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

CUE BODY PLANS RECORD TOURNEY FOR NEXT SEASON

Plans are well under way for two of the biggest international billiard tournaments in the history of the game next season. One will be professional and the other amateur, and the former surely will surpass for speed those of the palmy days of Jake Schaefer, Frank Ives, George Slosson, Maurice Vignaux, the mighty Frenchman, and several others of the old masters who helped make billiard history.

The speed of the present day players was unknown in those days, and the gathering of the leading artists of the world next season will be a notable event.

Champion Willie Hoppe, young Jake Schaefer, and Welker Cochran played phenomenal billiards during last season, with Ora Morningstar and George B. Sutton of Chicago not far behind. Edouard Horemans, the Belgian, who recently sailed for home, will return for the big event.

In July Benjamin E. Bensinger will sail for France and Holland to secure both amateur and professional entries. Among the latter are Louis Cure, the veteran Frenchman, and Coute, a young player who is credited with a run of 538 at 18-2 made in Paris.

Koji Yamada, who is now in Japan, and who last season played the best billiards of his career, will return in the fall.

Among the amateurs there is Bos of Holland, who won the European amateur championship at Paris. Roudil, who is perhaps the best French amateur, was sick and unable to play, but it is hoped these two will come over.

'THIEF'S' RELEASE ON WRIT ROUSES WRATH OF DAVID

Orders Grand Jury Quiz and Man's Rearrest.

Grand jury investigation of the release on a writ of habeas corpus of Albert Harris, confined in the House of Correction as a thief, was ordered yesterday by Judge Joseph B. David after a lively session in Criminal court.

The judge also directed that Sheriff Peters and Joseph Siman, superintendent of the House of Correction, bend every effort toward the immediate apprehension of Harris and that fifty deputy sheriffs be used, if necessary.

This action came when Assistant State's Attorney John Tyrrell appraised the judge of the release of Harris, which was effected in Judge Hugo Friend's court several days ago.

Jury Waiver Challenged.

Harris, accused of stealing six silk shirts from a delivery wagon, entered a plea of guilty when arraigned before Judge David last January. The records show he signed a jury waiver. A sentence of one year was entered.

On May 4 attorneys for Harris went before Judge Friend with a writ of habeas corpus. They argued that the defendant's father had signed the jury waiver and that Harris had been deprived of a jury trial. In spite of the protests of Assistant State's Attorney C. C. Roe, Judge Friend granted the writ and ordered Harris' release, it is declared. He was immediately freed.

"Do you mean to tell me that the superintendent of the house of correction has released this man?" cried Judge David. "We'll have to look into this."

"Judge Friend had no jurisdiction to release Harris," said Attorney Tyrrell. "Even if Harris' father did sign the jury waiver, that is no ground for releasing him. He has no right to go behind the Criminal court records. I ask that an order be entered sending him back to jail."

Orders Grand Jury Inquiry.

"You don't need to ask for it," shouted the judge. "I'll not only send this man back to jail, but I will direct you to conduct a grand jury investigation. If any public official is guilty of violating the law, I wish him punished. This man entered a plea of guilty. There is no reason why he should go free."

An order was immediately entered. Judge David also directed that Siman be ordered to appear in court tomorrow morning to show cause why he released Harris. Judge David declared Siman "must have known Judge Friend had no authority to act."

Attorney Tyrrell announced that he would appear before Judge Friend tomorrow and ask that the order releasing Harris be vacated.

NEW AIRPLANE WING INCREASES SPEED, SAFETY

New York, June 11.—Invention of a new airplane wing which, it is claimed, will increase the carrying capacity of a machine five times, add to its speed and permit landing in a comparatively small area was made known today by G. M. Williams, general manager of the Dayton Wright company.

"The wing will increase the speed of an ordinary type of bombing or commercial airplane from 125 to 150 miles an hour, and its load of explosives or merchandise from 450 to 2,500 pounds, in addition to fuel for a thousand mile flight, he said.

HOWAT SENTENCE BY INDUSTRIAL COURT UPHELD

Topeka, Kas., June 11.—In the most sweeping decision yet handed down affecting validity of the Kansas Industrial Court law, the State Supreme court today affirmed the decision of the Crawford county District court sentencing Alexander Howat to one year in jail for contempt. The law was held valid on each of the eight issues raised.

"This court is a reasonable and valid exercise of the police power of the state over the business of producing coal, and does not impair liberty of contract or permit involuntary servitude," the decision says.

"The court is, in fact, a public service commission, the word 'court' having been employed merely as a matter of legislative strategy," the opinion continues. "The production, manufacture and distribution of food, clothing and fuel being industries affected with a public interest, are made subject to regulation in the same manner as those industries which have commonly been designated public utilities.

"The Court of Industrial Relations is clearly a board within the meaning of the mandamus statute."

WOMAN'S DEATH SOLVED.

Death due to alcoholism and heart disease was the verdict yesterday at the inquest over Mrs. Hanna Jasper, 54 years old, 204 Kensington avenue. Thomas Jasper, her husband, had been taken in custody because a slight quantity of blood, found on the woman's neck, was thought to have been from a bullet wound. This was found not to be the case.

FOR THE GREAT VALLEY.

Certain senators of the middle west and west have associated themselves informally to protect the interests of their region. The chief of these interests is, of course, agriculture, and the senatorial group has therefore been promptly dubbed "the agrarian bloc."

Of late we borrow many of our terms from the political vocabulary of Europe, but they suffer a sea change. The senators referred to will hardly form a bloc in the continental sense, for they will not represent definite party forces. But they do represent some economic realities of the most substantial sort, and THE TRIBUNE for one heartily welcomes, as it has for many years vigorously urged, a more conscious and organized effort to foster and protect these realities. Readers of these columns have followed our repeated appeals to the representatives of the great region between the Alleghenies and the Rockies to make themselves as effective as the representatives of the Atlantic states are in matters of legislation conducive to regional interests. For many years we have pointed out the benefits derived by the manufacturing and commercial east from solidarity in congress.

We never had and do not have any desire to breed sectional differences, but we have always believed that sectionalism ought not to be all on one side. We have been confronted by sectional legislation for many years, a condition, not a theory, and there was and is but one way to protect our own proper interests, and that is by uniting so as to make our defense effective.

There are, of course, dangers inherent in regional organization, however informal. We ought never to forget that the true test of a measure or policy is the test of general benefit. Nothing more hurtful to us all could be conceived than the breakup of national solidarity through the organization of a new economic sectionalism. There are already too many incipient fractures of the national unity. But the solid east and the solid south are facts, and if the great basic interests of the mid continent are to be conserved it must be by an intelligent coöperation among those whose immediate duty and concern are to conserve them. This, if accomplished with breadth of view and real patriotism, will be not only good for the west but for all the nation. The productiveness of the great valley is the foundation of our national material strength and prosperity. Its greatest industry, agriculture, must prosper and progress if the nation is to prosper and progress. The conservation of its proper interests must be a chief concern of the national congress, and is so to a great extent. Nevertheless, what is everybody's business is nobody's business, and while we can hardly complain of complete neglect, it is fair to say that, at least in THE TRIBUNE'S observation through many years, western representation has not been effective at Washington in proportion to its real strength or the weight of its interests.

But if we are to enter upon a novel experiment in regional coöperation let us pray humbly to be delivered from the domination of narrow views and especially from the self-seeking agitator or the crank. Already in the forefront of our agrarian revival are notions not founded on economic law or real knowledge of the forces which we must respect if our coöperation is not to be a public nuisance and an injury to the west itself and to the nation. It is of considerable importance that we see to it that our light be not darkness. Snap judgments, panaceas, sectional prejudices lie in wait for us along the road. The professional agitator and the well meaning but impractical theorist with a gift of gab find us at times an easy prey, and we pay a high price for their leadership. Patent medicine for his ills frequently has been prescribed for the farmer, and it has done him no good. At this time agriculture is being newly organized, but its tendency is unfortunately toward more government regulation. But we hope the unwisdom and waste of government interference will presently appear to the rank and file before we have paid too much for experiments in bureaucracy disguised as popular rule.

The wiser leaders of the west will direct attention not to artificial nostrums but to large policies based on enduring economic laws and to the upbuilding of real agencies of prosperity, such as the development of railways and waterways, forestation, agricultural science, and a tariff policy broadly conducive to the healthy expansion of our foreign commerce, not merely protective of special privilege. These are the real factors of agricultural prosperity. If they are neglected no political porous plaster will cure our aches.

THE NEW METHODIST CHURCH.

Plans for a building twenty-two stories high, surmounted by a steeple, and containing a church auditorium, have been made public by authorities of the Methodist Episcopal church. An interesting and suggestive project, marking a departure in ecclesiastical architecture which is likely to be important.

The joining of utilitarian and religious motives in church building is not without precedent. In the age of faith, the middle ages of European history, the church was not only a religious but a military structure, and a center not only of the religious but of the social, commercial, civic, and military concerns of the community.

The twentieth century Methodist project has its roots, therefore, far in the past, while it is a natural and characteristic expression of present needs and conditions. The modern church, like the mediæval, does not isolate itself from the common concerns of mankind, but finds its service among them. The towering pile of the new church, set in the heart of a great city, sharing its daily life and the uses of earthly existence, will be not only a utility but a symbol and an inspiration. If we cannot take our religious and moral life into the market place, it has for us little authenticity.

The project especially interests THE TRIBUNE as a result, as we are told it is, of a suggestion made in these columns at the time of the destruction of the Protestant Episcopal cathedral on the west side, when it was suggested that, in rebuilding, the possibilities of steel construction be developed so as to produce novel effects of spaciousness and grandeur unattainable by the architects of past ages. It has seemed to be an instinct of the religious imagination of the north to seek height, the perpendicular lines and slender sky piercing spires of Gothic architecture expressing a profound sense of the nature of Christian worship and religious aspiration.

The "skyscraper" type, hitherto devoted to business uses, nevertheless offers broader possibilities, and the architects of the proposed church should find in their problem a unique opportunity.

As for the community, the presence of a great church edifice, housing a place of worship and the many related activities of modern church organization, will be a significant and influential note in the midst of the intense life of the city. The Methodist authorities deserve thanks for a civic service of a high order.

CHICAGO CAN LOOK THE STATE IN THE FACE.

There is a new spirit, a new self-respect, evident in Chicago since last Monday. The city, whose head has been bowed lower and lower in the last five years, can again raise its eyes and look the state and the nation square in the face. For that we give thanks, and trust that the state gives thanks with us. We may now go forward together in the interests of the general good.

Prior to the judicial election of June 6 the Lundin-Thompson organization had developed what appeared to be a strangle hold on Chicago. So great was its power that it forced its candidate for governor upon the state and organized the legislature to do its bidding. With this added power it took to itself all the spoils of victory and sought even to extend its power by intimidation of the Supreme court. Even then its rapacity was unsatisfied and it sought to "forge the last link" by seizing the Circuit court of Cook county.

An aroused electorate flocked to the polls and repudiated it utterly and completely. The mark of Cain has been put upon the spoils organization. Legislators who have been coerced by what they believed to be a dominant machine outside of the legislature have been shocked into a realization that the organization whose dictation they had accepted is repudiated; that it represents only itself, its job holders and its selfish ambitions; that if they wish to represent their constituents and act for their welfare and the good of the state they must act as conscience and judgment dictate, not at the word of a repudiated boss.

Much evil legislation, favored by the machine to strengthen its own power by exploiting the state, undoubtedly has been checked by the blow which Chicago administered to the prestige of that machine. The entire state as well as Chicago will profit. So the city makes belated compensation, in part at least, for evils to which it was once a party. So once more Chicago lifts its head, looks the state in the face, and prepares to go forward with it for the common good.

DEFENSE FROM AIR ATTACK.

In the great war the duel between aircraft and anti-aircraft artillery on the whole favored the latter. If the anti-aircraft guns did not bring down many aeroplanes, they kept them at a distance at which their efficiency was greatly reduced. Without anti-aircraft fire bombing expeditions would have been very serious incidents of the operations, and cities might have been badly damaged if not destroyed, troop movement turned to slaughter and ammunition factories and reserves reduced to gas and ashes.

In the rotogravure section today there is a picture of one of the new anti-aircraft guns designed by our experts to embody the experience of the war. It is to be hoped congress will not omit to make proper provision for this important branch of defense and that the war and navy departments will see that our progress keeps pace with that of other countries.

Editorial of the Day

THE CHICAGO ELECTION.
[Indianapolis News.]

Mayor Thompson of Chicago, the man who refused as mayor to invite Marshal Joffre to visit the city, yesterday met with a richly deserved but long postponed defeat. Since 1915, when he was first elected, his career has been one of uninterrupted success.

Usually he won over a divided foe, and by a minority vote. But nevertheless he managed to hold on to his job and maintain his clutch on the machine, becoming a strong factor in state politics, and even something of a national figure.

But yesterday the people of Chicago, without distinction of party, got together behind a coalition judicial ticket, and as a result every one of the Thompson candidates was defeated by pluralities ranging from 20,000 to 40,000. It is a great victory for good government, and in a city which has not for many years known by experience what good government is. The people of Chicago, and other cities, are beginning to realize that in such times as these they can take no chances in the selection of men to manage their local affairs. Thompsonism has cost Chicago heavily, and the city is not yet rid of it—but a line has been drawn at the judiciary.

Conditions are by no means stable, as the outbreak at Tulsa proved—if proof be wanted. It was no time for the election of Thompson judges—if there ever could be such a time. The present situation does not invite experiments. It is necessary, if the people are to be safe, that local governments should be of high character, manned by men who will not seek "control" in politics, but who will devote themselves solely to the service of the people, the enforcement of the law and the maintenance of order. The people of Chicago are to be congratulated on the victory which they won yesterday. It is to be hoped that the coalition may be perpetuated and made useful and effective in other elections. There really is no reason why the people of a city should not manage their own affairs and choose as their agents men of capacity and character.

LAKE MONTAUBON.

Oh June calls out on the sunlit road
Where the bees are softly humming,
"Come lace your shoes and pack your load,
For it's time that you were coming."
In the bend of the trail a patteran lies
To point with its leafy beauty,
And a song sounds dim where the wild bird flies—
"Miri pen, me kamava tute."

If the patteran points to the eastern way
I shall smell the salt spray quickly,
But if it point west for many a day,
I must trudge where the dust falls thickly.
South lie the hills with a gentle slope
And rest from care and duty,
And on all three roads that song of hope—
"Miri pen, me kamava tute."

Yea, friends have I many on every trail
Save one, the north trail only,
And yet the patteran will not fail
To mark me the trail that's lonely,
The trail that lies over river and dune
To a pine-rimmed lake of beauty,
And the evening call of the lonely loon—
"Miri pen, me kamava tute!"

A LETTER TO B. L. T.

Dear Judge: Women are interesting to approach for purposes of analysis for the reason that one cannot analyze them. Some wise scientist said that a woman was the sum total of her ductless glands. Means nothing, since we do not know much about the ductless glands. Epigrams of this sort have always caused much worry. The author writes an epigram for the trick of it and delights in the involved meaning; an epigram is a line that means more than it says. But to return to women: they are more tolerant than men, lie and steal quicker than most men, and sometimes do the most sublime thing for a miserable male of the species who may be coarse and smelly beyond all reason. Compared to men women are, as a rule, food gluttons, a fact not known or else not mentioned for reasons of politeness. But what makes a woman a wonderful being is her instant readiness, nay, willingness to make a sacrifice for one she loves, and no animal is more splendid in roused viciousness and regal anger than a mother in the act of protecting her young.

What a poor chance has the male when a female of the species decides that he shall marry her and be the father of her children. He thinks he courts, and he struts and brags, but the little lady of the advertising shirtwaist has a thousand tons of psychology in reserve as compared to the ounce possessed by the man she has decided will assume her personal expenditures, fight a landlord for her, and build a home that shall not be com; ete without proper insurances in the event that the said male slips a cog during the accumulation period. All in all, the woman is the best business man. Why should we always speak of the tired business man? Ye gods, he only does what the wimmen permit, or order! The wimmen should be the tired business men! But they don't tire!

This discourse falls to be deep, or puzzle. Let it so be, for calm philosophy should be applied during the heated season. Still, how can one be calm and speak of wimmen? Thy URSUS.

Twenty-two years ago today, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Jandrey, East Wisconsin avenue, two of Neenah's well known and prominent citizens, were married. At fifteen minutes of twelve on the 13th of May, twenty-two years ago today, Mr. Jandrey stepped into a barber shop located at the present site of the Queen confectionery and was shaved for the ceremonies soon to follow. At fifteen minutes of twelve o'clock today, Mr. Jandrey entered the building and was served with ice cream to commemorate the anniversary of that happy event.

DEATHLESS.

They say that beauty dies: as roses fade
And are no more; as summer, now so bright,
Must lose its glory with September's blight;
As autumn song must by the winds be stayed.
But they speak falsely. Beauty lives,
And shall live ever. Only she eludes
The sure decay of time. When autumn broods,
Funereal, she mourns the leaves, but gives
No hint of beauty's death. For she has passed
Into the great world's life. A million hearts
Possess her now. Supreme, above all arts,
She reigns. As first, she also shall be last.
The roses fall, but beauty liveth on;
The sunset fades, preparing for the dawn.

In a desire to coöperate with the Chicago Infant Welfare society a set of articles and letters dealing with infant care has been provided. These are to run during Baby week and for a few days thereafter. One purpose of the arrangement is to get the public interested for a few days in the welfare of babies. Another is to bring to the attention of the public the merits of this society, one which is doing much to aid the health department in keeping the babies well and in training parents in mothercraft. The babies have never before had so fair a chance. The improvement must be progressive.

Boost for safety for babies!

1920 BEST SUMMER.

THE babies were healthier in the summer of 1920 than ever before in the history of this country. The report of the Infant Welfare society shows this to be true and it also shows that in the Pacific northwest and in a few smaller cities elsewhere the rate of fifty deaths per thousand babies, the New Zealand figure which we have so long envied but thought beyond our reach, was attained. It is fair to say that a big part of this was due to the cool summer. There were few of the terrible wilting days that cause babies to crumple up.

It is also fair to say that a big part of it was due to factors over which there was human control. One factor was the lessened use of midwives. In New York City in 1909 almost one-half of the confinements were attended by midwives; in 1920 the proportion was not much more than one-quarter. While the reduction elsewhere may not have been so great it was great enough to be appreciable.

In New York City they are giving the midwife a considerable amount of education. Before many years, if similar work is done all over the country, the Italian midwife in America will know as much as does the Italian midwife in Italy, and the German midwife in the United States may be compared with the German midwife in Germany. When that day comes the midwives will not do so much harm as they do now.

Another factor is the gain in use of pasteurized milk. Year by year the city and town babies are getting less unpasteurized milk. The use of raw milk for babies is always hazardous.

Unquestionably mothers are learning better how to feed their babies. Fewer babies are allowed to taste food from the table. More of them are fed at stated intervals. It is not the style to feed a baby whenever it cries. Neither anger nor irritability nor thirst is interpreted as hunger to the degree that prevailed a few years ago. Thirsty babies are given water and spoiled babies are not fed, but are otherwise punished or rewarded.

A scientifically raised baby is not a term of derision, as it unquestionably was ten years ago. Grandmother's way, and even mother's way, while recognized as good ways, are no longer held to be the best ways, and mothers are anxious to learn up to date mothercraft just as women want to wear up to date skirts and men want to do business according to the latest methods.

But no factor was more responsible for the good baby health of the summer of 1920 than was better methods of dressing babies. In hot weather a baby has trouble getting rid of his heat. Much of the summer complaint is really heat stroke. Babies should not be overdressed in hot weather. On a very hot day two garments, a diaper and a slip, are enough, and it may be just as well to forget the slip. Bambinos are no longer wrapped in bandages until nothing can be seen, but the squeal. And then on hot days baby gets more water inside and out. Finally, at least in northern cities, there are fewer flies to carry the germs of diarrhoea.

CHANGE THE DIET.

Mrs. P. C. C. writes: "My baby is 14 months old and weighs twenty-seven pounds. Ever since the hot weather began a week ago his bowels have been very bad. He has diarrhoea constantly. He has nothing but boiled milk (forty-eight ounces) each day. Since this condition began he has cut one tooth (having five in all now). The upper gums are swollen and one day bled a little, although nothing to speak of. Is this diarrhoea caused by the teething and hot weather, or lack of proper food? I have diluted the milk recently to two parts milk and one of water, but he is losing weight. What can I do to stop the diarrhoea and what else can be done to nourish him without causing him to get worse?"

REPLY.

The trouble is with the food. Stop food entirely for 24 hours. During this period give water plentifully unless it causes vomiting. When you start feeding do not give whole milk. Some feed cereal gruels for a day or two. Some give some form of albumin milk of which there are several on the market. Do not go back to milk for several days. If the condition shows any tendency to persist get a physician. When the baby has fully recovered from this spell give some cereals, bread, soups, vegetables, and fruit juices. Milk is not enough for a baby 14 months old.

MAY HAVE RICKETS.

Mrs. H. H. writes: "When my child goes to sleep he perspires and when he awakes from his sleep his shirt is wringing wet. He is 2 years old. His meals are as follows: 7 a. m., bottle of milk; 8:30 a. m., orange juice; 10 a. m., oatmeal or farina and a cup of milk if he wants any; 1 p. m., chicken soup, vegetable, glass of milk; 6 p. m., chicken soup, baked apple or apple sauce and baked potato. He also eats raw apples and drinks plenty of water, but his appetite is very poor. He eats very little of anything."

REPLY.

Profuse sweating may indicate that your child has rickets. If not he is at least improperly nourished. A two year old child should be eating at regular meal times and at no other time, about as adults do. Do not give him a bottle of milk. Instead of that have him sit up to the table and eat out of a plate and drink out of a cup or glass. Do not give him too much milk, about a pint or a pint and a half a day is enough. Give him stale bread, toast or crackers in considerable quantity. He should have a cereal daily. Give him plenty of any of the following: Well cooked spinach, carrots, cauliflower, green beans, potato, asparagus, tomatoes, peas, plenty of ripe fruit, a moderate allowance of eggs, simple desserts, such as custard, sauces, cookies, puddings.

An inspector from this department has investigated this complaint and has served notice on the owner of the chickens to abate the noise from the crowing roosters and to keep the chickens confined to his own premises or dispose of them.

DESIGNATED BENEFICIARY.

Chicago, June 8.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—My son took out a $10,000 insurance policy when he was in the service and still carries it. He named me, his mother, the beneficiary of the whole amount. Since his return he has married. Now if he should die before I do, would the insurance automatically revert to his wife or would the payments be made to me, inasmuch as I am named beneficiary on the certificate? A. H.

The insurance benefits are always paid to the designated beneficiary, provided of course the person designated is in the permitted class of beneficiaries. You are in the permitted class. Unless your son notifies the bureau that he wishes to make a change in the beneficiary the whole amount will be paid to you. In some instances the insured changed the policy, naming two beneficiaries, so that the insurance can be divided. Your son could do this if he wished, making part payable to you and the other part payable to his wife.

UNITED STATES HISTORY—ANSWERS.

1. What was the "Portage Railroad"? As the first locomotive could not climb a steep hill, cars were pulled up or let down the hills on an inclined plane by a rope and stationary engine. When Pennsylvania built her railroad over the Alleghenies many of these inclined planes were used. This "Portage Railroad," as it was called, was the most remarkable piece of railroading in the world at that time.
2. What practice in official appointments was introduced by President Jackson? He removed persons holding government offices and gave these positions to his political friends, thereby establishing the principle of "rotation in office," or "to the victor belong the spoils."
3. What were the leading questions during Jackson's administration? The tariff, the recharter of the National bank, and the use of surplus revenue.
4. What was the first public commercial route? The National road. It began at Cumberland, Md., crossed the Alleghenies to Wheeling, and was eventually extended as far as Illinois.
5. What is the first mention of the Mormons in the United States? In 1840 a settlement was founded at Nauvoo, Ill., by a new religious sect known as Mormons. Their leader, Joseph Smith, claimed to have received a direct revelation from heaven which he called the Book of Mormon.
6. What was the subsequent history of the first Mormon settlement? Later, Smith announced the doctrine of polygamy, which enraged neighboring settlers and Smith was killed by them. Brigham Young then led his followers west, where they settled and prospered in Utah.
7. What was the Webster-Ashburton treaty? In 1842 a treaty was negotiated between the United States and Great Britain, by which the boundary between Maine and New Brunswick was settled.
8. What were the leading questions of the campaign of 1844? The occupation of the whole of Oregon, and the annexation of Texas.
9. What battle checked Lee's first invasion of the north? The battle of Antietam, Sept. 17, 1862.
10. What were six Confederate victories during the civil war? Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Ball's Bluff, Chickamauga, Chancellorsville, Spottsylvania.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

WITH THE CARPENTER AGAINST THE IRON WORKER.

Chicago, June 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As for debate between carpenter and structural iron worker, I will say the carpenter is right, but he never told enough. As for the iron worker, I will say he is a friend or tool of his crooked officials. That is one reason he is never out of work or has to give graft, as the favors he does for his officers to boost them each election is one reason he is taken care of, while a true, honest union man who does not mix in graft politics is the sufferer. Sometimes the honest member is given a good job, but he holds it only long enough until the crooked official's friends get off a job. Then they see he is laid off this good job to make room for them. A great per cent of unions today are run by crooked officials who are only holding the jobs for the money that is in them, not for the membership's sake. If you go to a meeting to take it up you will be gavel ruled out of order or put out by the sergeant at arms, or told to bring it to executive committee, and if you do the officials kill it and no one hears any more about it.
EDWARD J. SMITHY.

A union man who has been a member of four different unions to date, and finds them all alike.

PUT THE LEGION INTO POLITICS.

Chicago, June 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In the June issue of the Credit Monthly, a magazine issued by the National Association of Credit Men, is an editorial in which the following patriotic "gem" appears:

"The most effective action the 33,000 organized credit men can take against the bonus is to work unremittingly in favor of the prompt, generous, and intelligent provision for former service men suffering physical or mental disabilities. Nothing is too good for these sick men; nothing is precisely what the well ex-service men should get."

No doubt the author of this was one of those smug patriots who stood on the curb waving a small flag and felt that he had thus performed his full measure of service and invested his sayings in Liberty bonds and talked about the sacrifices of war.

I must confess, however, that this person's selfishness has set me to speculating on whether or not his ideas of gratitude and spirit of fair play are not those of a great number of others who hung on to their jobs. With the reluctance with which anything whatever is done for the ex-service men, the delays and "beating around the bush" of the government, I am beginning to feel that the time has come when the American Legion should abandon its nonpolitical policy and become something besides a debating society. I don't mean by this to favor any political party, but do mean to do their utmost to see that men big enough and broad enough to at least feel some slight sense of gratitude for services rendered are elected to our law making bodies. A WELL ONE.

WHAT IS WRONG WITH THE POSTAL SERVICE?

Chicago, June 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—What is wrong with the Chicago postoffice, and will it ever improve? I subscribe to three New York weekly periodicals. Prior to the war they always came on Saturday. When I returned from the army in 1919 they arrived on Saturday for a time, then "wobbled" between Saturday and Monday, and finally decided in favor of Monday. Recently they began to "wobble" again, this time between Monday and Tuesday, and evidently Tuesday has won out, as Monday deliveries no longer take place. When in New York last fall I called upon two of the publishers and they assured me that their mail is put into a Chicago bound train every Thursday. That means that a piece of mail which leaves New York Thursday takes six days to be delivered in Chicago. DISGUSTED.

"ASSUMING" ONE THING; CONCLUDING SOMETHING ELSE.

Chicago, June 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In this morning's papers I note statements by Mr. John G. Shedd, Mr. John M. Glenn, and Mr. Harry A. Wheeler in defense of the Chicago Board of Trade. One must assume that this justification is intended to include the gambling which defenders of the board contend is a necessary adjunct to the present system of marketing. I can understand now why it is that in selecting employés for positions of trust big business men almost invariably show preference to those who are known to be given to speculation in grain. R. C. V.

COAL.

Manitowoc, Wis., June 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Hocking, a good bituminous coal, sold in 1914 for $5. Last year it sold for $10.50. Lately we have had much conversation about the decline in soft coal prices. Yes! They went to $5.50 and came down 50 cents. Later two further reductions of $1 each brought the price of Hocking to $3.50, still almost twice the 1914 price.

But the story of anthracite is worse.

In April, 1914, pea coal was $3.95. In 1917 it was $7.10, "April price." The following are prices quoted for May, 1921:

Pea coal, $14.10.
Nut coal, $15.95.
Stove coal, $15.95.
Egg coal, $15.70.

A 10 cent raise each month makes pea coal $14.20 in June and nut and stove coal $16.05.

Last spring the April price of pea coal was $13, and this year May price was $14.10. Why?

Some people would like a chance to vote for government ownership of railroads and mines. A SUFFERER.

RESTAURANT PROFITS.

Chicago, June 8.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—When butter sells at 25 cents a pound and flour is cheaper than ever since 1914 it is beyond human understanding how the lunch keepers and restaurateurs are able to gouge the public people.

For a little hot water, a spoon of "cream" and sugar, and a pinch of tea leaves you get fined at a one arm lunchroom 10 cents. The whole meal costs not more than 3 cents, counting help and rent. For rice and "cream" they soak you 10 cents when rice is 5 cents a pound. A so-called wine cake 10 cents since about four years ago. I suppose they want to nail that price to keeps. Take any dish—waffles or pie, stew or spaghetti—those bloodsuckers charge at least enough to make 400 per cent profit.

At such times, when about five million people are out of work and still have to keep body and soul together, it will be your public duty to hammer those shameless profiteers into reason and to wipe up the unfortunate public that is robbed at every step. The war is over; business is very, very poor. Times just like these are favorable for the breeding of lawless characters, robbers and imitators of those that rob them at every step. There will be no normal business before everybody gets back to normal, fairly and squarely. MECHANICAL ENGINEER.

OUI, OUI.

Clintonville, Wis., June 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Referring to your editorial of the third instant, "A Story of Fish."

I have read THE TRIBUNE for many years and have always considered it the best in this section of the country, but of late some of its editorials are positively disgusting.

Had I not read it myself, I would not believe that a paper which claims to be the World's Greatest Newspaper would allow one of its editorial writers to publish anything so insulting not only to the Carpentier, but to all Americans.

I have always been in favor of boxing as a sport, but if its effect is such as your editorial would seem to indicate the quicker it is legislated out of existence the better.

I take my hat off to Georges Carpentier, who is a gentleman as well as a boxer, who didn't sidestep when called to the defense of his country, and who will, I sincerely hope, lambast "Bull-neck" Dempsey out of the championship. C. S. THOMSON.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

THE SHEPHERD'S RESOLUTION.
By George Wither.

Shall I, wasting in despair,
Die because a woman's fair?
Or make pale my cheek with care
'Cause another's rosy are?
Be she fairer than the day,
Or the flow'ry meads in May,
If she be not so to me,
What care I how fair she be?

Shall a woman's virtues move
Me to perish for her love?
Or her well-deservings known
Make me quite forget my own?
Be she with that goodness blest
Which may merit name of best,
If she be not such to me,
What care I how good she be?

Great, or good, or kind, or fair,
I will ne'er the more despair;
If she love me, this believe,
I will die ere she shall grieve;
If she slight me when I woo,
I can scorn and let her go,
For if she be not for me,
What care I for whom she be?

"BACK to Methuselah." "I can make nothing of it, neither head nor tail. What is it all for? Why? Whither? Whence?" says Adam as he disappears in the last of the five new plays which Bernard Shaw has just committed. He is bewildered by what the world has come to in the year 31920 A. D. Not gifted with Adam's experience nor with his inside knowledge of his place in Mr. Shaw's scheme of the past, present, and future of the w. k. human race, I feel that it may be a justifiable lack of personal intelligence to exclaim with him, "I can make nothing of it . . ."

All I can do, as a friend and well wisher, is to tell you what Mr. Shaw says he has done. His preface is, like most of his prefaces, such a brilliant exposition of his premise that one forgets that perhaps the premise is chosen by Mr. Shaw with his tongue in his cheek. Unlike the plays, it is perfectly understandable. Darwinism is, or was, according to Mr. Shaw, the cause of all the evil of the last mental generation. Its easy explanation of the origin of life, the survival of the fit, was so simple as to be accepted by capitalist, by socialist, by dramatist, by theologist, by atheist, by every thinking person, in fact, and even by prime ministers and politicians.

It was, however, a philosophy of nihilism, the black pit, bottomless, the fire which was hotter than the frying pan of the old school of thought. It destroyed religion, which is the fundamental of human life—not dogma, which Mr. Shaw says should be considered as legend, written of and taught as such, but the sense of the fundamental purpose of life, which is a religion which should be acceptable to the totem worshiper as well as to the clerk in the Inns of Court; to the "boy so tactless as to betray an innocent calf love for the Virginia Mary" as well as to the sage worshiper of China. He says our religious legends should be pooled and a delightful stock of religious folklore made of them. But our religion should be inviolate, and that religion should be "Back to Methuselah."

To explain. Instead of believing that the fittest survived, he believes the Lamarkian theory that the will of the whole survived, that the giraffe has a long neck because the giraffe as a convergent mind whole willed that it should be able to eat the tender leaves from the treetops; that the fish lost its feet because it willed their uselessness—in other words, that group consciousness creates, that adaptation is not involuntary but volitional.

And there is his bomb. What human life needs to make it worth living is a longer span. We die before we have grown out of our stumbling days. Our knees are scarred to the day of our death because we have never learned to walk calmly. We must needs trip over our own awkward feet because we have never grown up enough to make them track properly. Three hundred years—seven hundred—an eternity, we need.

And on that theme he builds five plays, which, although they are at times extremely brilliant, at times full of that old satirical cleverness which made some find him "unbearably brilliant" in his earlier days, do leave one with the most chaotic feeling of why, whither, and whence.

The first play—"In the Beginning"—takes place in the Garden of Eden and is, to my mind, almost unbearably dull. Adam, miserable in the thought that they will have to live forever, and Eve, miserable with him, are told by the snake that Lilith brought them forth by the racking power of willing that they be, and instructs them in the process of bringing forth other humans that may save them from an eternity of living. They elect to live one thousand years, and in the second act their son Cain appears, glorifying himself as the first murderer, the first person to misinterpret the voice which bids man live.

The second play takes place in the first years after the war, and is the exposition of "The Gospel of the Brothers Barnabas," which is that the battle cry of the politicians should be "Back to Methuselah"; that the race should set itself a goal of 300 years as a life span. There is much subtle satire in "The Gospel"—political shadow plays, I suspect, of Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Balfour or Mr. Asquith, and much abstract brilliance about the rottenness in political Denmark. The Brothers Barnabas believe that the human race can live three hundred years and that it will.

In the third play "The Thing Happens" in the year 2170 A. D. With the aid of a Chinese sage, Confucius, and a handsome Negress the republic of the British islands is being managed by a descendant of the two politicians of the second play. The parlor maid of the second play and the young clergyman have lived their lengthened span—almost 300 years, in secret—by the expedient of having themselves drowned every sixty years or so. The discovery of their longevity puts the idea into their heads of marrying and begetting a race of long livers. The economic changes in the world, according to Mr. Shaw, are amusingly Utopian.

"The Tragedy of an Elderly Gentleman" takes place in 3000 A. D when an elderly Englishman visits, with his family, Ireland, the land of the long livers. The British empire has moved to Bagdad and is subservient to the Moslems. Ireland, the home of the sages, is also the home of oracles whose advice is sought. Telephoning is done by means of tuning forks, and super-electrical currents isolate undesirables. Short livers die of discouragement when they come in contact with long livers—who are classed as primaries, secondaries, and tertiaries, according to the century of their lives in which they are living. The elderly British gentleman, looking an oracle full in the face, dies of discouragement. There is much fun in "The Tragedy," but, as Adam said before, "Why? Whither?"

In the last play—"As Far as Thought Can Reach"—human life has become so specialised that the newly born are about twenty years of age when they come out of their shell. Their growth is so rapid that at the end of their second year they have completely outgrown their childhood, and they live until by some accident they die. They may live as long as Methuselah or they may die at the age of 4. They have overcome all material things. They outgrow love, they outgrow art, they become mere thought in the vortex of the world. Two beings, made by a scientist of three years, are so like humans of our day that they kill their maker and are in turn done away with, while the she-ancient says scornfully that the young consider the making of dolls the holiest work of creation, whereas it is thought that is the function of man.

Well, there it is, the most complicated exposition of any theme that one could well imagine; interesting, at times fascinating, but at others much further than thought—my simple thought, at least—can reach.

Elon Jessup, associate editor of Outing, has written a book which will be a guide, councellor, and friend to those who intend to spend their vacation on a motor camping trip. "The Motor Camping Book" it is called. It contains descriptions of all the standard equipment and a few amateur gadgets to make motor camping easy to do and worth doing. It also contains maps of the best motor camping trips—through the national parks and forests, and summaries of the motor laws of all the states. Incidentally, he tells of a few tricks by which a car may pull itself out of the mud, which wouldn't be amiss in any one's store of motor lore.

"The Crimson Blotter" is the title of the latest Isabel Ostrander mystery story. It is the story of a murder whose only clew consisted of two crimson stains on a piece of blotting paper.

Wholly delightful "Songs of Two Savoyards" are now available from the press of E. P. Dutton. The volume contains nearly seventy songs from the Gilbert and Sullivan operas—words and music complete.

"Terry," by Charles Goff Thomson, is a story of the Philippines under American administration—a story in which one sees clearly the inadvisability of the islands having their independence!

"Out of My Life" has just been published by the Harpers. It is a two volume autobiography of Field Marshal von Hindenburg. He does not refrain from explaining explicitly what happened under his generalship on both the eastern and western fronts. His naive wonderment at the outcome of the war is especially interesting as an example of the psychological processes of a thinking German. Also you'll be interested in his conferences with Gen. von Tirpitz about the declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare. I cannot help wondering, though, when I read an autobiography like this, just how much is fact and how much perspective speculation.

C. E. writes that the visit of M. Viviani has stirred his interest in what is happening politically in France, and he wants to know if there is any book which will tell him more than what he has read in American papers. Answer, there is. "Contemporary French Politics," by Raymond Leslie Buell, written not so long ago as to be out of date, containing simple statements of what France's position has been since the war on international questions. He—and you—can find there a clear statement of what France thought she ought to get from Germany, and why.

Those Scientific American prize essays on the Einstein theory are now available in book form, edited by J. Malcolm Bird.

DRAW A LINE

BY EDWARD GOLDBECK

IT is not difficult to draw a line, is it? We all learn it in grammar school, perhaps in kindergarten. It seems a simple, elementary performance. But all the practical wisdom of the world, the entire art of life, is contained in the three words: "Draw a line!" If you know where and how to draw a line, you will be a success. If you do not, you will be a failure.

In morals and politics and social relations: everywhere you will find this true. The moralist teaches us that virtue is the highest good, and all of us with firm or faltering steps follow this ever receding ideal, although we interpret the word virtue individually and therefore differently.

Franklin, who believed thoroughly in self-education, always practiced one virtue at the time. He changed every week. One week he gave all his attention to thriftiness, the next week to patience, the next to temperance, and so on. That sounds odd, but I think it was a practical arrangement, founded on his deep knowledge of human nature. It protected him from putting all his eggs into one basket and becoming a fanatic and a maniac through exclusive worshipping at the altar of one virtue. He probably had observed in many cases that virtue may and even must become a vice if you do not know where to draw the line. Courage becomes foolhardiness, caution weakens into cowardice, faith degenerates into spiritual stand-patism ,tolerance evaporates into indifference.

A wise man will not try to become divine; he will know that such an achievement is beyond his strength, and it will suffice him to remain human while endeavoring to be humane. Virtue and vice are not separated by an abyss which cannot be bridged. The Frenchman is right who says: "Less extrêmes se touchent," the extremes touch each other.

What we call classicism nowadays, the spirit of Greece at the times of her highest development, is practically nothing but the art of drawing the line. "Nothing too much" was the motto which the Greek worshipers read in the temple of Delphi. Virtue was found in moderation. Soberness was considered the mood in which a wise man ought to live. An undisturbed serenity is the characteristic feature of their gods.

This is entirely the ideal of a southerner, who lives under an azure sky and in a benevolent climate. The sun shows every object with an uncompromising precision; there are no hiding places, no dark corners; and what Helios does for the Greek landscape Socrates tried to do for the Greek soul. He tried to illuminate it through self searching and self knowledge until there should be unrelenting clearness even in the most remote lanes of the mental labyrinth.

Philosophy of the Golden Mean.

"NOTHING too much!" was the motto of the Greek drama. "Draw the line!" the dramatic poet cried. Submit to the laws of nature, be satisfied with your lot as a human being, do not vainly and foolishly try to emulate the gods, because they will not allow it, and Nemesis, the avenging goddess, will punish you. This is the ever recurrent "leitmotiv" of the Greek drama. They had a special word and a special incarnation (Hybris) for the overbearing mood of the human rebel who forgets his congenital weakness and endeavors to extend the domain of his achievements beyond their natural scope.

We may think that such a conception is rather Philistine—for where would we be if genius had not again and again tried to do the impossible?—but as a practical rule it is certainly valuable. Genius is a rare phenomenon; most of us are average beings, and as such we are pretty well satisfied if we succeed in fulfilling the multifarious duties of the day. For our commonplace purposes the philosophy of the golden mean is perfectly sufficient and a trustworthy guide.

And even when we look at the greatest men in history we shall see again and again that all their admirable qualities will become nonavailing if they have not received the gift of moderation which alone can lend stability and duration to their work. Napoleon was lacking in moderation. As one has said: "Inconsistency, your name is Woman!" one might say: "Immoderation, your name is Napoleon!" And because he was the paradigm of immoderation he died at St. Helena, a powerless exile and captive burdened with the hatred of the world.

Bismarck had the gift of moderation, but for once he allowed himself to be blinded by military arguments and annexed Lorraine. When he did this he prepared the political constellation which made the great war unavoidable.

But this truth does not only obtain within the realm of international problems; it applies to our domestic issues as well. This is the land of liberty—at least so we are wont to boast. The question is: How much liberty do we need, how much must we get, and how much can we stand? It has been said that the cure for all the evils engendered by liberty is more liberty. That sounds good, but is it true? Liberty is a stimulating and intoxicating beverage. Is the cure for all evils engendered by drink more drink? That seems unreasonable. The truth is simple, although unpleasant.

Here, too, we must draw the line, for otherwise liberty will degenerate into anarchy. It must even be acknowledged that nothing but anarchy ("living without a ruling power") is liberty fully achieved. Those who do not believe in anarchy will prefer to get only a limited dose of liberty; they will consider it as a remedy in small quantities, a poison if swallowed gluttonously.

"Where Shall We Draw the Line?"

ALL our political and social problems are coming under this head. "We wish to do the right thing with regard to the colored people, but we must draw the line somewhere!" "I believe strongly in democracy, but I cannot invite my janitor for lunch, can I? Where shall we draw the line?" Haven't you heard utterances like these innumerable times? And the worst of it is that it is true. If you don't believe it, try it out yourself, and you will soon come back to the old tenet convinced and repentant.

As soon as we drop this safeguarding sentence we are bound to slide into the most dangerous conclusions. Mr. Debs has said to a reporter that if he were to become president he would open all the prisons and send the convicts back to live with us. I never felt more enthusiastically pro-Harding than when reading those words. But a short time ago an old friend of mine, one of the leading Germans, Dr. Walker Rathenau, demanded a reform of criminal law in Germany which should absolutely exclude punishment. Two extremely different men, a Socialist and a capitalist, reached the same conclusion because they refused to draw the line between the normal human being and the criminal.

The constant criticizing of our institutions leads to a kind of idealistic nihilism which is only the more pernicious because it is well meaning. Criticism is a deliberate drawing of lines. The Greek word means to separate, to divide. To divide the good from the bad, the beautiful from the ugly, the fertile from the barren, that is the task of the critic. To criticize is to distinguish. Culture is a sense of shades. But the responsibility of the critic is enormous, and what we need in this country is not so much criticism as conservative, constructive criticism.

Alas! that so much should be hidden in three little words. Life is a complicated thing! It is trivial and sublime, uplifting and degrading, beautiful and hideous, alluring and terrifying. But now we must stop. It is a mistake to be too subtle, too ingenious, too deep digging. Here, too, we must draw a line.

GUARANTEED Consumers Company PRODUCTS

EVERY day we are offered cheap coal at cheap prices dressed up under the names and brands of good coal. WHY?

The railroads take one-third of the coal mined in this country, the governmental departments, utilities and industries about 55% and the retail business about 14%.

The industries and factories are clever and foresighted. They have made yearly contracts to be sure they get their coal through the winter. Industry coal, which they can't use now and which coal is not high class or fit for the retail business, is being resold into this market. It is cheap coal, therefore the prices are cheap, but Consumers Company will not buy it.

Today, you may hesitate and frown at our fair prices for the year, but if we yield and give you cheap coal at cheap prices you will be sore at us all next winter.

We ask your support of our policy to handle and sell only the highest grade coals. You can get more heat, more power and less smoke out of a ton of good coal than you can out of a ton and a half of most of the cheap grades of coal now being distributed in this market.

MISSION FINDS FILIPINO GAG ON ISLAND NATIVES

Summary of Its Findings Shows Conditions.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BAGUIO, June 11.—The Wood-Forbes mission has concluded its investigation of the eleven northern provinces of the Philippine islands.

A tour of the southern provinces will be begun at once from Manila.

Summary of Findings.

The results of the investigation up to date may be summarized as follows:

The roads generally are excellent, though they show signs of recent repair, especially in the districts through which the mission traveled. The schools are well attended and popular, and they are increasing in numbers. The Filipino teachers are earnest in many places and have made good records, but they do not have sufficient knowledge, themselves, of the English language to teach it well, and more Americans are needed.

The buildings are poor and ramshackle, the natives having failed to improve what the Americans started. The people of the barrios are indolent, naturally unprogressive, and have no initiative.

English Tongue Spreads.

English speech is common among the young, or is spreading rapidly. Spanish is no longer being taught, and in another generation English will be the common language.

Open markets with concrete floors, which are washed daily, are the feature of the country towns. Artesian wells have replaced the old wells.

The crops always are good, and there is no shortage of foodstuffs. The soil is highly productive and is capable of immense increase, it now being merely scratched by the primitive tools in use.

The land title situation is in bad shape, and complaints are general. Taxes have been doubled and trebled recently, but the people refuse to support their legislature.

Health Situation Poor.

The health situation is poor, the mortality rate being high. There are practically no hospitals, and the doctors of the Nationalist party, which runs the government, have things pretty well organized.

Throughout the provincial districts the governors arranged demonstrations at which orators for independence were introduced. They have such control that the people often are afraid to speak. This the mission considers to be discouraging, not being regarded as a sign of the people's ability to run a free government, but of their submission to an oligarchy. There are some signs of a revolt against present conditions coming from the young men of the educated class, who are just coming into their majority.

The courts are slow and the dockets are crowded, though most of the cases are civil, crime being infrequent. The constabulary everywhere is excellent and maintains goor order.

The women are taking an intelligent interest in affairs and promise to be a big factor in the future. In their meetings with the mission in manay towns they expressed their views more freely than the men. These women are of the educated class, however. The typical woman of the barrios beats her clothing on stones along the river or sits before her shack with a baby in her lap and usually may be seen smoking a long cigar.

Education is such that in many districts of Abra province natives wearing nothing but gee strings may be found living next to students attirred in correct white clothes and wearing spectacles.

Few Autos in Country.

Trade between the provinces is still carried on in antiquated sailing vessels along the rivers or sea or in long trains of bullock carts. Families take a week to go to the markets, camping along the road. There are almost no automobiles in the country.

There is a desire for an independent government among the people, although they realize their lack of education and property, and they fear an invasion. For those reasons they are willing to do what the Americans think best. The question of independence has been made a political issue, any many have felt they had to ask it while acknowledging privately that they did not think the country ready. A farmer in one meeting who said the public did not want independence was hustled out by the crowd. A woman at another session contradicted an argument of the town president who pleaded for independence.

Fear of Japs.

"What would you do if Japan came?" she asked scornfully.

Another woman explained that while she wanted independence she felt it meant turning the country over to the commercial exploitation of Japan and cited the case of Mindanao province, where the Japanese control 64 per cent of the commercial enterprises. She said that was a conquest without a shot being fired.

A good deal of this sort of thought is following the mission. The farmers and workmen do not seem to understand what the talk of independence is about. Gen. Wood often questioned men along the route, but seldom found one who comprehended his queries. A vote of the intelligent class now probably would result in favor of independence with the protection of America. Fire brands are few.

Loitering Costs Him $100, "Sassing" Judge $100 More

Loitering cost Bernard J. Murphy, 202 West 22d street, $100 yesterday in the Maxwell street court, and speaking his mind to Judge Schulman cost him $100 more.

Pasquale Gábriele received a Black Hand note at his home, 1061 South Sangamon street, bidding him deliver $3,000 at 21st and Clark streets to a man who would be there at midnight, June 4.

Pasquale was there at midnight with detectives. Murphy came along, stopped, waited. Hence his arrest. He denied any connection with the Black Hand.

RUNAWAY BOY, "TOO BRIGHT FOR HIS AGE," HUNTED BY MOTHER

ROLAND COCHRAN.

Mrs. Lotta Cochran of 511 South Prairie avenue, Champaign, Ill., has appealed to THE TRIBUNE for aid in the search for her 13 year old son Roland, who disappeared from school April 19.

The boy, she says, is suffering from a nervous trouble ascribed by specialists to rapid growth and his exceptional mentality. At times he is not thoroughly responsible and is extremely restless.

"That explains his running away," said the mother. "Last year he came to Chicago and managed to join the navy, although only 12. Of course he was discharged.

Roland's father, Howard Cochran, is a traveling salesman. Miss Doris Berekley, Mrs. Cochran's daughter by a former marriage, is here to assist in the search. They are with Mrs. John Steele at 3847 Gladys avenue.

2 YANKS DROWN IN THE MOSELLE, WATERING STOCK

COBLENZ, June 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—Two American soldiers, Corporal Samuel Carvey of 67 Model avenue, Hopewell, N. J., and Private Anton Holson, 5107 Hahn avenue, Cleveland, O., were drowned in the Moselle river here today while watering horses. Both were members of Battery F of the 6th field artillery.

Holson's horse stepped into a hole and threw him into the river. Carvey answered his call for help and tried to save him, but was dragged under by Holson. Comrades of the men recovered their bodies.

REVELL SAYS U.S. LEADS EUROPE IN NORMALCY DRIVE

LONDON, June 11.—"American business interests, particularly the retail branches, can compliment themselves on the progress made in the direction of normalcy," said Alexander H. Revell, head of the Chicago firm of that name, after two weeks investigating business conditions in London.

"I find business depression existing here to a degree that happily has been avoided in America by the foresight and prompt action taken by many American business men on price reductions. I find there still prevails in England a tendency to retain the old war time prices, and business is suffering pitifully as a result.

"By the way, your CHICAGO TRIBUNE enterprise doesn't seem to be lacking over here. When the Aquitania pulled into the roads of Cherbourg harbor at five o'clock one morning last week I was pleasantly surprised to find a copy of the European edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE on my breakfast tray. It makes Europe feel homelike to a Chicagoan."

Mr. Revell is here resting. He will attend the polo matches next Saturday.

FEDERAL TRADE BODY HITS SHOE PROFITEERING

Retailers Made 25 Per Cent in 1919.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[Special.]—Selling prices of shoes prior to the decline, which began a year ago, increased by greater amounts and percentages than costs, according to a report transmitted to the house today by the federal trade commission. The report is in response to a resolution of the house directing an inquiry into cost prices and selling prices of shoe manufacturers and retailers for the years 1918 and 1919.

The commission states that prices of leather and of shoes have not yet gone down as much as would appear warranted from present values of hides and skins. Says the report:

"Incident to the high prices prevailing in 1918 and 1919 were large profits earned by tanners, shoe manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers.

Tanners Made Big Profits.

"Earnings of eighty-nine tanners of shoe leather, whose production in 1918 was about 65 per cent of total production as reported to the commission, were 13.1 per cent on investment (as represented by capital stock and surplus and borrowed money) in 1918 and 23.8 per cent in 1919. Of these tanners the earnings of twenty-two companies tanning kid leathers, with production in 1918 about 70 per cent of the total reported kid leather production, were greatest, averaging 26.8 per cent on investment in 1918 and 81 per cent in 1919. Earnings of 341 shoe manufacturers without output in 1919, representing about 62 per cent of the total output shown in the census of 1919, were 16.2 per cent on investment in 1918 and 29.8 per cent in 1919.

Boosted Prices Without Cause.

"These large increases of tanners and shoe manufacturers were due primarily to the fact that their selling prices increased out of all proportion to the increases in their costs per unit of production, with resultant enhancement of their margins of profit per unit.

"Earnings of thirty-two typical shoe wholesalers and jobbers averaged about 21 per cent on investment in 1918 and about 31 per cent in 1919; earnings of forty-six typical shoe retailers averaged about 25 per cent in 1918 and about 32 per cent in 1919.

"These earnings, like those of tanners and shoe manufacturers, resulted from wide margins of profit taken on each shoe sold. The increased earnings in 1919 were due to the fact that selling prices increased by greater amounts and percentages than did costs."

VERBAL BATTLES ADD THRILLS TO NEWBERRY CASE

Washington, D. C., June 11.—[By the Associated Press.]—Working through two prolonged sessions, the senate committee hearing Henry Ford's contest for the seat of Senator Newberry of Michigan, today considered how far Senator Newberry's election was influenced as to the expenditures in his 1919 campaign; abated one almost physical row and about forty minor ones between opposing counsel, and revised the sick lists among subpoenaed witnesses.

R. F. Emery, office manager for the Newberry campaign committee, was reported by his wife as "somewhere in Canada" when the investigating doctors sought him, and renewal of search was ordered after Senator Edge, Republican, New Jersey, commented that all the details of money handling as the witnesses developed them "seem to be up to Emery."

Paul H. King, Newberry campaign manager, was cross-examined by Attorney William Lucking, for Ford, on the general question of Senator Newberry's familiarity with the campaign. He explained scores of communications passing between himself and the senator, who was a naval officer, held to his post in New York all through the campaign fight, and their bearing on the campaign.

"I didn't take up the question of finances with him," he said to the reiterated questions, "because I knew John S. Newberry (the senator's brother) was financing the campaign and that I was practically unlimited as to the expenditure."

So the Public May Know

Three drivers of Checker Cabs have confessed to State's Attorney Crowe that they, and three other men, are the murderers of Thomas A. Skirven, an innocent employee of the YELLOW CAB COMPANY.

This man was foully assassinated. He was shot down without the slightest warning—without the least chance to defend himself or escape. He was standing in front of one of our stations conversing with fellow employees when a car, containing these six assassins, swept by and six revolvers poured a stream of lead into his body. He leaves a young wife and three children.

Within an hour after his death we offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest of his murderers. And now that we have them safe in prison, the officers of the so-called "Checker Taxi Co." are seeking to camouflage a cowardly murder with the cry of "politics" to gain public and judicial sympathy.

This attempt to inject "politics" into a dastardly assassination will not do. This murder, and all the violent attacks which preceded it, is directly traceable to the public's lack of confidence in the character of Checker drivers and its refusal to patronize them. Their infuriated criminal minds could conceive of no other solution than the wanton destruction of YELLOW CABS and YELLOW CAB drivers.

Repeated and violent assaults on YELLOW CAB drivers have made it appear that two taxi-cab concerns are engaged in a disgraceful trade-war. As a matter of fact, the part the YELLOW CAB has played has been purely defensive—the same part that any respectable corporation or citizen would employ in warding off the attack of thugs. And we followed this plan under advice of the police, and their definite promise to protect us in the meantime.

In the name of Law and Order, Common Decency and Humanity, we want the public to know the facts. The YELLOW CAB is perfectly organized under the laws of the state and, by persistent, painstaking effort over a period of years, has become a high-class and very necessary institution. It has trained its men carefully on the law and order principle. It has them under thorough control and is proud of the record they have made.

Directly on the contrary, in a petition recently filed by Attorney General Brundage to dissolve the Checker Taxi Co., as a corporation, it is characterized as "a fraudulent corporation organized to deceive the public." The suit, in effect, is intended to force the organization to become responsible for the acts of its members and for any personal injury or damage they may cause, or get out of business. Up to now the Checker concern has refused to accept responsibility.

All of the Checker drivers own their own cabs and most of them are mortgaged to the hilt to avoid financial responsibility. Some of these Checker drivers are products of low pool-rooms—some of them are members of criminal gangs and have criminal records. Others are dismissed employees of the Yellow Cab Company who were discharged for dishonesty and unreliability.

Now that the police have for the first time realized and analyzed the ideas of Checker drivers, and now that the State's Attorney will immediately prosecute these men for murder, we feel that hereafter the Yellow Cab Company will be left alone to pursue its mission of furnishing Chicago with the highest class and cleanest taxi-cab service in the world.

We propose to pay this $5,000 reward for the conviction of these assassins. Strange as it may seem to you, one of their own fellow thugs thought more of $5,000 than he did of the necks of his associates. For the sake of the money, he betrayed them.

U. S. FORESTERS REGISTERING ALL MEMORY TREES

Send Certificates to Planters Free.

Gray skies above a somber earth. The hue
Of sorrow everywhere, yet I find ease
And newborn courage in the sight of you,
My trees.

THEODOSIA GARRISON.

BY LEOLA ALLARD.

The national forestry department is keeping tab on the states as they plant their trees along the nation's highways, in memory of all soldiers of the world war. Minnesota and New York are in the lead among the northern states, and Georgia and Florida in the south. The association is registering all memory trees and sending the certificates free to the planter or to the American Legion post to which the soldier belongs.

What is your town doing? Write THE TRIBUNE.

The school children of Minnesota are planting trees with the help of the Minnesota state forestry service. Forest rangers will be allowed a certain number of trees, and instructions are being given them by A. F. Oppel of Minnesota's forestry department.

The New York State College of Forestry has sent out a call to the people to plant trees and to register them with the forestry department at Washington.

1,000,000 Trees for Palestine.

Recent news dispatches say that the 3,000 school children of Jerusalem celebrated the Jewish Arbor day recently by planting 500 trees in the suburbs of the Holy City. The Zionists will plant 1,000,000 trees this year in Palestine. In 1919 just 369,000 trees were planted in Palestine, and to rejuvenate their agriculture, a regular reforesting program will be observed.

Baltimore, Md., is forging ahead fast in its tree planting and urging that the state of Maryland follow the plan and hurry the roadways of trees to their glorious finish. Assistant Forester K. E. Pfeiffer said: "It is too late for planting now in Maryland, but not too early to get ready for the fall planting campaign.

"The right of way is not always wide enough to permit of tree planting," he said, "but it is believed that with little difficulty the coöperation of property owners can be secured where their places adjoin the roads. There is not an important road in the system which is not in need of trees. The Annapolis and Washington boulevards connecting Baltimore and the state and national capital needs trees."

Planting Song.

Here is the planting song, to be sung to the tune of "America," which is declared by the national forestry department to be appropriate for tree planting services. Use it:

God save these trees we plant,
And to all nature grant
Sunshine and rain.
Let not their branches fade,
Save them from ax and spade,
Save them for joy and shade—
Guarding the plain.

When they are ripe to fall,
Neighbored by trees as tall,
Shape them for good.
Shape them to bench and stool,
Shape them to square and rule,
Shape them for home and school,
God bless the wood.

Lord of the earth and seas,
Prosper our planted trees,
Save with thy might.
Save us from indolence,
Waste and improvidence,
And in thy excellence
Lead us aright.

JUDGE DENIES REALTOR HOOL RIGHT TO CHILD

James A. Hool, the loop real estate agent who married again the day after he was divorced by Mrs. Louise Hool, received a scathing arraignment by Judge Jesse Baldwin yesterday when the court struck out a clause of the divorce bill granting Hool the right to see his child, James Hool Jr., an invalid, and take him to a physician.

"Mrs. Hool will take care of that," said the court. "I regret I cannot deal with this fellow the way he deserves. He is a menace to law and good order."

When the divorce was granted Hool told the court he had no intention to marry again. The following day he married his former stenographer, Rose Duffy, who had been identified in the court proceedings as a "Titian blonde." Hairpins and a strand of Titian tresses had been found by Mrs. Hool when the latter returned home from a trip.

Hool was not represented in court by his attorney, but one of his employés told the judge Hool did not intend to make this city his home any more, but will reside in Indianapolis, Ind.

35,000 MEN TO HARVEST KANSAS' CROP OF WHEAT

Salina, Kas., June 11.—Kansas today mobilized a great offensive on the eve of the opening of the wheat harvest.

Thirty-five thousand men from outside the state will be given work for a month in taking care of the crop of approximately 9,800,000 acres.

Sufficient labor is now in sight to handle the crop with a minimum delay.

At a conference of wheat producers held in various sections of the state it was agreed that the pay should be $3 for a ten hour day, with the usual board.

J. C. Mohler, secretary of the state board of agriculture, asserts that Kansas expects to harvest a crop of 115,000,000 bushels of wheat this year.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The United States Rubber company has agreed to take over the management of the Beacon Falls Rubber Shoe company for five years in return for half of the company's net earnings. The agreement is contingent, among other things, on approval of the holders of 75 per cent of the Beacon Falls company's noteholders and stockholders.

Chandler Motor is the latest of the automobile manufacturers to announce a cut in prices, but this had been pretty well discounted, as it turned out, in the market for the motor shares. The price of the company's touring car was reduced $110 to $1,785. T. W. Warner of Toledo has resigned as president and general manager of the Chevrolet Motor company and president and general manager of the Mucie Products company.

The Sinclair Refining company announced a reduction of 2 cents a gallon on the price of gasoline, effective June 11 at all points in New York and New England. This makes the tank wagon price 25 cents. The Standard Oil Company of Louisiana has contracted with the Hudson Oil company to purchase the latter's production. A dispatch from Baton Rouge, La., says that the constitutional convention has imposed a 3 per cent tax upon oil and gas products of Louisiana.

Payment for subscriptions to the new stock issue of the American Telephone and Telegraph company is not due until July 20. Six per cent interest only is allowed on payments made before that date, yet more than 22,000 subscriptions and cash payments of over $12,000,000 have already been received.

The New York stock exchange has admitted to trading the interim receipts of Lee, Higginson & Co. for the $30,000,000 American Agricultural Chemical company first and refunding mortgage 7½ per cent gold bonds recently marketed.

The Chicago federal reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending June 8 by 204 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district aggregate $892,352,000, compared with $811,682,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account reported by twenty-three clearing houses amounted to $889,841,000, compared with $1,089,224,000 for the corresponding week last year.

The Union Trust company of Pittsburgh, the Guaranty company of New York, and Brown Bros. & Co. have purchased $3,486,000 par value City of Pittsburgh 5 per cent tax free bonds. The bonds are dated May 1, 1921, and mature in thirty annual installments.

RAILROAD NOTES

Sir Henry ...yton, Canadian finance minister, has announced that interest amounting to $500,000 will now be paid on Grand Trunk Pacific bonds guaranteed by the Grand Trunk railway.

The Baltimore and Ohio has applied to the interstate commerce commission for permission to issue $1,000,000 of its refunding and general mortgage 6 per cent bonds. The Terminal railway company of St Louis asks authority to issue $791,000 of its first mortgage 7 per cent bonds. The Long Fork railroad company of Kentucky asks authority to issue $1,272,000 of first mortgage 6 per cent bonds.

The largest shipment of cattle to leave Boston in years went out on the Leyland line steamship Winifredian last week for Liverpool. There were 1,085 in all, and many are destined for sections of Europe to restock farms devastated by the war.

NEWS OF THE CROPS

Geo. M Le Count, the Stein, Alstrin & Co. crop expert, has returned from an extensive tour over the winter wheat belt, and says that he does not expect much improvement in the southwestern crop, because at that time most of it was in head to the northern part of Kansas and was too far advanced to be materially benefitted by rains. All that the cool, wet weather could do after that would be to give a good plump berry. In his opinion the next government estimate on winter wheat will be lower than the June report.

Black rust has been found in Nebraska, an Omaha message to Logan & Bryan saying it covered a district from Fremont to North Platte to Fremont to Norfolk. Crop expert B. W. Snow, who returned from Nebraska early in the week, says the rust reports have foundation in fact as he found it at Schuyler, Neb., between Columbus and Fremont, and also in Douglas county, near Omaha, but it is significant only because it offers a center of infection for the later spring wheat territory to the north.

Canadian wheat acreage is officially estimated at 16,854,000 for the prairie provinces, compared with 18,232,000 acres last year and a 5 year average of 16,343,000 acres. Barley acreage 2,456,000, or 4 per cent less than last year. Rye acreage 698,000, a gain of 7 per cent. Conditions best since 1915.

"In Phelps, Kearney and Adams counties, Nebraska, wheat will average 15 to 18 bu per acre," wired F. F. Thompson to J. E. Bennett & Co., from Hastings, Neb. "Hear occasional reports of black rust, but have been unable to locate it. Corn better than around Holdredge. Oats acreage small, but prospects are for heavy crop."

R. O. Cromwell's report to E. W. Wagner & Co., from Kansas City, covering southeastern Kansas, said wheat in that territory would average around 13 bu per acre. Heads short and poorly filled. Corn very uneven. Chinch bugs a menace to corn. Oats run from worthless to fair and 25 per cent will not cut."

GRAIN LOADINGS LIGHTER

A material decrease was reported in grain loadings on western lines the past week. On several of the big systems reductions in car orders were close to 100 cars a day, although they are in excess of last year's. Country elevators have been clean out of corn, but have some oats, and in the southwest the movement of wheat has decreased, owing to recent rains. The volume, however, as indicated by primary receipts, increased 273,000 bu for the week and 2,231,000 bu over last year. Corn and wheat receipts at the primary markets were the largest at this time in over five years, although corn decreased 993,000 bu for the week and increased 3,664,000 bu over last year. Comparative receipts at Chicago for the week were:

HEAT FORECAST BULGES GRAINS; CLOSE NEAR TOP

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Bullish conditions counted in grains the last yesterday, with more than complete recovery from the early declines and with prices at the high- of the day.

Weather conditions were bearish early and bullish later, a hot wave being pre- dicted for this week, which was regarded as unfavorable for both winter wheat and oats, as they are in the filling stage in many sections. Net gains on wheat were 1¾@2¼c, with September leading. Corn gained 1½@1¾c, with July and September practically the same price, while oats were up ¾@1c and rye 3¼@ 4c.

The week witnessed an erratic move- ment of values, with wheat advanced and corn and oats on the decline. At the last wheat was 7@8c higher, corn off 1@1¼c, oats 1¼@1¾c, rye 6@6½c higher, and barley neglected and unchanged. Pork showed 30c advance, lard 15@17½c, and ribs were 22½@30c higher than a week ago.

Black Rust Reported.

A new feature in wheat was the re- port of black rust from Fremont to North Platte, Neb. It had been known for several days, but no attention had been paid to it. Crop Expert Snow, who spent most of the week going over the state, said the rust was there, but was not likely to do any damage. Rains were reported over part of the winter wheat country, with floods in Kansas and fine weather in the northwest. At last the bulge was due to buying on reports of a hot wave for the coming week.

There was nothing in the export or general cash demand to create a strong and advancing market. Export demand was slow and no new business was re- ported. Cables from Liverpool said buy- ing from England was not to be expect- ed for a week, owing to the millers' con- vention in progress there.

At no time was the selling pressure on wheat heavy, except from a local opera- tor who was getting out of a large line of July from $1.38 to $1.37. His wheat was absorbed and the buying by commis- sion houses was liberal, with the sea- board taking July, advancing it to $1.38¾ the last and closing it at $1.38¼ to 38½.

September Wheat Feature.

September was bought by most of the big houses with Wall street connections, and after selling at 17c under July early it advanced to 14c discount at the last. This was the feature and started general covering. Sentiment was more bullish at the last, with expectations of rains for the southwest over the Sunday holiday, which would delay harvesting. Heavy covering of September against sales of July was a big factor at the last.

Corn prices were off ½@1c early, with selling against the bids. In the last hour they advanced, so that buying on first offers became active. July sold from 61½c to 64⅝c. There was also ac- tive covering by shorts in July and buy- ing of September and selling of July and vice versa, which advanced the July to parity with September. Country offerings were lighter and cash trade was slow. The week's receipts at primary markets were the largest at this time in years.

Oats were sold free early against week- end bids and declined, only to become ac- tive at the last on general covering, due to predictions of a hot wave. Prices moved up 1¾c at the extreme and fin- ished near the top, with July 38¼c and September 39¾c.

Rye trading was light and consisted mainly in spreading with wheat. Cash prices were 3c lower and futures up 5c from the low point of the day. The sea- board inquired for barley, but bids were out of line.

Loose Lard Makes Gain.

A better cash trade was on in lard and ribs for export account. Loose lard, which sold at $1.30 under July a week ago, was 90c. Offerings were lighter and trading in futures was not heavy, with prices close unchanged to 2½c higher. Ribs were neglected and 2½c lower. Packing here since March 1 was 1,679,000 hogs. Prices follow:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

A weather market is on in wheat, and the conditions prevailing in the winter wheat section this week are expected to be the leading factors in shaping the course of values. The winter wheat crop is at a stage where damage can easily result from hot weather and too much rain. It is the same way with oats in many sections.

September wheat, which has been under pressure for a week, is showing increased strength. For several days a few of the large traders have called attention to the discount being too great, as compared with the July, and the buying yesterday brought it into prominence. Those who have been long July were getting out late yesterday and taking the September, which advanced the latter 3c relatively to the July, leaving the discount around 14c at the last. The short interest has been cut down somewhat but is still large.

Should there be rains in Kansas and Okla- homa this week harvesting will be delayed and the movement of new crop wheat held back. Kansas City claims that there is 25,- 000,000 bu wheat sold to go out by the end of July, which will take a big movement to satisfy, as there is little wheat at Kansas City and the movement from the country the last few days has been reduced by wet weather.

September wheat had its season's range the past week, $1.13¾@1.24½, or 11c, while the July had a range of 13¾c, the latter get- ting within 1c of the highest of the season.

An immense volume of unspreading took place in corn the last few days. The market has been heavily oversold on the belief that the crop outlook was excellent, stocks too large and the demand too light for any ad- vance of consequence. Heavy unspreading between July and the September with the pressure on the latter brought the two months together for the first time this season. Those who have been short expecting the carrying charge difference to work in their favor have been greatly disappointed.

For the time being there is a more friendly feeling toward the buying side of corn and oats on breaks on the theory that they have been well liquidated. Cash demand is not following the advance in futures. No. 2 yellow and No. 2 white corn were ½c under the July and No. 2 mixed 1c under, with the No. 3 grades 1½@2c under. No. 2 white oats yesterday were July price to ¼c under.

J. C. Rogers, who joined the Board of Trade around 1864, has sold his membership and will retire from business. He was vice presi- dent of the board in 1907.

Charles Sincere & Co. take a bullish view of the wheat situation and say foreigners must realize there will be stiff competition for new wheat.

Allen Logan of Kansas City wired: "Selling cash wheat freely now in central Kansas. Growing weather all over, and I expect an early general movement of large proportions."

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Stocks were generally in supply and de- clines occurred in practically all issues in the local unlisted market last week. Trad- ing was generally quiet. Butler Bros. moved off to low sales at 31¼, offerings were at 32 and buyers at 31¼ at the close. Creamery Package at 24½ to 25½ was unchanged. U. S. Gypsum common reacted on light sales to 16¾ bid, 16¾ asked. McCord lost a point in selling at 6¼, but firmed up to 6½ bid, 6¾ asked at the close. Inland Steel was also easier, sales ranging between 41 and 40¾; the latest transaction at 40¾. Moline Plow preferred was offered at 25 with little in- terest on the buying side, and Avery com- mon quiet at 25 to 30. Glidden common was active around 12, closing at 11½ bid, 12½ asked.

Among the sugar issues, Columbia sold at 8, while Holland-St. Louis was off a half at 6¾ to 7¼. Motor securities sold off. Reo declining to sales at 16⅞, closing at 17⅛ to 17⅞, a net loss of ¼. Packard ranged be- tween 7½ and 8, and Continental between 5½ to 5¾. Paige was quiet around 15.

Public utilities generally were lower: Cities Service issues suffering drastic declines upon the announcement that the dividends tempo- rarily would be paid in scrip. The common at the close was offered at 190, preferred 60, and Bankers 20, but no bids showing. United Light & Railway common, while in good demand, was fractionally lower at 24½ to 25¼; preferred 60½ to 61¼. Common- wealth Power Railway & Light was un- changed at 10¼ to 11¾, preferred at 30½ to 31¼. American Light & Traction common was steady at 81 and 82½, preferred 80¼ to 81½. Northern States Power common was quiet at 47 to 49, preferred 80 to 82. Stand- ard Gas & Electric was somewhat easier, sales being made at 11 and 11½, preferred at 34 to 35.

Local bonds were featured by a substantial rally in the late trading in the packing house issues. Armour 7s improved from 93½ to sales at 95½, and Swift 7s to 95¼ bid, 95¾ asked. Morris 7½s advanced one-half a point to 96¼ bid, and Cudahys were in demand improving a point to 99¾@100¾. Wilson issues were an exception to the gen- eral trend, the first 6s closing at 83 to 83½ and the convertible 6s at 79½ to 81, representing losses of 1 and 1½ points re- spectively. National Leather also declined fractionally to 93⅛@94¼. Sears notes were all stronger, 1922s improving to 97¼ bid, while the 1921s and 1923s moved up a quarter.

Hodgson's Office and Theatre Building First Mortgage 7% Gold Bonds

Secured by Building, Land and Equipment Located on Northeast Corner Wisconsin Avenue and Pleasant Street, Oak Park, Illinois

AN OAK PARK INSTITUTION

THERE is probably not an Oak Parker who hasn't eaten Sunday din- ner, luncheon or after theatre supper at Hodgson's—or who has not bought his candy or eaten his ice cream. For the majority of Oak Parkers, HODGSON'S TEA ROOM is a regular habit, bringing such a volume of patronage that it has taxed the capacity of the tea room con- tinuously.. HODGSON'S OAK PARK THEATRE is equally popular and is the largest in Oak Park.

THREE TO ONE SECURITY—The building is composed of two sections, one the OAK PARK THEATRE, a fireproof, thoroughly modern playhouse of 1,300 seats; the other section contains six offices on the second floor and HODGSON'S TEA ROOM on the first floor. Total value of security, based on costs several years ago, when built, $360,000. This is almost three times the amount of bonds.

LARGE INCOME—Total income from entire building is $30,000 annually, or over three times the greatest annual interest charge on bonds. Lubliner & Trinz have a lease on the theatre running eleven years from present date.

BEST LOCATION—In center of the business district, one block from Wisconsin Avenue station of Oak Park Elevated. The theatre draws from at least half a dozen suburbs in addition to Oak Park.

Denominations: $100, $250, $500, and $1,000; maturing 18 months to 7 years. Mort- gagor pays normal federal income tax not exceeding 4% on interest of bonds.

Closing hog trade yesterday was the best of the day, with packers good buyers at prevailing prices, which are 15@40c higher than a week ago. Heavy and mixed packing gained most over a week ago, the price range being narrowest of the year.

Top 200 lb butcher hogs sold at $8.40, while comparatively few heavy packing sold below $7.90. Day's general average was $8.10, Armour's droves of 3,700 costing $8.13. Week's average price at $8.05 was only 15c above previous week, the lowest since January, 1916.

Last week's receipts of hogs were second largest in three months at 162,100, and shipments at 32,700 largest since February. Estimated average weight last week at 238 lbs increased 3 lbs over previous week, being 10 lbs heavier than a year ago.

Financing Utilities with Stock.

The suggestion recently made by the Investment Bankers' association that utility companies ought to do more financing by issuing stock, and less by selling bonds, is a sound one. It does not mean, however, that small investors ought to buy stock instead of buying bonds.

A company that is financed principally with bonds, and has only a little stock outstanding, is in an unsound position, and, as a result, has to pay high rates for money if it can borrow at all. This condition has arisen in numerous companies because of poor earnings in the last few years. When dividends were earned with only a narrow margin of safety, or none at all, stock could not be sold. If funds were needed, the only way to get them was by borrowing. In this way the margin of safety for the interest charges became too narrow.

The only proper way to cure such a situation is, first, to increase earnings by getting higher rates or making economies, if possible, and then to induce backers of the company and their friends to increase their stock holdings. The common stock of a utility company is usually rather speculative and not suitable for a savings investment. Most utilities have preferred stock outstanding which ranks somewhere above common stock, but below all the bonds. If its dividend is earned with a wide margin, it is fairly safe, and a small investor is justified in buying a little of it. He should always bear in mind, however, that it is a less conservative investment than the bonds of the same company, and ought to sell at a price to make its yield a little higher.

A patron of a utility company may, if he wishes, buy preferred stock from it on a lower income basis than that on which its bonds sell in the market, but such a purchase is not justifiable on an investment basis. It may be made as a matter of local pride—to help build up home institutions. On that understanding it may yield a satisfactory return to a business man.

The New York Times.

New York, June 11.—[Special.]—A week of excessively violent movement in all the markets ended today with early weakness and subsequent recovery in European exchange and with another general decline in the industrial stocks, in which the selling reached large proportions with a number of industrial shares, with declines ranging from 1 to 5 points. Railway shares as a rule held reasonably firm.

Numerous new low records for the year were made, bringing the total well in excess of 100 separate issues. The features today were the oils, Mexican Petroleum selling down to 128¾ and Pan-American Petroleum at 44½. Cuba Cane Sugar common and preferred also made new records, as did American Sugar and Crucible Steel, while United States Steel common duplicated the low for the year. There was some recovery from the low prices.

Exchange Rates Fluctuate.

The downward swing of rates, with subsequent partial recovery, a daily occurrence in the last week's foreign exchange market, was repeated today. Except for Berlin, however, none of the principal European exchanges touched the week's lowest rates. Sterling, after a 1½c decline, recovered ¾c. It ended 7c above Thursday's low point of $3.69½, but 10¾c under the previous week's closing and 26¾ under the present year's high level, reached on May 19.

Closing rates for continental exchange left the franc ⅝c below the year's best figure, with the Italian lira down a little more than ¾c, the Dutch florin nearly 3½c and the German mark not quite ½c. All these exchanges are still, however, well above the low point of the year. The feeling prevails that unless some change in policy or method is adopted by the reparations commission still lower rates are probable.

The statement of our foreign trade for May showed exports $10,000,000 smaller than in April and barely one-half in value what they were as late as January. During the last four months the total decrease from 1920 has been no less than $1,350,000,000, a shrinkage quite unexampled in our commercial history. But the May imports also declined $46,500,000 from April; indeed, perhaps, the most striking viewpoint is obtained by pointing out that, as compared with a year ago, the money value of last month's foreign trade has shrunk $639,000,000, or a trifle over 54 per cent.

The decline of the period in average American prices of commodities is variously estimated at 37 to 47 per cent. The government reports total gold imports of $55,205,000 in May, which would bring the total for the first five months of 1921 to $334,000,000. Since the end of May we have imported something like $10,000,000 more.

Gotham Banks Cut Loans.

The weekly statement of the New York associated banks showed further reduction of $61,355,000 in the loan account, which is now lower than the high point of last October by the prodigious sum of $1,006,000,000. It must not be forgotten, however, that this account in the weekly bank statement includes holdings of securities as well as market loans and discounted bills. Excess reserves increased $23,191,320, being entirely the result of the member banks increasing their reserves in the Federal Reserve bank by $24,856,000. Net demand deposits increased $12,258,000. CHANDLER SIX

$1785

Down to the 1913 Price

1913 Five Passenger $1785

1921 Seven Passenger $1785

Highest Quality at a Price Unequalled

Monday, June 13, new low Chandler prices are effective. This new Chandler price puts the Chandler car right out in front. $1785 for a five-passenger touring car was the price of the Chandler of eight years ago. The big, handsome, powerful Chandler of today, constantly developed, enlarged and refined as the years passed, would have sold in that earlier day for twice its present price.

Our action in restoring that 1913 price for today's Chandler, is convincing evidence of the constancy of the Chandler Company's long established policy of high quality at low price. The Chandler price has never at any time been advanced because of over-sold trade.

Chandler Offers So Much More For So Much Less

Other cars of many kinds and many motors have come and gone while the Chandler Six lives and grows. There is only one Chandler Six. There is no other car like it. No other car, within hundreds of dollars of the Chandler price, has the features characteristic of the highest type of design and construction for which the Chandler Six is justly famous.

The buyer of a new car will find an extraordinary degree of satisfaction in the Chandler.

Chandler offers all the power and speed and comfort and dependability of service that the discriminating buyer desires, and it provides these qualities in full measure at a price unequaled.

A Chandler Advertisement of 1913

Which Light Weight Six Will You Buy?

The Chandler is the only six-cylinder car selling for less than $2000 which has all the following features found on all the leading high-priced sixes.

Bosch Magneto for Ignition	Used on the most famous American sixes	Packard
Separate Electric Motor for Starting		Peerless
Separate Electric Generator		Pierce (motor)
Imported Annular Ball Bearings		Locomobile
Large Gasoline Tank—in rear		Lozier

CHANDLER LIGHT WEIGHT SIX $1785

Other Features Worth Discussing. In addition to the above features, each of them eminently successful proof motors, there are many other features that are characteristic of high-standard design and construction and are found on many of the high-priced sixes.

The Chandler is the only light six selling for less than $2000 on which are to be found all of the following features: Mayo Cellular Muscular Type Honeycomb Radiator, True Stream-line Body Design. No dash, no projections. Crowned fenders. Absolutely clean running boards. Single plate electric ignition, with wiring run through armored conduit. No side lamps. Double globes in front lights. Cast aluminum motor base, extending from frame to frame. Oiling system all contained within the motor. No outside piping. 1 Imported Coventry clutch. Instead of noisy gears, to drive camshaft, pump and generator. These chains run silently in a constant spray of oil. Left-side drive and center control—multiple disc steel and asbestos clutch—demountable rims—Stromberg Carburetor, with hot air and dash priming attachment—double internal expanding brake drums—triangle suction torsion rod, with forward end fitted with double spring bushes—deep 10 and 12 inch cushions.

The Chandler has all these features, and more. Regular equipment includes, in addition to equipment items already named, Jiffy Curtains, 8-day clock, Jones speedometer, rain-vision plate-glass ventilating windshield, Ride Control tire holders, instantly adjustable tire carrier in rear of limousine, carrying tire without straps.

Consider carefully the Chandler and the three or four other well-known light sixes. Compare values in detail. Consider the six-cylinder experience of the builders.

A full season's service in the hands of hundreds of owners all over America has not developed a single mechanical weakness in the Chandler. We know of no way to improve the Chandler chassis. The new body design is the ultimate in graceful beauty.

Four types of body: Five-passenger touring, $1785, a handsome roadster, $1785; four-passenger coupé, $2485; limousine, $2985.

Let us show you the kind of service the Chandler is giving owners everywhere. Write us today for catalogue and convincing book called "Prosperity." We will also send you our "Proof Sheet" by which to find comparative values in automobiles.

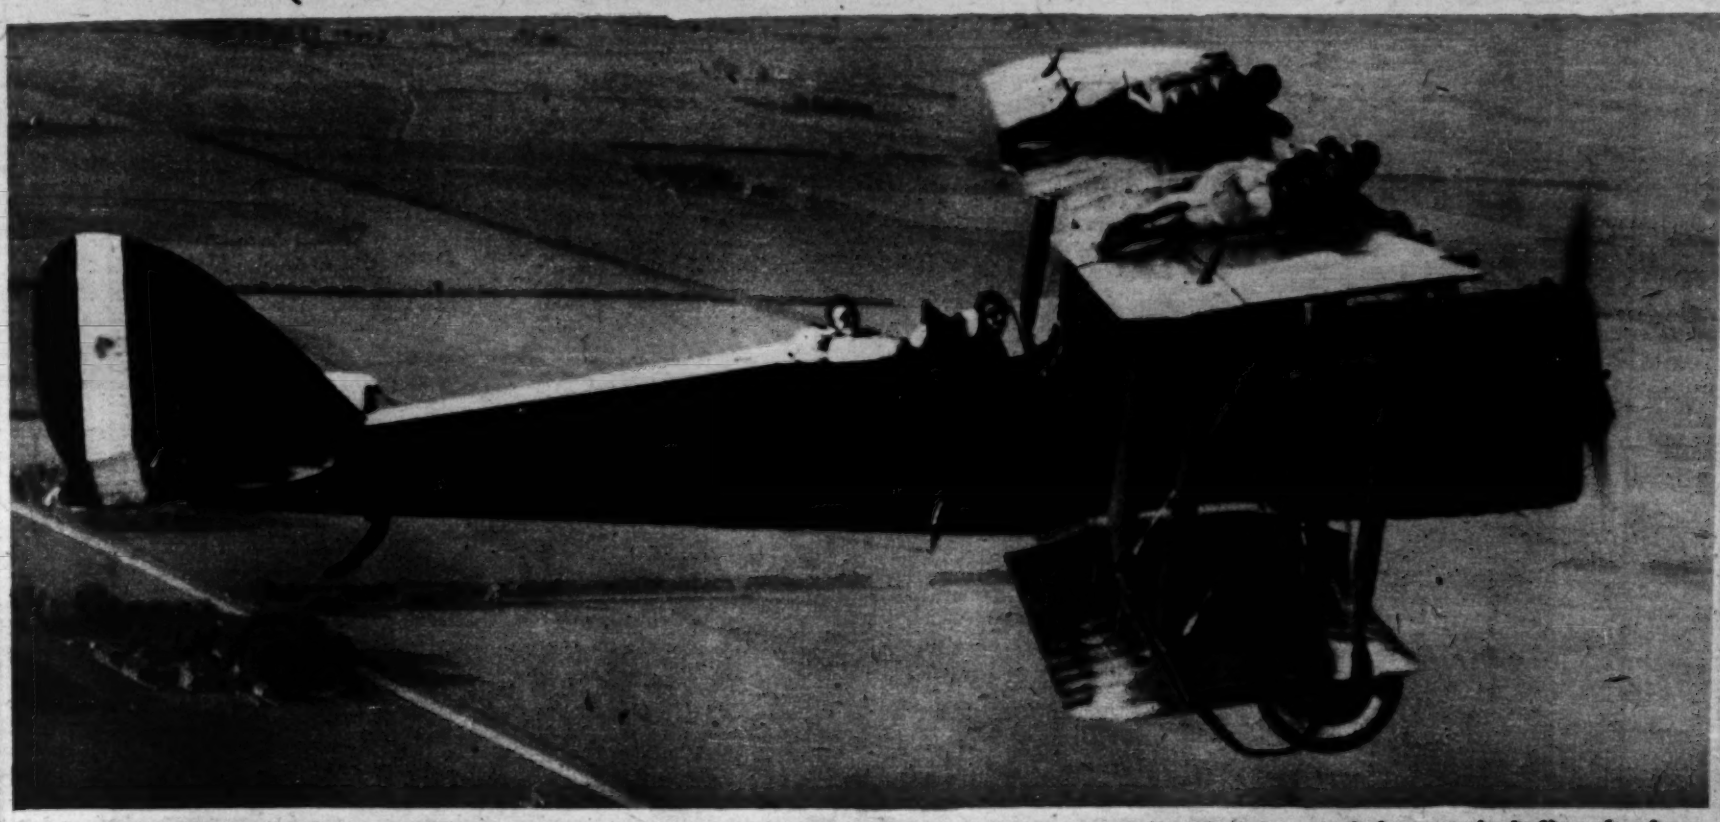
A QUADRUPLE PARACHUTE JUMP



FOUR MEN AND A DOG went aloft at Rantoul, Ill., on Memorial day, one man to pilot the plane and the rest, including the dog, to demonstrate their skill in making parachute jumps. Here they are sailing along above the neat Illinois farms, posing amiably for The Tribune camera man in a close-flying "ship." The jumpers are Lieut. G. A. Shoemaker, Sergt. Pat Love, Sergt. Frank Komensky, and "Bing," the dog aerialist, who, having his mind on something else beside being photographed, is nestled down beside Lieut. Shoemaker, out of sight.

THE FIRST JUMP—One of the men who has been lying on the upper wing of the plane has just risen and permitted himself to be jerked off into space by the wind, which is beginning to fill his gradually opening parachute. The other man on the top wing is getting to his knees, preparing to do the same thing, while the jumper in the cockpit below waits for the first two to get out of the way. It all looks like a violent proceeding, but the jumpers say they suffer no ill effects, and "Bing," the dog, seems to like it.

HERE ARE THREE OF THE FOUR PARACHUTES floating lazily to earth. All the jumpers landed safely, being jarred, they said, about as much as one would in stepping down from a four foot ladder. The performance was part of a program staged by the army flying circus as a Memorial day feature, twenty-one planes altogether taking part. (TRIBUNE photos.)

How To Keep Your Child's Hair Beautiful

What a Mother can do to keep her Child's Hair Beautiful, Healthy and Luxuriant

THE beauty of your child's hair depends upon the care you give it. Shampooing it properly is always the most important thing.

It is the shampooing which brings out the real life and lustre, natural wave and color, and makes their hair soft, fresh and luxuriant.

When your child's hair is dry, dull and heavy, lifeless, stiff and gummy, and the strands cling together, and it feels harsh and disagreeable to the touch, it is because the hair has not been shampooed properly.

When the hair has been shampooed properly, and is thoroughly clean, it will be glossy, smooth and bright, delightfully fresh-looking, soft and silky.

While children's hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why discriminating mothers use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure and it does not dry the scalp, or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it

If you want to see how really beautiful you can make your child's hair look, just

Follow This Simple Method

FIRST, wet the hair and scalp in clear, warm water. Then apply a little Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo, rubbing it in thoroughly all over the scalp and throughout the entire length, down to the ends of the hair.

Two or three teaspoonsfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather. This should be rubbed in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips, so as to loosen the dandruff and small particles of dust and dirt that stick to the scalp.

When you have done this, rinse the hair and scalp thoroughly, using clear, fresh, warm water. Then use another application of Mulsified.

Two waters are usually sufficient for washing the hair; but sometimes the third is necessary. You can easily tell, for when the hair is perfectly clean, it will be soft and silky in the water, the strands will fall apart easily, each separate hair floating alone in the water, and the entire mass, even while wet, will feel loose, fluffy and light to the touch and be so clean, it will fairly squeak when you pull it through your fingers.

Rinse the Hair Thoroughly

THIS is very important. After the final washing the hair and scalp should be rinsed in at least two changes of good warm water and followed with a rinsing in cold water. When you have rinsed the hair thoroughly, wring it as dry as you can; and finish by rubbing it with a towel, shaking it and fluffing it until it is dry. Then give it a good brushing.

After a Mulsified Shampoo, you will find the hair will dry quickly and evenly and have the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it is.

If you want your child to always be remembered for its beautiful, well-kept hair, make it a rule to set a certain day each week for a Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This regular weekly shampooing will keep the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage, and it will be noticed and admired by everyone.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store or toilet goods counter.

A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

Teach Your Boy to Shampoo His Hair Regularly

IT may be hard to get a boy to shampoo his hair regularly, but it's mighty important that he does so.

His hair and scalp should be kept perfectly clean to insure a healthy, vigorous scalp and a fine, thick, heavy head of hair.

Get your boy in the habit of shampooing his hair regularly once each week. A boy's hair being short, it will only take a few minutes' time. Simply moisten the hair with warm water, pour on a little Mulsified and rub it vigorously with the tips of the fingers. This will stimulate the scalp, make an abundance of rich, creamy lather and cleanse the hair thoroughly. It takes only a few seconds to rinse it all out when he is through.

You will be surprised how this regular weekly shampooing with Mulsified will improve the appearance of his hair and you will be teaching your boy a habit he will appreciate in after-life, for a luxurious head of hair is something every man feels mighty proud of.

A MEMORABLE FLAVOR THAT CHEERS AND SATISFIES

A search to find the finest coffee in the world!

Years spent in sampling, testing, blending—in seeking the coffee that possessed every desirable quality, and each quality in the highest degree.

And the result is—Yuban.

The fragrance of Yuban is savoury and penetrating, a true coffee aroma that never fails to fill the coffee-lover with delight.

You rejoice in its clear, deep amber color as you pour it out and you notice its strength and richness in the cup—such "body" that the cream curls down into it in lazy, wavering spirals.

And the flavor!—the rare flavor that its fragrance promised, that cheerful, satisfying flavor that fills you with content.

Because Yuban is handled with endless care through the many processes, it is always the same—tomorrow's coffee will be as clear, as fragrant, as flavorous as today's.

JACKIE COOGAN'S debut as the Kid in "The Kid" made a star of him over night. Now his name's in electric lights as the bad boy in "Peck's Bad Boy."

Look at the grin on his face, would you! Well, no wonder.

Corns Shrivel and Peel Off

Touch any corn with a few drops of "Gets-It" and peel it off—not in fragments, but painlessly, in one solid piece of dead skin that does not cling to the live flesh. "Gets-It" removes it all, cap and root. All hurting stops the minute it is applied. Soft corns, hard corns, old corns, new corns, all go when "Gets-It" comes.

Just as good for calluses. Costs but a trifle—everywhere. Refuse substitutes.

Genuinely Attractive

are those whose charms convey the impression of having been naturally acquired, exhibiting no evidence of artificiality. Hair and skin look as though they retained their beauty and youthfulness as a result of hygienic care and cleanliness. The preparations here described are appreciated particularly by those who prefer "natural beauty" to that which is obviously otherwise.

Hair of Such Lively Lustre That It Fairly Scintillates!

Adopt the simple Silmerine method and you will have just the prettiest curls and waves—so perfectly natural in appearance! The waviness lasts ever so long, even in damp weather. No more bother with loose strands stringing about your face—nor with burnt, uneven ends! Your hair is bright and glossy, instead of dull and dead looking.

Liquid Silmerine

Smart women now regard Liquid Silmerine as a real necessity. It may be used by the dark-haired, the light-haired, the gray-haired, without any fear that it will change the color of the hair—or discolor the scalp, or produce any evil results whatever. Recommended by leading members of the theatrical profession.

Every Woman Prefers a Natural Complexion

Shedding worn-out skin is Nature's way of renewing the complexion. When this process lags, a bad complexion results. Then Mercolized Wax comes to the rescue. Actually absorbs the aged, faded or soiled top skin, in tiny particles, day by day, causing no inconvenience. The fresh, bright, health-tinted skin which has been covered up, soon is revealed in all its beauty, and the face looks much younger. No wonder Mercolized Wax for years has been one of the "best sellers."

Removing Wrinkles, Age Marks and Flabbiness

Dissolve one ounce of Powdered Saxolite in one-half pint of witch hazel, and you have an effective and harmless wrinkle remover. Bathing the face in this quickly tightens and tones the skin, erasing every line. Remarkably effective for flabby skin, and double chin. Reduces enlarged pores. Gives a tired, careworn face a freshened feeling and appearance.

Actually Removes Roots of Superfluous Hair

A boon to women disfigured with superfluous hair or fuzz is Phelactine—because it actually removes the roots. Easily, quickly, harmlessly. Not a caustic, to merely burn off the surface hair. Not a depilatory. Not electrical. It is "different," and truly wonderful. No odor, no irritation, no scar—skin is left clean, white and smooth. Get a stick of Phelactine today, try it, and you will be surprised and delighted.

Vest Pocket Autographic KODAK, Special

with Kodak Anastigmat f.7.7 lens

$15.00

Enlargement from negative with V. P. Kodak Special, with Kodak Anastigmat f.7.7 lens and a 75 cent Kodak Portrait Attachment. Enlargements of this size cost 15 cents.

The Little Vest Pocket Kodak is to other cameras what a watch is to a clock. It has all the accuracy but avoids the bulk. And the Special Vest Pocket Kodak, with its fine Anastigmat lens, is comparable to the watch that is "full jeweled."

Actual size of Kodak.

The Pictures, in their original size, are 1⅝ x 2½ inches, but the Kodak Anastigmat f.7.7 lens produces negatives of such sharpness that enlargements can be made to almost any size. Thus with a camera so small that it can be carried in the vest pocket or in a lady's hand-bag, you may have large pictures from your Kodak finisher.

The Simplicity of operation gives this Vest Pocket a special appeal. The front pulls out—snap—into position for picture-making without further focusing. And by the use of a Kodak Portrait Attachment, "close-ups" are easily made. This attachment is merely a supplementary lens which can be instantly slipped on over the front of the regular lens, thus so altering the focus that bust portraits may be made.

The Shutter has snap-shot speeds of 1/25 and 1/50 of a second and, of course, the time-exposure features. It is quiet, reliable, efficient.

The Kodak Anastigmat f.7.7 lens with which this camera is equipped is made in our own lens factory. Designed for use on this particular camera, it exactly fits the requirements, and because it makes negatives of such unusual sharpness is due the fact that perfect enlargements, equal in quality to contact prints, can be made from V. P. K. Special negatives.

A Complete Kodak, is this little Special, even to the autographic feature, whereby you can date and title every negative—and every child picture should have a date—at the time of exposure. It is rich in finish and well made to the last detail.

The Price of the Vest Pocket Autographic Kodak Special, equipped with the Kodak Anastigmat f.7.7 lens is $15.00, including the excise war tax. Film cartridges of eight exposures are but 25 cents (also including the tax). It is, therefore, a very economical camera to operate, especially as one may have enlargements from favorite negatives, up to post card size, at fifteen cents.

Actual size of Contact Print.

UNCLE SAM'S NEWEST ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUN—This model, of 4.7 inch caliber, and another, a bit smaller, incorporate all of the most approved features developed during the war. The curious contraption at the end, which looks like a Quaker's hat, is a muzzle brake, the idea being that the gases following the shell will strike to act against the recoil. The guns will be carried on caterpillars and can be loaded mechanically by means of compressed air and a special loading tray. Despite the optimism of aviators, the anti-aircraft men believe they can perfect their art so that nothing can live within range of their guns. (Photograph from U. S. War Department.)

The THREE DEAD MEN by Eden Phillpotts

Wherein Michael Duveen, Inquiry Agent, Confronts a Sinister Mystery of the West Indian Cane Fields

WHEN my chief, Michael Duveen, the Inquiry Agent, invited me to go to the West Indies on a special mission, I rejoiced exceedingly, for the time was late January, London suffered from abominable weather, and the tropics presented very real charm.

"They offer me ten thousand pounds to go," explained Duveen, "and if it meant anything less than ten days at sea, I should be pleased to do so.

"I have told them, however, that I shall send one in whom I place absolute confidence; that I shall devote personal attention to the subject from this side; and that, if we solve the mystery for them, a fee of five thousand will content me; while, if we fail to do so, I shall ask nothing but my representative's expenses. I hear today by cable that they are satisfied with these conditions, and I invite you, therefore, to sail in the Royal Mail steam packet Don from Southampton on Wednesday next."

"Delighted, sir."

"It will be a considerable feather in your cap if you can make anything of the crime. The data are involved, and one cannot build the most shadowy theory of what occurred upon them. Indeed, I shall not trouble you with these voluminous but vague documents. You can go with an open and an empty mind, for if I hand you this screed, you'll be puzzling at it all the way to Barbados and, possibly, arrive with some cut and dried idea that will stand in your way and even cloud your judgment before you begin.

"It's a criminal case on the face of it, and involves three dead men, but, apparently, nobody who is alive. Quite interesting and, I should say, quite difficult; but that's only an impression. You may clear it up yourself without much trouble; or you may put me in a position to do so from England; or it may beat us both. See me again before you go, and book your passage today, otherwise you won't get a comfortable berth. There's a great rush among holiday people on the West Indies this year."

"One question. Where am I to go?"

"Only with the home ship to Barbados. The case lies in that island alone, so far as I know. Should you have to go farther afield, of course you will do so. Good luck, my friend. I hope it's something that may prove useful to you, and I feel sanguine of your success."

I thanked the great man and withdrew well pleased, for Duveen's compliments were few and far between. He never praised, but his satisfaction took shape of work, and I knew very well that he had not chosen me for what sounded to be a fairly important investigation without assurance that I should do justice to his international name.

A fortnight later there came a morning when I lounged on the deserted deck of the Don and watched a glorious blending of moonlight and dawn.

Barbados had been for some time visible, lying like a huge sea monster between the flashing white light on Ragged Point and a crimson beacon above a further promontory; but now the sun climbed up heaven, as only he climbs in the tropics, and the island was limned in every detail under his tremendous blaze. I saw low, undulating, cultivated lands, whereon the miles of sugar-cane looked at first like fields of grass-green wheat or barley; I noted the windmills and dotted dwellings and brown, tilled earth; while beneath them, crowned with palms that clustered to the shore, spread Bridgetown, with its gleaming masses of white architecture beside the blue waters and sun-bleached beaches.

A fleet of lighters manned with men of every hue, from mahogany to brown, from yellow to putty-colour, was soon about us, while dozens of smaller vessels crowded in as soon as the shore authorities were satisfied. The sun blazed; the steam winches groaned and chattered; people rushed hither and thither shaking hands and saying farewell, gathering luggage and tipping stewards ere they departed.

Then came a message for me, and presently my trunk and kit-bags were lowered into a white boat with crimson cushions.

"My brother was lying dead, shot through the breast, and actually upon him John Diggle also lay, a corpse."

A good-looking, sun-tanned individual sat in it and greeted me pleasantly, while two Negroes pulled the boat ashore. He was browned by the tropic sun, but his gray eyes and fair hair and clean-cut cast of features proclaimed him an Englishman. He was tall, well built, and dressed in black clothes, which somewhat concealed his size and muscular development. He might have been forty-five, but life in Barbados had tended to age him, and I learned presently that he was but five and thirty years of age.

Amos Slanning, owner of the famous Pelican plantations and sugar factories, chatted as we rowed ashore; but he spoke with an object, and gave me various items of information that served as preliminary to the story he was to tell.

"Barbados," he said, "unlike most of the West Indies, has had a fairly peaceful history. An English ship took possession of it in 1605, and it has never changed hands since. There's no more loyal corner of the Empire than Birmhire, as we call this island.

"You see before you the last of the West Indian Slannings and, I suppose, the wealthiest man in Barbados. Time and chance have reduced us to one, since my twin brother, Henry, was murdered recently; and though nothing can bring him back from the grave, I shall not go to my own in peace if the profound mystery of his death is left unexplained."

He broke off here and asked me questions concerning Duveen, while I explained that, though my chief could not come personally to explore the problem, he had sent me, that I might gather every possible particular at first hand and report to him. I brought letters from headquarters for Mr. Slanning, and presently we went together to the Ice House and sat for half an hour at that famous restaurant while he perused them.

"Now I understand," he said, "and heartily I hope you are not here in vain. We'll go to the Club now and lunch. Then I'll tell you the story, as far as I know it, and then we'll go home. You'll put up with me, I trust?"

This, however, I declined to do, and explained that it was my purpose to be entirely free during the coming weeks.

"To stop with you might handicap me in many ways," I said, and he raised no question.

We were soon on our way to the Club. But an incident broke the brief journey.

There passed us a little victoria in which sat two ladies, and the car was stopped while Amos Slanning dismounted and spoke with them. One, a handsome, middle-aged woman, he addressed, while the other listened. She was a very pretty young creature—an exotic here, as it seemed to me, for she was pale and her blue eyes lacked lustre. One had pictured her at home with roses in her cheeks; here she challenged one's sympathy as a hardy flower seen in a hothouse.

"Tell me you are better," said Slanning to the elder, and she shook hands warmly and assured him that she was.

"Poor May is not, however. I'm going to take her to America for the summer," she said.

"You are wise," he answered, gently regarding the girl. "Let her have distractions, the dear child—she needs them."

Then his voice dropped, and I doubted not that he was mentioning me.

A moment later he introduced me. The girl bowed, but did not speak; her mother shook hands and hoped that I should be successful.

"All who loved my dear friend's brother share his sorrow," she said quietly. "And there is nobody on earth who knew him that did not love him. But you are faced with the profoundest difficulties, for this shocking deed was without motive so far as any human being can see."

She spoke clearly and with deep earnestness, and added that she hoped I would come and see her if I found it desirable to do so.

They drove on, and Slanning trusted I had marked them carefully.

"Nothing," he said, "connects them with my brother's death, and yet, to my mind, there may exist some link. They are dear friends, and Lady Warrender's late husband, General Sir George Warrender, was also a dear friend to my brother and myself. But, all unconsciously, and innocently, the ladies may, none the less, be involved in some way hidden both from themselves and us. That will be for you to consider when you know all that I can tell you."

"The girl looks very ill," I said.

"She is—with reason. But the illness is of the mind, not the body. She has had a sad shock."

We reached a public square, wherein the object of chief interest was a green bronze statue of Lord Nelson; and then, arriving at Slanning's club, alighted and presently enjoyed a lunch of many delicacies.

After the meal he led me into a small, private smoking room, where we should be alone. He offered a cigar, which I declined, since the business of my visit was now of

OF COURSE TESS HAS TO HAVE A TROUSSEAU. BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE announcement of the engagement of Tess Bone and Buddy Guff caused much excitement under the rose bush.

The little folks talked of nothing else for several days, and the Lady of Fashion was so excited she could scarcely sleep at night.

"Tess, my dear," the Lady of Fashion said one evening shortly after the engagement party, "you will need a lot of clothes, now that you are going to be married, and Mrs. Lover and myself will help you get your trousseau together.'"

"What's a trousseau?" asked the Dunce who was lying on a caterpillar fur rug listening to the conversation.

"Why, a trousseau means clothes. When a lady gets married she always needs a lot of clothes, and it's called a trousseau," answered the Lady of Fashion.

"Ah, jinks!" exclaimed the Dunce. "You womans is all time talkin' about clothes. I thought trousseau was somethin' to eat," and the dunce rolled over on his back and went to sleep.

"That's awful nice of you to help me with my clothes," said Tess. "What do you think I'll need?"

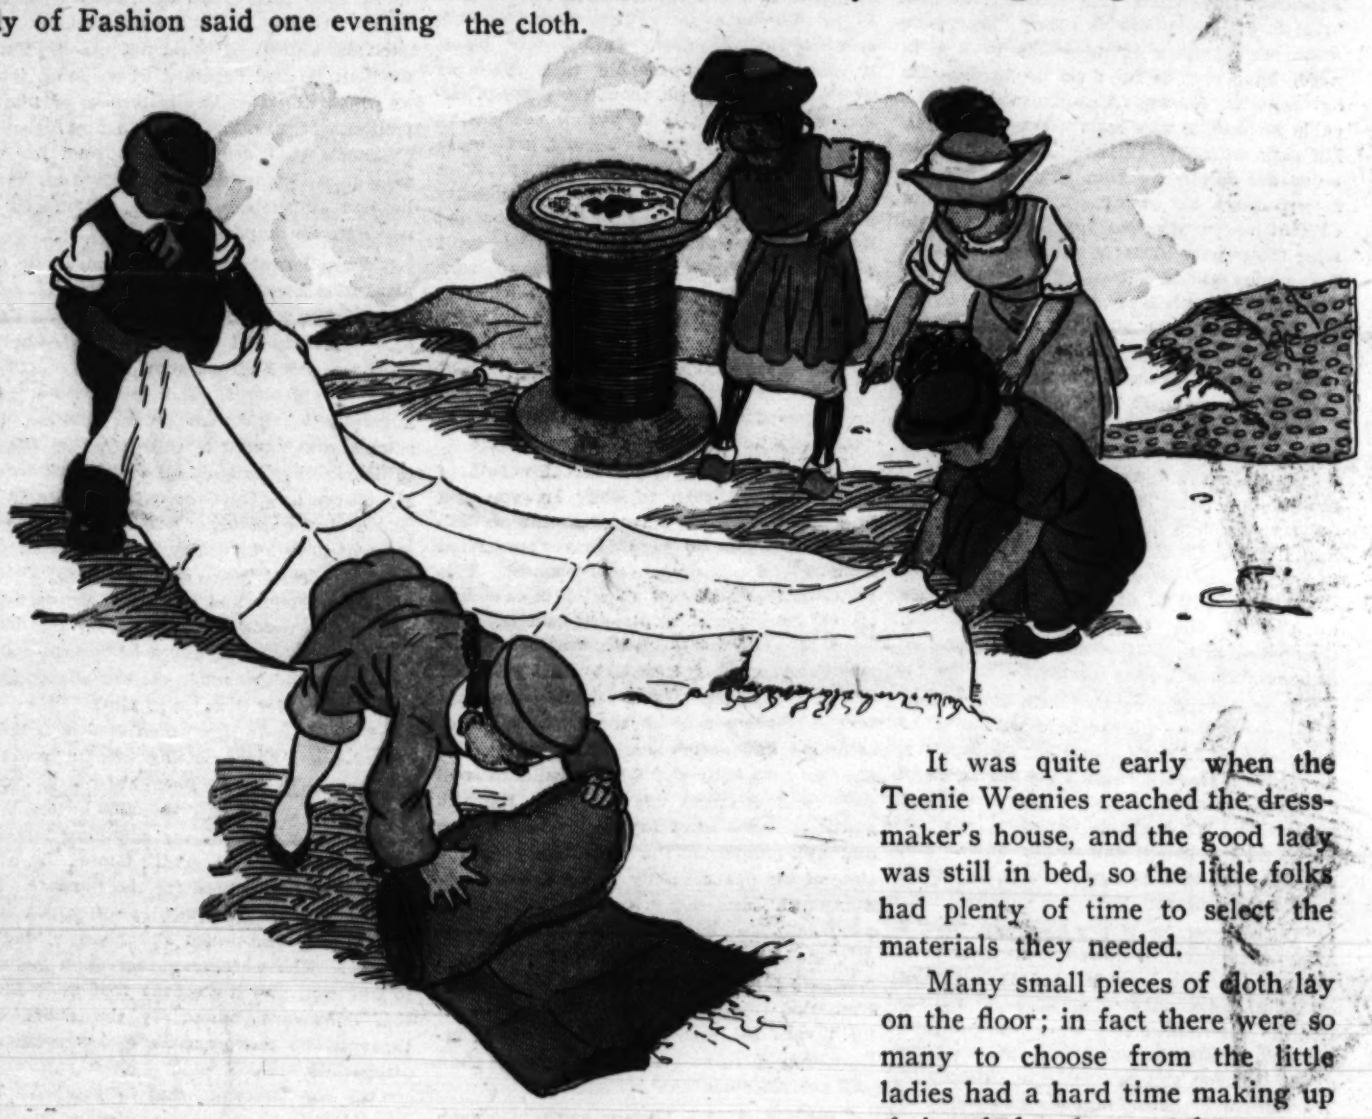
"Well," suggested Mrs. Lover, who had dropped in at the shoe house for a few minutes," you'll need a traveling suit, an afternoon dress, an evening dress, plenty of underwear, and, of course, a wedding dress."

"Where are we to get all the material for the dresses?" asked Tess.

"I will arrange for that," said the Lady of Fashion. "We will get a couple of the boys to go with us, and we'll make a trip over to the brown house near the park where that dressmaker lives, and we'll be sure to find plenty of scraps around. Any one of the small pieces which that dressmaker throws away would be big enough to make you a half dozen dresses."

The little ladies talked until it was quite late that night, and before they parted they had made plans to set out the next morning for the dressmaker's house in search of cloth.

After breakfast the next morning the three little ladies set off for the dressmaker's house, and with them went Gogo and the Chinaman who had kindly offered to go along and carry back the cloth.



It was quite early when the Teenie Weenies reached the dressmaker's house, and the good lady was still in bed, so the little folks had plenty of time to select the materials they needed.

Many small pieces of cloth lay on the floor; in fact there were so many to choose from the little ladies had a hard time making up their minds what to take.

Mrs. Lover, who was a good judge of cloth, pointed out the best material, and when Tess had chosen several pieces Gogo and the Chinaman tied them up into neat bundles with scraps of thread and carried them back to the Lovers' bungalow where the sewing was to be done.

For many days the little ladies made their tiny needles fly, and all sorts of dainty undergarments were made with the finest lace insertions.

Several pretty dresses and suits were made, and Tess spent most of her time admiring herself in the big mirror, which had been brought over from the shoe house.

The Teenie Weenie men saw very little of the ladies. Even Buddy Guff was not allowed in the sewing room, and he went about looking most mournful.

"I don't know whether Tess is in love with me or her trousseau," Buddy confided to a group of Teenie Weenies one evening.

"Ah, you can't blame Tess for wantin' to get a nice lot of clothes together," said Mr. Lover. "This is her last chance to have her fill of clothes, for when a woman is married she doesn't have much time to spend on clothes."

"I'll bet that's why the Lady of Fashion don't get married," cried the Dunce. "She's afraid she won't have any more slick dresses if she get a husband."

The Doctor, who was rather interested in the Lady of Fashion, gave the Dunce a nasty look, and nothing more was said about clothes.

begin. Nor did he smoke himself, but entered at once upon his narrative.

"Stop me and ask any question that may occur to you," he said, and then proceeded.

"My mother died when Henry and I were boys fourteen years old. We were in England at the time and had just gone from a preparatory school to Harrow. From there we proceeded together to Cambridge. During the winter vacation we used to come out to my father here, while in the summer he usually visited Europe and took us with him to France or Italy. We were just completing our years at the university when my father, Fitzherbert Slanning, passed away somewhat suddenly—he had always been a delicate man—and Henry and I were called to the estates. My father always held that absentee landlords were the ruin of the West Indies, and, long before he died, made us promise to live and work here. We kept our word.

"It is, I believe, a rooted opinion that twins resemble each other closely in every particular of appearance and character and taste; and doubtless it often happens so; but I cannot flatter myself that I was half the man that my brother was. He had better brains, better judgment, and a larger measure of self-control. We resembled each other superficially, but he had a more thoughtful countenance and a less impetuous disposition. I would not say that I was the optimist and Henry the pessimist; but whereas my nature leads me to be sanguine and trustful, he was more cautious and a far shrewder judge of character.

"We had a valuable overseer, faithful to my father and trained in a school to whom the Slannings were a tradition. He helped to seat us in the saddle, and since we were both workers and well educated, we carried on the great sugar industry that our ancestors had founded with success and created respect and confidence. We were singularly alone, for it happened that my father was last of his line, and now no other Slanning than myself has any direct interest in the Pelican Estates. They were ours absolutely, and now they are mine, together with the great revenues they furnish and responsibilities they embrace.

"Life passed for us uneventfully and prosperously. We were everything on earth to each other, and had not, as I believed, an idea unshared or an ambition not held in common. I stuck to the business entirely; Henry developed wider activities, joined the administration, and did useful public work.

"He was a man of extraordinary generosity; he loved to advance the welfare of the island and the humblest upon it. If it can be said of any man that he had not an enemy, that can be said of my brother. He was the soul of justice, and displayed an enthusiasm for humanity that won the respect of the rich and the worship of the poor. Yet this man has been deliberately destroyed by a fellow man under circumstances of the profoundest mystery; and when he perished another died also—one who would have laid down his life for Henry or myself a thousand times. This was John Diggle, a full-blooded Negro, whose forbears have worked for generations at the Pelican. He was a watchman, and his business required that he should guard the plantations at night. The looser sort of niggers will always pilfer, and none is immune from that annoyance. At the time of cane-cutting, therefore, we look after our boundaries; and if the blackguards who come thieving know that they may get a bullet about their ears, they think twice before committing depredations.

"It was an old custom that niggers found by our estate police in the cane by night were challenged and, if they did not respond, fired upon. It is a very ancient enactment—of course not followed nowadays.

"The manner of Henry's death I will now describe. After a night of full moon he did not join me at breakfast according to his custom, and sending a servant to seek him, I found he was neither in his bedroom nor study.

"Puzzled, I looked round myself, but could see nothing of him. Then came the evil news from the cane-fields, and I mounted my horse and rode out to a spot a mile from home, lying in a clearing on the outskirts of the plantation not very far from the Crane hotel, on the south coast of the island. My brother was lying dead, shot through the breast, and actually upon him John Diggle also lay, a corpse. His gun, with both barrels discharged, appeared nearly twenty yards from the bodies; and that it was Diggle's gun which had destroyed both my dear brother and himself there could be no question, for the cartridges were of a peculiar bore and the heavy swan shot unlike anything else of this sort in Barbados.

"Another weapon was also discovered—a revolver, brand new, and with all its chambers empty. It had evidently never been fired, and I had not seen it or heard of it; but subsequent investigation showed that my brother had bought it in England with a box of a hundred cartridges, which was never even opened. The revolver is one of Forrest's make, and why Henry bought it, seeing his curious hatred and dread of firearms, is surely a part of this mystery.

"Medical examination proved that neither man had been shot at close range—a fact that disposed of an obvious theory. For the local police—colored people—suspected that poor Diggle had murdered Henry and then shot himself; but this is impossible. First, he worshiped Henry as something more than a man, and would have suffered any imaginable torture rather than hurt a hair of his head, and, second, he himself was shot from some distance off. From the nature of the wounds it was calculated that the gun must have been fired at a range of twenty yards—the distance it was found lying from the bodies.

"Ten yards from the spot where my brother fell, hidden in the plantation, we came upon a pile of cut cane and one of the common axes used for cutting it. This would not have been there under normal circumstances, and pointed to the fact of a thief. He had apparently been busy when disturbed. But of him no trace is forthcoming, though a handsome reward has been offered to the rascal if he will come forward and tell us anything he knows.

"Why my brother was out that night is, of course, part of this problem; for there existed no shadow of reason that he should have been. He never did such a thing to my knowledge before, and though he often took solitary rides and walks, being of a meditative spirit, it was not, of course, his rule to rise after retiring. Yet on the night of his death he must have awakened from sleep, drawn on his boots, flung a black alpaca coat over his pajamas, and sauntered out a mile or more into the plantations, to the beat where he knew that Diggle would be doing his work and keeping his rounds.

"I now come to the third man who appears to have lost his life on this fatal night. Personally, I do not associate him in any way with the story I have told you. I see no shadow of connection between the two crimes, and I am tolerably confident—indeed, we all are—that the poor wretch known as Solly Lawson got his throat cut by an enemy.

"He was a half-caste employed at the Pelican who lived with an old, black mother in a cabin near the cliffs. He was a worthless, hot-tempered beggar, with a doglike affection for my brother and myself; but he quarreled with his fellows and always gave himself great airs on the strength of his white blood. Solly had a way with the ladies also, and made a good deal of trouble in his own circle of society. He has fought various battles and figured in more than one paternity case; but though the unfortunate fellow thus earned some reprobation, we, weakly enough, forgave him a great many of his sins, for he was a mirth-provoking spirit with ready wit; and as much for his old mother and his dead father's sake as his own, we kept him on and forgave him his stupid sins.

"He had been locked up twice, and knew that one more serious offense would be the last, so far as the Pelican was concerned; but it seemed of late that he had reformed and was becoming a responsible member of the community. So, at least, old Mrs. Lawson declared.

"Well, on the day that was black with this double murder came news of Solly Lawson's end. The debonair creature, so witty and full of life—such a secret joy to us and such a source of endless exasperation to his fellows—was found dead with his throat cut from ear to ear.

"An accident revealed the murder, for the body lay on a shelf under the cliffs, midway between the summit and the deep sea that rolled beneath. It was evident that those responsible for his destruction had flung him over, after murdering him, and that, instead of falling into the water two hundred feet below, as they intended, the unseen ledge had received him. From this, when found, he was subsequently lowered into a boat and brought ashore. The fall had broken several bones, but the fatal wound was in his throat.

"In his case, also, no motive whatever for his murder has appeared; and though I doubt not it was over another woman that he finally came to grief, nothing throws light on the subject, and no man, or men, in Barbados can be fairly suspected of the business.

"Thus we have three capital crimes, all of which, on the face of it, are motiveless; and while in the case of Solly, as I say, we may feel very sure that he awakened some secret malignity and brought his punishment upon himself; while there probably are those among us who know the secret of his death, so far as my brother and John Diggle are concerned, no shadow of reason for their destruction can be found on the island, or in the world.

"Of my brother I have spoken; while Diggle, in his humble capacity, similarly enjoyed the respect and regard of all men. We had not a more popular servant on the plantation, or in the factories. He leaves a wife and three youngsters, and my brother was godfather to the eldest, while to the second I stood in the same relation.

"That is the dreadful outline you will have to fill in, young man; and now please ask me what questions may occur to you, unless you would rather leave them to a later occasion."

"I shall have many questions to ask, Mr. Slanning," I answered; "but at this point perhaps you will tell me a little about Lady Warrender and her daughter?"

"Gladly. The incident which connects them with my brother's name lies outside those I have narrated in my opinion; nor can I link it with Henry's death. But you will approach this matter with an open mind, and in any case must hear it and regard it as a confidence. This was one of those few experiences that my dear brother kept from me entirely; nor should I have ever known but for the ladies themselves.

"A year ago now Henry told me I ought to marry, and I retorted that it was quite as much his business as mine. He admitted it, and we chaffed one another; but I regarded him as an incurable bachelor and believed myself to be one. In truth, however, Henry desired to marry and, with what looks now like extraordinary secrecy, cultivated little May Warrender. Her mother did not know it until afterwards; but when Henry died, the girl revealed to her mother that he had much desired to marry her and proposed twice."

"You have no reason to doubt her?"

"None, for she is not the sort to invent any such story. Perhaps, if I had heard such a thing from anybody but these people, I might have disbelieved; but it is impossible to doubt them. Henry evidently loved her and strove hard to win her; but he was old for his age and doubtless seemed older than he was to a girl not twenty. Whether he was deeply disappointed or not can never be known. He was such a philosopher that I do not suppose he allowed the matter to trouble him more than was inevitable. May liked him immensely, and when he died she was quite ill for a time; but when she told her mother, she also declared that marriage with him would have been impossible.

"Probably, as I say, his reverse did not cast Henry down unduly, for he was a very quick-minded and intelligent man and a great student of human nature. Moreover, had it made any very poignant impression upon him, I cannot think it would have been hidden from me, even though he had tried to hide it. We knew each other too well, and he certainly did not depart at that time from his customary, steadfast frame of mind—not before me, at any rate. He was level-headed and well-balanced as usual."

So Amos Slanning's statement ended, and what chiefly struck me was the innumerable permutations and combinations that might be drawn from it. That the speaker had told me the truth, as he saw it, I could not doubt. He was a simple-minded, ingenuous man and evidently very deeply moved by his loss. For the rest, it became a question how to pursue my inquiries to the best advantage.

The local police had no theory and no clue; while those chiefly interested in all the dead men were in the same predicament. Nobody could fit the facts together and make a rational story out of them; indeed, the very material seemed doubtful, for the body of opinion separated the death of the young half-caste, Solly Lawson, from that of the others, and held it only a coincidence that he had lost his life at the same time.

After his recital Mr. Slanning took me for a long ride about the island, and we stopped at the scenes of the incidents in his story. Mile after mile of sugar-cane extended upon every side of us. Great jungles of it fringed the road with their drooping, polished stems, tawny tangles of dried leaves below and bright green crowns above.

Beside a little, neat house surrounded by a hedge of prickly pear, a big calabash tree grew, and its green, polished fruit hung from jagged, almost leafless boughs.

"That's where poor Diggle's widow lives," said Slanning, "and we are now within a mile of the scene of the tragedy. Now you can see the general outline of the Pelican Estates, sweeping in an arc to north and south and ranging almost to the coral cliffs near the Crane Hotel. If you won't come to me, you might take quarters there to be on the scene of your work."

But knowing not where that work would be, I determined for the present to remain in Bridgetown, and after standing in a cane clearing on the scene of his brother's death and visiting the stately home of the last of the Barbados Slannings, I returned to town and presently took a couple of rooms in a secluded square not very far from the Club.

My object was to work unknown, as far as possible, and in this ambition Amos Slanning assisted me. My business was not specified, though I soon found that most people were aware of it. I wanted, of course, to learn much that the dead man's brother could tell me, and since the matter still remained a nine days' wonder, all men were glad enough to talk about it, and the conversation in the Club smoking-room often drifted round to it.

I had been elected a temporary member of this institution, and spent a few days almost entirely within its walls. I found Amos Slanning immensely popular; indeed, even more so than Henry had been; for while men spoke of the brother with respect, and deplored his sudden end, it seemed that he had not awakened enthusiasm. Indeed, the rest of mankind saw him with different eyes from his twin. A creole lawyer at the Club knew both well, and gave me a friendly but independent description of them.

"Henry Slanning was a man of affairs," he said. "He had ambition, and little liked to be contradicted. But few ever contradicted him, for he was a very sane man, a sound democrat, and knew the trend of contemporary thought. You can form no complete opinion of him through his brother. He had none of the sanguine spirit and natural cheerfulness that marks Amos. He was, in fact, of a melancholy cast of mind—even morbid sometimes."

"Have you any theory of events?" I asked for the sake of conversation, and the other answered that he had none.

"Had Henry been faced with any great and crushing disappointment," he said, "or had he found himself up against some stroke of fate beyond the power of his money, or brains, to withstand, I can imagine he might have destroyed himself. His brother, of course, says that under no conceivable circumstances would he have done such a thing; others, however, agree with me so far. But this is no suicide, obviously. He was deliberately shot from some distance—fifteen to twenty yards, the doctors say. Besides, no circumstances exist, to my knowledge, which had caused Henry any sort of unhappiness."

So he spoke and revealed that he was not familiar with the fact that the dead man had proposed marriage and been rejected. Indeed, so I found it invariably among the numerous men who had something to say about the matter. Nearly all could furnish some items of information, or some experiences throwing light on character. All helped to complete the picture of Henry Slanning; but none, from his brother to the billiard-marker at the Club, could give a complete portrait, and I perceived the picture might never be completed unless Duveen himself proved equal to that task.

Almost my first visit was to Lady Warrender, and her description of the murdered man differed slightly from the rest. She said he was of a religious temperament, but unorthodox and not devoted to any particular form of faith.

"Did you know that he desired to marry Miss Warrender?"

"I had no idea of it. Sometimes I chaffed him and his brother about finding wives and not letting the famous Barbados Slannings die out with them; but Henry always said that Amos was the marrying man. May would have kept his proposal secret, as he begged her to do, had it not been for his death. Then she felt it was only right to confide in me, and I told his brother. One never knows what may bear upon a question."

"You noticed no change in him lately?"

"None. It was about six weeks after his rejection that he died."

"Should you have objected to such a marriage?"

"Far from it. He was a distinguished and honourable man—a gentleman in the highest acceptation of the term. My daughter liked him, and it hurt her much to make him sad; but she did not love him. Though only fifteen years older than May, he seemed far more to her, for he was old for his age and a staid, quiet man, averse from society, fond of reading, and with no pleasures in which the average girl could share. He would have made a splendid husband but not for May."

Gradually I built up the picture of Henry Slanning, yet I cannot say that I ever saw the man very clearly. He came and went.

sometimes grew clear, then receded again. Some, I found, held him a cynic, with the warm heart a cynic often conceals; others, of a fate that had always used him kindly until the present—he found in that theme no longer a preoccupation for thought, but an invitation to action.

"That theme, the ever recurring obsession of his mental activity, was suicide. And the fact appears in his own handwriting a thousand times. Again and again he opens on some other subject, yet, like a phantom in the noonday of intelligent considerations upon love, hope, faith, honor, duty, and other subjects worthy of a high-minded and altruistic spirit, there creeps into the argument self-destruction. He cannot evade it: there is for him a fascination in the topic that brings him back again and again. It vitiates his thinking; it is a blood-red thread woven through the fabric of his thoughts. He exhausts literature in his search for every high example and significant reference to self-destruction.

"He held with the great pagans that to live in want, dishonour, or suffering was folly. He echoed Cato, Pomponius, Atticus, Epicurus. We find him quoting Seneca: 'Malum est in necessitate vivere; necessitas nulla est': that it is miserable to live in need, but there is no need so to do.. He agrees with Marcus Aurelius, that if the cabin smokes, a wise man takes leave of it. He says with Quintilian: 'Nemo nisi sua culpa diu dolet'—no man endures suffering save through his own fault. But he is not content to justify the practice of suicide from the pagans alone; it is not enough that the Medes and Persians, the Greeks and Romans are with him and that all nations of antiquity furnish admirable and laudable examples of what in Christian eyes is generally regarded as a sin. He seeks instances through the sacred Jewish writings and finds in the Apocrypha an authentic instance, when Razis, one of the elders of Jerusalem, slays himself (in II. Maccabees) and is applauded by the historian for so doing. We find him also concerned with lights of the Christian church—Pelagia and Sophronia, canonized for their saintly self-destruction; and of men, especially Jacques du Chastel, that bishop of Soissons who charged an army single-handed and gloriously committed felo-de-se for his faith.

"Then, having concluded with Cicero, that it is agreeable to nature in a wise man to take leave of life at its height of prosperity, he writes a learned essay on a saying from Josephus, that he who dies sooner or lives longer than he ought is equally a coward. So he goes 'about it and about,' and cannot leave the question for any time, but it draws him forcibly again.

"With respect to Henry Slanning, then, I affirm that after his disappointment in love, life lost its flavor and, led thereto by habit of mind and a natural melancholy inclination, he determined to destroy himself, having long convinced his reason that such an act is justified and agreeable to philosophy. We will leave the unfortunate gentleman in that resolution for a few moments and turn our attention to the other victims of the tragedy on Pelican Estate.

"In the case of John Diggle, the night watchman, no difficulty of character presents itself. He was a direct, single-minded man against whom nothing evil can be advanced—a good husband and parent and a loyal and honest servant. He carried on the tradition handed to him by his grandfather and father before him, and worked with one sole purpose: the welfare of his employers. Their relation to him was closer than that of master and man. They valued him for himself and in many ways revealed their personal regard and esteem.

"This man's duty was to guard the sugar-cane plantations by night, and we find in connection with that work an old but general understanding and unwritten law that thieves stole at their personal peril. It was not uncommon in former days for these pilfering gentlemen to lose their lives, just as a poacher, or other nocturnal robber in England, also has paid the extreme penalty. But human feeling naturally sets against such a strenuous course of action as principles of humanity gain ground. A hundred years ago the man-trap and spring-gun were sanctioned; yet such barbaric engines are now by law swept into oblivion. So with this old pre-slave proscription; and we may take it for granted that John Diggle would not have fired upon a thief under greater provocation than he was ever likely to receive from one.

"In this connection, nevertheless, we find a cloud arises on the life of John Diggle some few days before his end. Too much importance cannot be attached to this incident, since upon it hangs the whole theory about to be elaborated. We must, therefore, dwell on the statement made by Mrs. Diggle to my representative in Barbados and fully reported by him. If necessary, Mrs. Diggle can be further questioned, though in my judgment she has already said all that need be said.

"What does she say?

"That, on a certain occasion, her husband came in sad to breakfast. He denies his trouble at first; but upon his wife insisting that he is not himself he curses the cane thieves and says that he has got to worry about them because Mr. Henry Slanning is worrying. Mr. Henry has told Diggle that he is falling short of his duty and forgetting how to treat the thieves. Then—mark this—Diggle says that henceforth there shall be no doubt about obeying and that he will do what he is told, 'to the end in future, whatever happens.'

"Immediately before the tragedy, therefore, John Diggle has been reproved for laxity in his work, and he accordingly resolves that, come what may come of it, he will strictly obey his orders to the letter. We shall find what those orders were in a moment; and there can, I think, be little doubt that the commands issued to Diggle by Henry Slanning were of a nature that Diggle did not expect. They surprised him, and we can see how. In the first place, it was highly improbable that Slanning would bother his head about the petty pilfering of cane, or care a button concerning such a trifle; and, in the second, still more improbable that he should seek to put a stop to them by reversion to obsolete drastic measures that he, of all men, would have been the first to censure. For so I read John Diggle's trouble coupled with his resolve. He is going to obey, regardless of consequences; he is going to do exactly as he is told, 'whatever happens.' He therefore apprehended that something might happen; but he was under orders and did not attempt to shirk them, though the orders had astonished and dismayed him.

"Leaving him also, on the threshold of the disaster, I turn to Solly Lawson and find again a character that presents no difficulties and can be very fairly appreciated from the information at our disposal. This young half-caste is seen as a youth of strong animal passions, uncontrolled and not malevolent. He was of little worth, sensual, lazy, and quick-tempered; but he had wit and a ready tongue and—what alone matters—his attitude to his master was one of steadfast and deserved devotion. Nor does the fact that Solly would not scruple to steal cane detract from his affection for the gentlemen who have forgiven so many sins and still employed the poor fellow at the time of his death. Solly would steal Henry Slanning's cane today and die for him tomorrow. The doglike trust and affection displayed by many Negroes and half-castes is a part of young Lawson's nature. He has expressed to his mother a thousand times his regard for both his masters, and I believe that in this assurance the young man was perfectly honest.

"What does Mrs. Lawson say? 'He dash at fings so.' Solly is ill-governed, impetuous, and impulsive. For good or evil, he 'dashes at things.' And there is a still more remarkable statement recorded to the dead man's mother. Such is her son's affection for his employers that he would have died for them. Much follows from this admission; but we have to admit also that Solly had no grudge against John Diggle. Even in the event of Diggle getting him locked up, Solly would not have allowed enmity against the night watchman to inspire him on regaining his liberty. In his mind, to repeat his mother's forcible words, 'when a fing done, it done.'

"Here, then, is the third party in this trinity of the dead and his character stands clearly before us. Had he been different; had Diggle been different; had Henry Slanning been different, my reconstruction of those events that destroyed all three, would not be feasible; but it is built upon the only foundation that remains for any superstructure—the foundation of character; and, to my surprise, I find it ample for our purpose. I had suspected that any theory based on character alone, must have needed modification and some special pleading when it came to details; I had anticipated the need to rely upon probability and exercise no little ingenuity in rounding the narrative and gathering the tangled thread into a complete skein; I had even feared that character itself might presently confound me and make it impossible honestly to develop a consistent story; but, to my satisfaction, I find this is not the case. Effect, in shape of facts, follows cause, as furnished by character, directly and lucidly; motive is at last revealed, like the sun breaking from behind a cloud, and the series of events follow upon each other logically, inexorably. These things had to be and they could not have fallen out differently.

"Henry Slanning is responsible for the entire concatenation. He designed a certain action and took elaborate means to insure its operation; but the event he planned duly accomplished, accident willed that it should serve as a prelude to other events beyond his calculations—events fatal to the second and third actors in the drama.

"Thus we arrive at the threshold of our mystery.

"When the house sleeps, Henry Slanning rises and makes his way to the plantations, choosing that region where John Diggle will be perambulating, gun on shoulder. Slanning goes of set purpose to his death. He is willing to die, but not by his own hand. It is part of his character that, while he seeks death, he cannot inflict it upon himself. He has, however, intended to do so. He has taken first steps towards that end, and the revolver, found by his dead body, was bought by him at Messrs. Forrest, New Bond street. He wrote to England for it a week after his great disappointment, and he duly received it with a box of a hundred cartridges. But he could not use it. For a moment he had dreamed of so doing when he laboured under the bitterness of his rejection. It was, however, an aberration of character that drove him to send for the weapon, and long before it reached his hand, he had sufficiently returned to himself to make its use impossible.

"Why, however, did he take it to the plantation empty? To make sure of John Diggle. He went out in his pyjamas, a light alpaca jacket, and a big straw hat, similar to those the Negroes wear. Thus attired, in such a place, at such a time, he must naturally be mistaken for a common marauder; and having already directed Diggle to do his duty in such an event and fire at sight upon any thief, he expected him to do so. But the revolver was an inspiration, calculated to nerve Diggle and banish the least remaining trace of hesitation. Diggle would challenge, and if he received no reply and no surrender would fire. How much more certainly, then, might he be expected to fire and with how much sterner efficiency of aim, if the thief threatened him?

"Two of these three men died in a clearing of cane, where cutting was in progress; and the plans of the place show a pathway extending through it to the cliffs beyond. To the clearing goes Henry Slanning and begins to cut down cane with one of the little familiar hatchets used for the purpose. He knows that in the silence of night, the noise must soon reach Diggle's ear; and it does so. The watchman thereupon hastens to the spot, and it happens that Solly Lawson, homeward bound by the short cut through the cane, arrives a few moments afterwards.

"We may describe what follows with the eyes of Solly Lawson.

"He sees Diggle challenge and marks a man jump up before him. With head down the robber approaches, and for answer to Diggle's demand to surrender, produces a revolver and points it at the watchman. The steel flashes in the moonlight and Diggle's response is to get in his shot first if he can. He fires and the unknown falls. Solly sees Diggle drop his gun and run forward; but he sees more. Henry Slanning has fallen backward, away from the stroke that slew him; his hat is off and, in the moonlight, he lies revealed. All that the dead man had so cunningly provided for and planned, Solly sees happen just as Slanning had designed; but the advent of young Lawson is fatal to himself and Diggle.

"He has seen his master murdered before his eyes, and the horrible sight provokes him to instant revenge. A moment's reflection would have saved Diggle and himself, but he cannot reflect. He sees Diggle run towards the dead man, and, fired to frenzy by the destruction of one he dearly loved, he acts on impulse, stays not a second, but seizes Diggle's gun, probably screams out some fierce words of hate, and fires at short range into the watchman's kneeling body. Then he drops the gun and flies to sound the alarm and proclaim what has been done, while Diggle lies dead upon his master and their blood flows together.

"But Solly's feet grow slower and his passion abates. His fiery brains begins to work, and presently he understands the thing that he has done. Is it an evil dream from which he will emerge, or can it be true that his master and John Diggle lie dead in the plantation and that he is a murderer? He begins to appreciate his own position. What living soul will believe that John Diggle murdered Henry Slanning? Such an event would demand proofs beyond possibility. How shall Solly's worthless word convince any man?

"Another and abler man, or a criminal, had doubtless kept his mouth shut and gone his way, preserving his action a secret and defying his fellow creatures ever to associate him with it; but this man was stupid, impulsive, and no criminal. I conceive that his intelligence was not equal to the strain put upon it and that, by what train of terror we can only guess, he reached at last a conviction that he would be found guilty, sooner or later, of a double murder. His record would be against him and there was none to speak a word for him. He had left Bridgetown on the previous night and walked home through the small hours; and all he could say was that he had seen John Diggle shoot Henry Slanning and taken the law into his own hands. To utter such nonsense would be to stand self-condemned.

"To me the result of these reflections on the temperament of Solly Lawson can be predicted with logical certainty. He feels, at the morning hour of lowest vitality, that it is far better to die than live for what must lie before him. By this time he has drifted back to the cliffs, for he has been walking subconsciously homeward. The sea lies beneath him and a few moments of suffering will end all. Better to perish thus than on the gallows with the execration of all humanity in his ears.

"Again impulse decides him. He sees not a ray of hope, but hungers to end his mental torture as swiftly as may be. Feeble now, and worn out in body and mind, he dashes at his doom, designing to vanish off the earth forever and leave no link by which he can be connected with the dead men in the plantation. He will leap down into the sea and so disappear where none can find him. But a common instinct in suicide, to pile one death upon another, manifests itself in Solly Lawson at this supreme moment. Men often destroy themselves so; and there is undoubtedly some subtle psychological instinct that tends to make these double deaths less fearful to the self-destroyer. A man will drink poison and then blow his brains out; or, as in the case of this ill-starred youth, he will cut his throat and leap over a precipice with his remaining strength.

"Thus did Solly act, and had he fallen, as he designed, into the depths below, no explanation of these incidents would ever have won to mortal mind; but he fell on a projection of the cliff; his body was thus recovered and his secret, as I believe, revealed, to play its intrinsic part in the larger mystery with which we are concerned.

"That, then, is what happened, in my opinion; and if it be argued that not a shadow of actual and tangible proof exists for such a theory, I admit it. It is granted that I present nothing but a theory of events, and the situation makes it impossible to do more; but I repeat that the view I submit is based on character, than which no surer foundation of action can be discovered; and since these three men all do exactly what may be predicted of them, given the circumstances, it is hard, and for me impossible, to see how any other rational explanation of their death can be advanced. M. DUVEEN."

It remains only to add that, while many accepted Duveen's conclusions, others did not, and among the latter, as he prophesied, was Amos Slanning. The West Indian held this explanation of his brother's death to be merest moonshine, though, as I explicitly learned from various Barbadian sources, the majority of Henry Slanning's friends and acquaintances in the West Indies believed the matter must have so happened. At first they also protested; but when the novelty of the idea grew worn they came to believe it. The probability, in fact, increased rather than diminished.

As for Michael Duveen, he felt no shadow of doubt concerning his conclusions, and while declining the large honorarium offered to him, since it came from a client unconvinced, always held the case to be among his own purest analytical achievements.

"It is an example," he used to say, "of how motive may sometimes be unearthed through the track of character, when every other possible channel is blocked by death and cannot be explored. For my part, I often have doubted the most luminous circumstantial evidence, if opposed by equally luminous facts of character; and though in many cases crime suddenly appears in soil of character where one would have suspected no such seed could spring, for temptation will break through the bars like a strong man armed; yet, as a general rule, if we know what an individual has been, and what forces always have guided and controlled his acts, we may safely judge as suspect any charges which openly contradict the massive proofs of his past conduct, but accept as worthy of close examination such actions as support them."

death. Nor did he smoke himself, but entered at once upon his narrative.

"Stop me and ask any question that may occur to you," he said, and then proceeded.

"My mother died when Henry and I were boys fourteen years old. We were in England at the time and had just gone from a here empty. It had evidently never been fired, and I had not seen it or heard of it; but subsequent investigation showed that my brother had bought it in England with a box of a hundred cartridges, which was never even opened. The revolver is one of Forrest's make, and why Henry bought it, seeing among us who know the secret of his death, so far as my brother and John Diggle are concerned, no shadow of reason for their destruction can be found on the island, or in the world.

"Of my brother I have spoken: while Diggle, in his humble capacity, similarly enjoyed

But knowing not where that work would be, I determined for the present to remain in Bridgetown, and after standing in a cane clearing on the scene of his brother's death and visiting the stately home of the last of the Barbados Slanningrs, I returned to town and presently took a couple of rooms in a sometimes grew clear, then receded again. Some, I found, held him a cynic, with the warm heart a cynic often conceals; others, of a religious frame of mind, doubted him as one not orthodox. None denied that much good could be credited to him, and only in one quarter, and that very unexpected, did I find a doubt or a suggestion that he had ever committed an act open to question.

I visited the widow of John Diggle, who proved a talker. But she was intelligent, her memory seemed trustworthy, and her honesty obvious. She was gathering washing from the thorny hedge outside her little home, and she chatted mournfully of her husband, the night watchman, and his virtues.

"Him not an enemy, sar—de kindest man and de best husband. Him work for Marse Henry an' Marse Amos for years an' years, an' nebber a hard word from dem all de time. Dey fink de world ob him, an' my po' John, he fink de world ob dem."

"Let me come into your house and sit down, Mrs. Diggle, out of the sun. I'm sure everybody has been very sad for you. Mr. Diggle was greatly respected."

"A most respectable man, sar, an' only wicked rogues dat tief de cane ebber quarrel wid him."

"Had he any quarrel with Solly Lawson, the poor nigger who had his throat cut?"

"Nebber. He knew dat Solly was a wild nigger; but John 'markable gentle wid young men and he said Solly mend some day. He a most Christian person, my John."

"Tell me about him. I am very interested to hear about him."

She rambled on for a while, and gradually I brought her to her last memories of the man.

"Did he ever do anything that Mr. Henry didn't approve?"

"No, sar—nebber."

"Did Mr. Henry ever do anything your husband didn't approve?"

"No, sar; Marse Henry was a good man. But—but——"

"They always agreed?"

"Now you say dat, I mind a queer fing, sar. One day—one, two, free day before him die, my John came in sad to him breakfus, an' I say, 'What de matter, John?' An' him say, 'Nuffin.' But I say, 'Dar somefin, 'cause yo' head wrinkle up an' you puff fro' your nose.' An' him say, 'You dam' silly ole woman, Jane.' Den, 'fore he go out in de pigeon peas to work, he say, 'Blast dem wicked folk dat steal de cane—dey make trouble an' it fall on me."

"Was much cane being stolen?"

"No, sar. Dar always a little gwine by night; an' John he cotch a man sometimes; but it am nuffin' much, an' I nebber heard him worry 'bout it. So I say, 'Yo' no worry, John, 'bout a silly fing like dat,' an' he say, 'I got to worry, 'cause Marse Henry, him worry. An' Marse Henry, him tell me I no' sharp enough an' no' do my duty to de tiefs an' forget how to treat de rogues.' I terrible surprised to hear my husband say dat, an' John, he run on, an' he say he do what he told to de end in future, whatebber happens, an' no question orders; an' I say, 'You always do what you told, John.'"

"Did he explain any more about it?"

"No. Him go 'way growling, but him soon get happy again. He said no mo' 'bout it, an' I fink no mo' 'bout it till John gone killed an' Marse Henry gone killed; an' den I wish I knew mo' 'bout it; but too late den. Po' John—him shot in de side an' him heart blown to pieces."

"I suppose Mr. Slanning couldn't have shot your husband?"

"Me Gard! Marse Henry shoot John? Yo' might as well fink John shoot Marse Henry. Marse Henry a gemman dat hated killing anyfing. Him nebber fired a gun in him life. Him nebber squashed a scorpion. He love John, for him told me so, when John ill once. An' John—him have died a hundred times for Marse Henry or Marse Amos. He berry faithful man an' live for his masters."

"Have you any idea in your mind, Mrs. Diggle, what happened? If John has sometimes arrested men for stealing sugar cane, he may have had enemies."

"No, de man or two dat went to prison no fink had ob John. It all in de day's work for bad man to be cotch some time. And John—him shot wid him own gun—'member dat. John carry him gun himself. He nebber put it out of him hand."

"It would have been impossible, you think, for anybody to get his gun away from John?"

"Only Marse Henry do dat. If Marse Henry come by night an' say, 'Lend me yo' gun, John,' den John lend him. But Marse Henry no want gun. Him hate guns."

"Did your husband ever say he had met Mr. Slanning on his rounds by night?"

"Nebber, sar. He sure tell me if such a funny fing as dat happen, 'cause Marse Henry and Marse Amos, dey never go near de plantations by night."

"Have any of your friends any idea what may have happened?"

Only silly folk. Dey fink the Debbie tell Marse Henry to go out in de night an' put it in John's head to shoot him; an' den de Debbie shoot John; but what Gard A'mighty doin' all de time? Marse Henry an' John berry good men, an' dey in hebben now wid golden crowns on der heads an' golden wings an' golden harps, sar; but dat de will ob Gard. An' it no better for de wicked murderer dat dey happen now. He go to hell all de same, whar him belong."

"You don't think Solly Lawson had anything to do with it?"

"I doan' know nuffin' 'bout dat. He killed dead, too, so nobody nebber know if him dar or not."

"He was a sort of chap who might steal cane?"

"Him tief plenty cane, I dare say, Massa; but him nebber do nuffin' 'gainst Marse Henry—Marse Henry stand up for him plenty times. De niggers tief cane 'cause dey terrible ig'rant fellows an' no fink how wicked dey are; but dey no fall out wid udder gemmen 'bout it. Dat po' Solly—if him see anybody treatin' John bad, or treatin' Marse Henry bad, he run to help dem, I'se sure."

She whined on—a shrewd, sensible creature enough, and one's heart bled for her grief, for she often stopped talking to weep. It was personal sorrow at her loss and no fear for the future that troubled her, for Amos Slanning had provided for her and her children.

And elsewhere, a few days later, my inquiries took me to see another sad, black woman, the mother of the murdered Solly Lawson.

Mrs. Mary Lawson's cabin stood near the place of her son's death. She was a little withered Negress who had married an Englishman—an old sailor who found work at the Pelican when he left the coasting trade in the Antilles. Mary could add little to my knowledge; but she confirmed what others had said of Solly.

"Him no vice, sar—only berry fond ob de gals an' berry good-lookin'—my dear boy was. He lost him head and did silly fings an' fell out wid de neighbors; but him no wicked deep down, an' him always terrible sorry after. Him so much full ob life dat it run away wid him—a berry 'scitable boy, sar, an' dash at fings an' often get in a mess, but ebb'rybody forgib him after him sorry. An' Marse Henry—he never rough wid Solly, 'cause Solly so quick wid his tongue, he always get round Marse Henry an' Marse Amos, too, an' make dem laugh.

"He was fond of them?"

"He lub dem—nuffing too good for dem—he tell me dat a fousand times. All de world lub dem—dar nobody on de earf dat would hurt dem. An' if Solly him see anybody do harm to Marse Henry or Marse Diggle—he—so fierce him be—dat he fight dem an' no care if he kill dem."

"He was friendly to John Diggle, too?"

"Yes, sar—he friendly to Marse Diggle. Marse Diggle a berry nice gemman, an' kind to my son when odder folks cross wid him."

"But suppose Marse Diggle had seen your son stealing sugar-cane?"

"Den Marse Diggle would hab got Solly lock up. God forgib my Solly, dat happened one or two times; but John forgib Solly after him punished, an' Solly no angry wid Marse Diggle after. When a fing done, it done, sar."

"You wouldn't say that Solly might not have been stealing cane that night?"

"No, sar, I wouldn't say dat. He might; but I no fink him dar. I no fink him far from him home. I fink some bad men quarrel wid Solly ober a gal, an' lie hid for him an' pounce on my po' boy while him come home, an' kill him."

"More men than one?"

"Yes, 'cause Solly berry quick an' strong. Dar no nigger in dese parts strong 'nough to kill my Solly single-handed wid a knife an' den fro him ober de cliff. It take six, sebben men to do dat."

She dwelt on her son's great strength with mournful satisfaction.

"You cannot give a name to anybody who might have had a grudge against him?"

"No, sar—nobody. Him been berry good boy for long time now. An' I ask all de niggers if dey know anybody what hab a down on Solly, an' nobody know. But dar must be somebody done it. I fink sailormen, who sail away de next day, might hab done it."

"You know of no girl who cared for your son, or quarreled with him?"

"Plenty gals, sar; but he only friends wid one gal in Georgetown now, an' she hab no friends but Solly, an' she terrible fond ob him."

"He treated her well?"

"Berry kind an' good to her. She tell yo' de same if yo' ask her."

Further inquiries respecting the character and history of John Diggle and Solly Lawson confirmed these reports of wife and mother. Independent witnesses agreed with them and with Amos Slanning, who had already told me the same story. It was, indeed, a curious coincidence that the three dead men had all been without any sinister or dangerously unsocial qualities. Of the young half-caste, though it was clear he had been lawless and more or less disreputable, it seemed unlikely that he could have wakened sufficient enmity to lose his life for his sins.

To explain why Henry Slanning had gone out in the night challenged me as the pregnant point; and given the reason for that most unusual step, everything else might have followed from it; but no reason offered; at every turn in this exasperating inquiry I was headed off by a blank wall, as it seemed, for purpose and motive, though they must have existed for every secret incident in this web, were absolutely beyond my power to discover.

Henry Slanning had clearly gone where he knew John Diggle was to be found on his rounds; but whether he had actually sought Diggle, or another, could never be known, unless a living man furnished the information. None, however, came forward: there was an extraordinary lack of all evidence; for in such cases, nine times out of ten, chance offers a foothold for a first step, and this or that man or woman, from outside the case, will appear with some incident or observation that may open the way to inquiry or suggest a train of research. But no such thing happened for me. Not a soul bore any testimony of any sort whatever, and not a soul actually came within the radius of the case. Here, apparently, one stood confronted with three barefaced and deliberate murders, committed in a night on a small island, yet not a shadow of any motive explained them and not a living being could fairly be pointed at as suspect in any degree.

I made very copious notes and, of course, pursued inquiry through many minor channels, which all ended in failure and contributed no light. I stood in the disagreeable position of being unable to make a case, and after a month's very hard and conscientious work was forced to own it to myself. A loss of self-esteem resulted. I began all over again, only to complete another circle of failure. Nor could it be called comparative unsuccess. The futility of my investigation was complete. I arrived at no theory of any sort or kind, and though once I glimpsed the truth darkly, as afterward appeared, I wandered from the right road the moment it began to appear impossible.

My last week at Barbados, the last of six spent upon the subject, was devoted largely to Amos Slanning. He had been extraordinarily kind to me personally, and insisted upon my spending a few days at the Pelican Estate as his guest before I left the West Indies. He was frankly disappointed at my failure, but not more than I myself confessed to being. It is true that, though trained to this work by instinct and native bent, with already some fair share of success in various obscure cases, I failed signally here.

I could only admit it and hope my chief might prove more fortunate. We talked much of Henry Slanning; indeed, I kept the conversation to him as far as one decently might, and not only with his twin brother; for now I saw the truth of what men had told me—that Amos entertained an opinion of his brother's character that differed from the truth. He did not undervalue his rectitude, or the regard and respect universally extended to the dead man; but he had never fathomed a character very different from his own, and probably never felt, even if he had seen, the intellectual and inquisitive side of Henry Slanning's character.

For example, when I returned to the possibility of suicide, a thought that haunted me in connection with the case, though the facts were there to prove murder, Amos Slanning assured me that nothing was more unlikely, and even when the revolver was proved to have been bought in England by his brother, he stoutly protested that it could not have been purchased with any thought of such a purpose. Others, however, saw no improbability in the idea of Henry Slanning's suicide under certain circumstances; but, since obvious murder and not suicide confronted us, they saw no object in raising the question.

I begged for a photograph of the dead man to take home with the rest of my elaborate dossier. The picture he lent me resembled Amos closely in feature, but the expression was different—subtler and more melancholy. Indeed, it was a face where unrest had made a home, and one had judged the man who looked so was defeated of his ambitions. Yet no cynicism clouded his features and the mouth was as kindly as his brother's and no firmer. The photograph had been taken before Slanning's love affair.

What proved more interesting to me came into my hands by accident two days before I left the island on my homeward way. Amos, searching among his brother's things, had found a diary, which contained nothing that threw illumination upon the past and apparently abstained of set purpose from any mention of Henry's romance; but, in addition to this, he discovered a pile of manuscript—the musings of an intellectual man on a variety of subjects, all of direct human interest.

Study of Henry's Slanning's personal library had already convinced me of his activity in the domain of thought, while Lady Warrender had confirmed the fact. His books were for the most part philosophical, and I found a translation of Gomperz that had evidently occupied much of his time, and translations of other German writers, including the English version in twenty volumes of Nietzsche. He had Gilbert Murray's Greek tragedians also, with Plato and Aristotle deeply read. His interest evidently ran on the great pagans. As to his own writings, they reminded one of the "Anatomy of Melancholy." They abounded in curious quotations and tended to the morbid; but they were full of illumination as to the character of the man revealed in his interests.

He had compiled on love, passion, ambition, patience, duty, suicide, justice, free thought, and free will as opposed to destiny. He was clearly a rationalist at this stage of his life, and acknowledged no supernatural inhibition to conduct; but his sense of duty was exquisitely keen; he debated questions of justice with a mind as impartial as distinguished, and one felt in the presence of a man who was almost weighed down by his obligations to his fellow creatures. He wrote of mastery and domination, of craft and the unhappy need for falsehood in the affairs of life, of heredity and environment as rival or twin forces in development of character.

I begged these voluminous documents, since, in my opinion, they must prove of great value to Duveen when he came to investigate Henry Slanning's fate; and his brother was content that I should take them with me.

"I shall publish the whole thing presently," he assured me. "It will be a valuable memorial of Henry and will help to show the world that he was a remarkable man and a far greater thinker than people supposed."

And so I left the West Indies (picking up the steamship Don on its return voyage from Jamaica), and departed grateful for much kindness and consideration, the richer for a good friend or two—men who are still my friends—and disappointed and chagrined to the very roots of my being in this blank failure to advance by a single fruitful speculation the problems I had gone so many miles and worked so exceedingly hard to resolve.

My utter failure had one good result, for it awoke the interest of Michael Duveen, and he did not conceal his astonishment at a fiasco so complete.

"A dozen theories, of course, I had," I explained, "but each in turn came up against a blank negation. I could find no sort of explanation that fitted all the facts—worse, I could find no explanation that fitted any of them. So far as I could discover, as a result of sleepless search, these three men had not between them a real enemy in the world, nor was it possible to meet anybody living, or hear of anybody living, who can gain anything by the death of any of them. You'll say, of course, that Amos Slanning gains; but in reality he does not, for he and Henry had practically everything in common and were very deeply attached to each other.

"If one thing is certain, where all is so uncertain, I should say it was the absolute innocence of Amos Slanning. The weirdest thing is, that against the evidence of my own sense and the fact of murder duly proved—murder, of course, by a person or on when Carpy comes around," he explained.

"You keep fooling around the streets this way and they'll get you sometime," said Belle, tartly.

He turned the remark. "That idea doesn't seem to worry me as much as it used to. Have I got to cook my own supper?"

This venture after discussion was assumed by Kate. She put on her hat to go across the street to get a steak. Laramie insisted on going with her. She asked him not to.

"Why not?" he asked.

Kate was keyed up with apprehension. "Why take chances all the time?" she asked in turn. "Some one might shoot from the dark."

Belle answered for him. "Nobody in this country would shoot a man when a woman's with him," she said. "Go along."

The butcher, stumping in from the back room to wait on them, showed no surprise at the two from hostile camps asking for one steak, but he tried so hard to watch the pair and to hear what they were saying that he nearly ruined one quarter of beef before he got what Kate wanted. What he finally cut off and trimmed looked more like a roast than a steak, but neither customer seemed disturbed by this.

Laramie paid, over indignant protests and placing the package in the loop of his left arm, opened the shop door for his companion. He passed out behind her in excellent spirits. The butcher, looking after them, took his surreptitious pipe from his pocket, watched the shop door close, shook his head and, ramming the burnt tobacco down hard with the finger that lacked the first joint, stumped back to his lonely stove.

The kitchen was farthest removed from Belle's room. Laramie started the fire with kerosene. When he lighted it there was a flare back that alarmed Belle in her bed, but she could hear nothing of what was going on in the kitchen. While the supper was being cooked, Laramie stood on the other side of the stove from his enemy's daughter, watching every move. If Kate walked over to the cupboard, his eyes followed her step—she walked with such decision and planted her heels so fast and firm. If she turned from the stove to the table, his eyes devoured her slenderness in amazement that one so delicately proportioned could so crowd everything else out of his head.

As the supper progressed, Laramie watched almost in awe the short arm jabs she gave the meat on the broiler. The cuffs of her shirt waist, half back to her elbows, revealed white arms tapering to wrists molded like the ankles, and hands that his eyes fed on as a miser's feed on gold. The blazing coals flushed her cheeks, and when she looked up at him to answer some foolish question her own eyes, flushed and softened by the heat, took on an expression that stole all the strength he had left. When she asked him how he liked it, he exclaimed, "Fine," and Kate had to ask him whether he liked the steak well done or rare.

"Any way you like it," he stammered.

As he watched her laugh at his efforts to help her by picking up the hot platter, a sense of his own clumsiness and size and general roughness overcame him. She was too far removed, he told himself, from his kind to make it possible for her ever to like him.

The closer he got to her daintiness and spirit and laughter, the more hopeless his wild dreams seemed. Whenever she asked if the steak were cooked enough, he suggested—to prolong the pleasure of watching her hands—that she give it one more turn. Every moment he saw something new to admire. While she was attending to the meat he could look at her hair and see where the sun had browned her pink throat and neck. As the broiling drew near an end, almost panic gripped Laramie. The happiest moments of his life had been spent there at the stove. They were slipping away. She was lifting the steak the last time from the fire. He asked her to turn it once more.

"Why, look at it," she exclaimed, "it's burned up now; hold the platter closer."

It brought him closer in spirit than he had ever been to heaven, to feel her elbow brush against his own, as she deftly landed the smoking steak on the platter while Laramie held it.

A great melancholy overcame him. "What do you want me to do?" he said suddenly.

Kate's eyebrows rose. She looked at him. "Why, set it on the table," she laughed.

"No, I mean what do you want me to do—myself."

She could not wholly misunderstand his look, though little did he realize how she feared it, or what a dread respect she secretly had for the grave eyes so closely bent on her own. She laughed, really to gather courage, and it was easy to laugh a little because he did look so odd as he stood before her, with the platter in both hands, but terribly in earnest. "Set the platter on the table before you burn yourself," she pleaded.

"You must want me to do something," he persisted, "get off the earth or stay on it—now, don't you? Say what you want me to do, and, by——" He checked himself. "And I'll do it."

She could restrain him, but she could not turn him. He did put the platter on the table without getting any answer, but now that his mind was set, it reverted stubbornly to the one subject, and when supper was over and they sat opposite each other in the little dining room talking, she said she knew he had burned his hands. "I wouldn't mind if I had," he remarked frankly. "Almost every time I've talked with you I've held the hot end of a poker; I'm getting to look for it." He drew a deep breath. "You never liked me, did you, Kate?"

"That isn't so."

"You always kind of held off."

"Perhaps I was a little afraid of you."

"You're not afraid of me now—are you—with one arm out of commission? Are you?"

She looked at him in a troubled sort of way. "Why, no—not very," she ventured, half laughing.

"You were never half as much afraid of me as I was of you," he murmured.

His eyes across the table were growing very importunate. She could not realize how flushed and soft and tantalizing her own eyes were, framed by the warm color high in her cheeks. She rose with a hurried exclamation and looked dismayed at him, her hands tilted on the table, her brows high, and her burning eyes still laughing: "We've left the light on by the stove all this time," she whispered. "Belle will be furious!"

She slipped hurriedly out into the kitchen and turned off the light. Her face was hot. She was thirsty, and stepping to the water faucet she picked up a glass. The mountain water tasted so cold and good; in some way it made her think of great peaks and the crisp, clear air of his home far up among them. She had not realized how heated she was. "Do you want a drink?" she called back to the dining room.

He was standing directly behind her. She turned, only to stumble against him, and before she knew what had happened he was raining kisses on her resisting cheeks. Then his lips found hers and, faint with the moment, she resisted no more.

After a long time she got one hand around his neck and laid the other across his mouth. "Don't make so much noise," she whispered wildly. "Belle will hear us!"

The hush that followed the brain storm in the kitchen put Belle, quite unsuspecting, to sleep. Laramie, with a tread creditable to a cat—and a stealth natural to most carnivorous animals—closed the door without breaking her heavy breathing. The shades, always drawn at nightfall, called for no attention. In the living-room there was preliminary tiptoeing, and there were futile efforts on Kate's part to cool her rebellious cheeks by applying her open hands to them—when she could get possession of either one to do so. The small couch which served as sofa was drawn out of range of even the protected windows, and the floodgates were opened to the first unrestrained confidences together.

When they could talk of more serious things, Kate could not possibly see how she could marry him; but this, in the circumstances, seemed to cause Laramie no alarm. She admitted she had tried not to like him and confesed how she had failed. "Every time I met you," she murmured, "you seemed to understand me so well—you knew how a woman would like to be treated—that's what I kept thinking about."

"You used to talk and laugh with Van Horn," he complained, jealously. "When I came around I couldn't drag a smile out of you with a lariat."

"You're getting a smile now that he isn't getting, aren't you?"

"Somehow you never acted natural with me."

"Jim!" It was the word he most wanted to hear, even if the reproach implied the quintessence of stupidity. "Don't you understand, I wasn't afraid of him, and I was of you!"

"And I only trying to get a chance to eat out of your hand!"

"How could I tell—after all I used to hear—but that you'd begin by eating out of my hand and finish by eating me?"

He had to be told every word of her troubles at home, but her uneasiness turned to the dangers threatening him. These, she protested, he belittled too much. Ever since he had come in wounded she had been the prey of fears for him. "It's a mystery how you escape." He had to tell every detail of his flight down the canyon. "By rights," he said in conclusion, "they ought to have got me. No man should have got out of that scrape as well as I did. Van Horn didn't get into action quick enough. And it seemed to me as if Stone himself was a little slow." The way he spoke the things strengthened her confidence. And his arm held her so close!

THE THREE DEAD MEN

persons unknown—I still find my mind coming back and back to the conviction that it simply cannot be. There was nobody on earth to murder Slanning; but there was quite sufficient reason in his own mind for him to commit suicide. But he didn't."

Duveen patted me on the shoulder.

"We shall see whether you are to be forgiven," he said. "You have at least roused my curiosity, and I shall better judge, when I set to work on your notes, if you have failed as hopelessly as you imagine. Meantime there is plenty to do. Come and dine with me a week hence, if nothing happens to prevent you; then you shall hear your sentence, or your acquittal, as the case may be. The change has done you good—save for your remorseful expression. I never saw you looking so well."

Thus he dismissed me, and I felt glad to think of other things until the evening came on which I was to dine with him. He put me off for a farther week, however, but saw me at his office and asked a few questions concerning the West Indian problem. These I answered, and he made no comment on my replies.

Then I dined with him, and after the meal he read me the following report:

"I have solved the problem," he said, "and I am absolutely convinced in my own mind that it is correctly solved. Whether those most vitally interested, however, will accept the solution, is another question."

"Solved it?" I gasped.

"To my own satisfaction," he repeated; "and I shall be disappointed if not to yours also. You are not to blame. You did everything that I should, or could, have done myself. You lacked the necessary synthetic inspiration to put the pieces of the puzzle together after collecting them—that is all."

"That is everything."

"You were right, but let appearances tempt you away from the truth. Your intuition had only to be followed, but, basely, you deserted it."

"How could I follow it against an absolute fact?"

"My dear friend, no fact is absolute."

"But murder can't be suicide."

"Murder may be suicide and suicide may be murder. Don't make rash assertions; but light your cigar and listen. I'm rather pleased with this; though I repeat it is quite likely that nobody but our noble selves will appreciate it at its true value. From your description of Amos Slanning I am quite sure that he will not. Therefore, let us expect no reward."

Then he read me his solution of the mystery.

"Only through a close and exhaustive study of character is it possible to reach any explanation of this problem; and in the case of Mr. Henry Slanning, on whose death the destruction of the lesser men, John Diggle and Solly Lawson, will be found to depend, ample material for an estimate of his complex temperament exists. Not only from the facts recorded concerning him, but also from his own dissertations and meditations he may be measured; and it is from my estimate of him, built on elaborate data, that I propound the following theory and reconstruct the incidents which deprived him and the other two victims of their lives.

"Emphatically Solly Lawson's end forms a part of the larger problem, for I find in him a very vital component of the whole. Accident involved him in the heart of the catastrophe, and, without him, we should have had one dead man instead of three and a tragedy of an interesting psychological nature, but no mystery whatever. For the mystery now to be explained, is not the premeditated work of man, but the blind operation of chance.

"Let us then glance first at character, and take the dead in rotation. As I shall show, we are concerned alone with them. No undiscovered villains lurk in hiding; no living man, unless it be myself, yet understands the secret. These three alone are responsible for their own undoing; or it would be more correct to say that an egregious action of Henry Slanning precipitated the death of the two humbler personages.

"Henry Slanning we find to be a man of cultured and refined tastes, averse from even the incidental violence of sport. Mrs. Jane Diggle said of him that 'he could not kill a scorpion.' He was shrewd, sagacious, and a good man of business. The power of wealth he inherited and did not abuse. He worked hard and with an exemplary humanity and consideration for all he employed. He was generous, thoughtful, and kind hearted; nor did he lack for ambition beyond his own prosperity and the well-being of his many employés, for we find him accepting civil offices in Barbados and devoting no small measure of his time to unpaid labor for the general weal.

"This is the other man and the personality familiar to his brother, his friends, and acquaintances; but there is another Henry Slanning, an 'intellectual' of inquiring spirit, a ceaseless searcher after curious knowledge, a voluminous reader, and a keen thinker along certain lines. He is interested in many things, but certain subjects possess for him a peculiar fascination, and one above all others would seem persistently to intrigue his mind.

"It is a morbid subject hardly to be associated with a prosperous, hale, and popular young man of 35; but there can be no doubt of the fact, since not only was it reported to my colleague from more than one quarter in the course of his independent inquiry, but we also find it an ever present theme of Henry Slanning's careful memoranda. He commits himself to a definite opinion upon it; he ransacks profane literature for his support and finds justification for his conclusions in Christian history.

"To this we will return. For the moment it is necessary to show how what possessed, in the first place, no more than an abstract and academic interest for Henry Slanning, rose to become a personal problem and a personal temptation. He had tasted what life could offer and had, apparently, reached to the summit of his own ambitions, when there came into his life a new and tremendous experience. He fell in love for the first time. His brother, who was never absent from him, assures us that he had not before declared or revealed any affection for a woman, and though we have no absolute proof of this, since in the case of his known attachment, Mr. Amos Slanning was entirely ignorant of it until after his death—though, therefore, we cannot say with conviction that Henry never loved before, it is reasonable to assume that no-master passion overwhelmed him until he found himself in love with Miss May Warrender.

"It is certain that he was deeply attached to her, though his reserved and sensitive nature concealed the fact from all but the young lady herself. He paid his devotions with such delicacy, such humility, and such refinement as might be expected from such a man; and we may assume he was sanguine, for his life had moved easily and successfully. He had much to offer and the object of his affectons, as we know, was inexperienced and declares that for a long time she did not appreciate the significance of his friendship. Few girls, who did not yet know the meaning of love, would have refused him; and she had in all innocence welcomed his advances, so that we may assume he felt little doubt of acceptance.

"I labor thus in order to dwell on the extent of Mr. Slanning's disappointment when he heard that his hope was vain; and I believe that so violent and complete was the shock of the news, that a man who never appears to have loved life for itself, was thrown into a very furnace of disillusionment and for the time being, at least, found existence a tyranny no longer to be endured. With his rare mental endowments it is reasonable to suppose that, given time, he would have survived his terrible experience and recovered from his disappointment in the manner of a normal man; but he permitted himself no time. He turned to the subject of his philosophic meditations and research, and under this hard blow of fate—

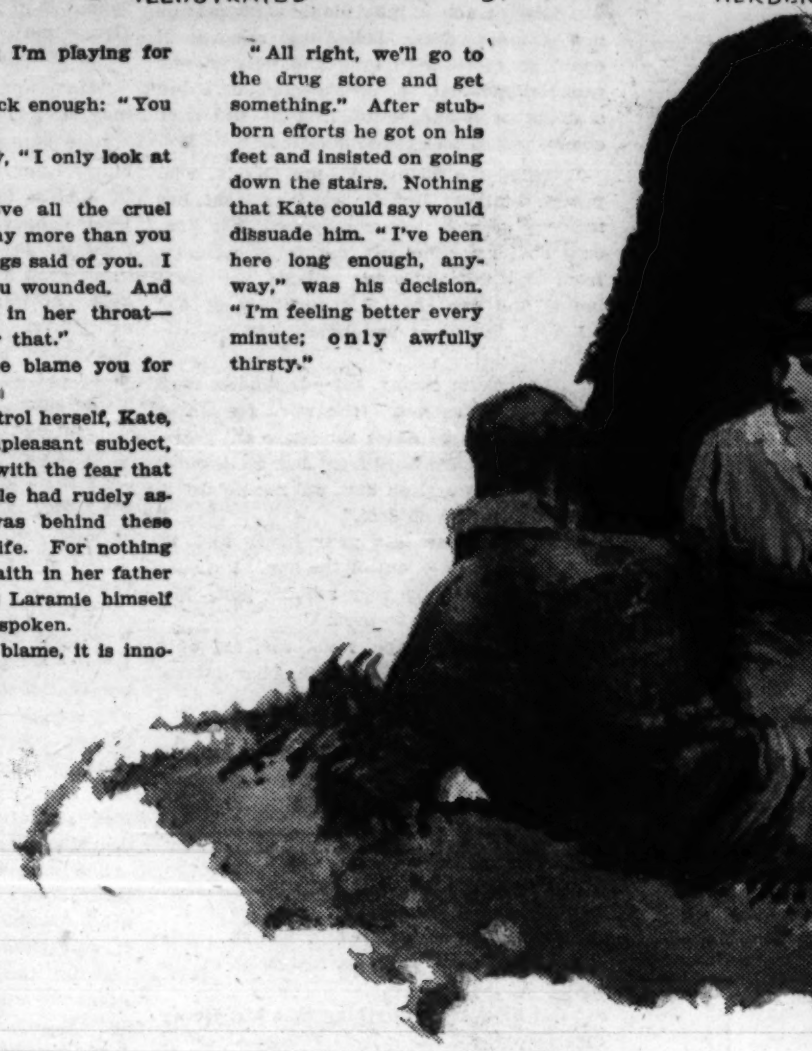
Laramie Holds the Range

ILLUSTRATED BY HERBER



THE STORY.

KATE DOUBLEDAY has journeyed to the far west to visit her father.

BARB DOUBLEDAY, who deserted her mother years before and about whom the girl knows little or nothing. This strange father she finds engaged in certain dubious enterprises which he does not see fit to explain, but he offers his daughter a home at his ranch, and here she quickly adapts herself to her surroundings with the aid and friendship of

BELLE STOCKLEY, a woman of the neighborhood who runs an eating house in Sleepy Cat Junction, the nearby town. Kate quickly learns that a bitter war is under way, ostensibly between cattle thieves and the big ranch owners of the country, and that her father is looked upon as leader of one of the factions. His chief lieutenants are

TOM STONE, foreman at the Doubleday ranch, and

HARRY VAN HORN, a dashing cattleman who presently develops into a persistent suitor for Kate's hand. From these and others Kate hears much talk of one

JIM LARAMIE, whose position in the feuds is, at first, a matter of some doubt. Kate is inclined to be hostile when she meets him, but Laramie falls in love with the girl, and in spite of herself she is interested. Then Laramie bluntly refuses an invitation to line up with Doubleday and his men in the cattle fights, and war is declared. Doubleday and Van Horn organize a raid on the Falling Wall country, where Laramie lives, directing their operations chiefly against

ABE HAWK, known as a cattle rustler and "bad man." Hawk, years before, saved Laramie's life, and when the outlaw escapes, wounded, from the raiders, Laramie comes to his aid. With the aid of

JOHN LEFEVER, the marshal, he covers Hawk's retreat to an inaccessible hiding place under an old bridge abutment in the foothills, thus incurring the open enmity of the Doubleday outfit and a bitter denunciation from Kate, who charges him with "harboring cattle thieves." Shortly afterward Kate, who has lost her way in a blinding storm, unexpectedly blunders on Hawk's hiding place, where she finds Laramie preparing to take the wounded man to a hospital. She sets out with the two men on their desperate ride through the storm, and at a swollen creek Hawk saves her from drowning at the cost of his own life. When an elaborate funeral is arranged for the dead outlaw by HARRY TENISON, keeper of the hotel at Sleepy Cat, and other old-timers, Kate defies public opinion and rides behind the coffin. This angers her father, and he orders her to "pack up and get out." On her way to town with an old rancher named Bradley she comes upon Van Horn, Stone, and several other men, and a moment later Laramie appears down the road. Jim's house has just been burned down and his cattle driven away by Doubleday's men, and he is fighting mad. Taking the raiders unawares, he disarms them with Bradley's help, sends a defiant message to Doubleday, demanding the return of his cattle, and takes Van Horn and Stone to town, where they are locked up in jail, but soon released. Kate has unwittingly revealed the location of the hiding place at the old bridge, and here Laramie is cornered by Doubleday's men, who manage to wound him badly as he escapes down a canyon. Kate hears that he has made his way to the town livery stable and is desperately in need of medical attention. She goes to the barn, finds a man named McAlpin there, and persuades him to take her to where Laramie is hidden.

FOURTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

Laramie Tells a Lie.

KATE, pacing McAlpin's rapid step breathlessly, hung on his half-muttered words: "He's bleedin' to death," continued McAlpin; "that's the short of it, and that blamed doctor down at Medicine Bend. I don't think much o' that man. Can't none of us stop it. Where's this goin' to end?"

He led her by roundabout passages, up one alley and down another, and at last opened the door of an old harness room, waited for Kate to follow him inside and, closing the door behind her, spoke: "I didn't want you to have to climb a barn ladder," he said, explaining. "There's the stairs." He pointed in the semi-darkness and led her toward the flight along the opposite wall. At the top of this flight light fell from a square opening in the hay mow.

"Walk up them stairs—I lifted the trap door f'r ye. He's right up there at the head of the steps. When y' come down, open this door at the foot, here. It's a blind door; don't show on the other side. See, it's bolted. It takes you right into the office. We keep it bolted from the inside, so no trouble can't come, see?" He unbolted and opened the door a crack to show her, closed and rebolted it. Then starting her up the stairs, McAlpin jerked the crazy viser on his forehead into a fashion once more simulating childlike frankness and disappeared by the way he had come.

To be summarily left alone and in such a place was disconcerting. Kate, in the semi-darkness and silence, put her foot on the first tread of the steps and, placing her hand against the wall, looked upward. Not a sound; above her a partial light through a trap door and a wounded man. She stood completely unnerved. The thought of Laramie wounded, perhaps dying; the man that had rescued her, protected her, in truth saved her life on that fearful night—this man, now lying above her stricken, perhaps murdered, by her own father's friends! How could she face him? Only the thought that he should not lie wounded unto death without knowing at least that she was not ungrateful, that she had not wittingly betrayed him, gave her strength to start up the narrow steps.

When her head rose above the trap opening the light in the large loft seemed less than it had promised from below. There were no windows, but through a gable door, partly ajar, shot a narrow slit of daylight from the afterglow of the sunset. Kate caught glimpses of a maze of rafters, struts and beams and under them huge piles of loose hay. Reaching the top step she paused, trying to look about in the dim light, when Laramie, close at hand, startled her:

"McAlpin told me you wanted to see me," he said.

Kate could distinguish nothing for a moment, but the low words reassured her.

"I'm lying on the hay," he continued, in the same tone. "If you'll open the door a little more you can see better."

Picking her way carefully over to it, Kate pushed the door open somewhat wider and turned toward Laramie.

He lay not far from the stairs. The yellow light of the evening glow falling on his face reflected a greenish pallor. Kate caught her breath, for it seemed as if she were looking into the face of death until she perceived, as he turned his head, the unusual brightness of his eyes.

In her confusion what she had meant to say fled. "Are you very much hurt?" she faltered.

"Far from it," he spoke slowly. If it cost him an effort none was discernible. "Coming into the barn tonight," he went on, very haltingly, "I had a kind of dizzy spell." He paused again. "I've been eating too much meat lately, anyway. They say—I fell off my horse; leastways I bumped my head. I'll be all right tomorrow."

"Belle told me there had been a fight up at the canyon bridge," Kate stammered, already at a loss to begin.

A sickly yellow smile pointed the silence. "I wouldn't call it exactly a fight," he said, dwelling somewhat on the last word. "Far from it," he repeated, with a touch of grimness. "There was some shooting. And some running." She could see how he paused between sentences. "But if the other follows ran it must have been after me. I didn't pay much attention to who was behind. I had to make a tolerable steep grade down the Falling Wall Ladder to the river. I was on horseback and didn't have much leisure to pick my trail."

"And they shooting at you from the rim!"

"Well, they must have been shooting at something in my general direction. I guess they hit me once. I didn't mind getting hit myself, but I didn't want them to hit my horse. I was heading for the bottom as fast as the law would allow. If they'd hit the horse, I wouldn't have had much more than one jump from the rim to the river. Can't ask you to sit down," he added, "unless you'll sit here on the hay."

Without the least hesitation, Kate placed herself beside him. Without giving her a chance to speak and in the same monotone, he added: "Who told you I was a gambler?"

Less than so blunt and unexpected a question would have sufficed to take her aback. And she was conscious in the fading light of his strangely bright eyes fixed steadily on her. "I don't remember anybody ever did. I——"

"Somebody did. You told Belle once."

"It must have been long ago——"

"Is that the reason you never acted natural with me?"

She flushed with impatience. But if she tried to get away he brought her back to the subject. Cornered, she grew resentful. "I can't tell who told me," she pleaded, after ineffectual sparring. "I've forgotten. Are you a gambler?" she demanded, turning inquisitive herself.

He did not move and it was an instant before he replied: "What do you mean," he asked, "by gambler?"

Kate's tone was hard: "Just what anybody means."

"If you mean a man that makes his living by gambling—or hangs around a gambling house all the time, or plays regularly—then I couldn't fairly and squarely be called a gambler. If you mean a man that plays cards sometimes, or has once in a while bet on a game in a gambling house, then, I suppose"—he was so evidently squirming sup- Kate meanly enjoyed his discomfort—"you might call me that. It would all depend on whether the one telling it liked me or didn't like me. I haven't been in Tenison's rooms for months, nor played but one game of poker."

"I despise gambling."

"Why didn't you tell me?"

"Why should I?"

"In one sense everybody's a gambler. Everybody I know of is playing for something. Take your father and me: He's playing for my life; I'm playing for you. He's playing for a small stake; I'm playing for a big one."

She could not protest quick enough: "You talk wildly."

"No," he persisted evenly, "I only look at it just as it is."

"Don't ask me to believe all the cruel things said of my father any more than you want me to believe the things said of you. I am terribly sorry to see you wounded. And now"—her words caught in her throat—"Belle blames me even for that."

"How on earth does she blame you for that?"

Despite her efforts to control herself, Kate, as she approached the unpleasant subject, began to tremble inwardly with the fear that it must after all be as Belle had rudely asserted—that her father was behind these efforts against Laramie's life. For nothing had shaken her tottering faith in her father more than the blunt words Laramie himself had just now indifferently spoken.

"If I am in any way to blame, it is innocently," she hurried on. "I will tell you everything; you shall judge. My father was bitterly angry when he learned I had been seen at Abe Hawk's funeral. I told him about my getting lost, about falling into the place at the bridge—how you did everything you could and how Abe Hawk had done all he could. He was so angry he would listen to nothing ——" she stopped, collected herself, tried to go on, could not.

"O, I hate this country!" she exclaimed. "I hate the people and everything in it! And, I'm going away from it—as far as I can get. But I wouldn't go," she said determinedly, "without seeing you and telling you this much."

Laramie spoke quietly, but with confidence: "You are not going away from this country."

Kate had picked up a stem of hay and, looking down at it, was breaking it nervously between her fingers. "You will have to hurry up and get well if I stay," she said abruptly. "I'm beginning to think you are the only friend I have here. And," she added, so quickly as to cut off any words from him, "I've told you everything. I only hope my speaking about the hiding place at the bridge when father was angry with me—and only to defend myself—was not the cause of this."

She was close beside him. "Can it be," she asked, "that this was how it happened?" He heard her voice break with the question.

"No," he blurted out instantly.

"O," she cried, "I'm so thankful!"

Listening to her effort to speak the words, he was not sorry for what he had said. "If you're going to lie," Hawk had once said to him, cynically, "don't stumble, don't beat about the bush—do a job!" The moment Kate told her story, Laramie knew exactly how he had been trapped. But why blame her? "It's the first time I ever lied to her," he thought ruefully to himself. "It's the first time she ever believed me!"

"Does Belle know you quarreled with your father?" he asked, to get away from the subject.

"No," she answered, steadying herself.

"She said you'd been acting sort of queer."

"I can't tell people my troubles."

"Why did you tell me?"

"You might die and blame me."

"Who says I'm going to die?"

"They were afraid you might."

"Well, I don't like to disappoint anybody, but dying is a thing a man is entitled to take his time about."

"Can't I do something till the doctor comes?"

He turned very slowly on his side. Kate made an attempt to examine his shoulder. She was not used to the sight of blood. The clotted and matted clothing awed and sickened her. Even the hay was blood soaked, but she stuck to her efforts. Supplementing the rude efforts of McAlpin and Kitchen to give him first aid, she cut away, with Laramie's knife, the bullet torn coat and shirt and tried to get the wound ready for cleansing. "I'm so afraid of doing the wrong thing," she murmured, fearfully.

"I don't care what you do—do something," he said. "Your hands feel awful good."

"I've nothing here to work with."

"All right, we'll go to the drug store and get something." After stubborn efforts he got on his feet and insisted on going down the stairs. Nothing that Kate could say would dissuade him. "I've been here long enough, anyway," was his decision. "I'm feeling better every minute; only awfully thirsty."

Kate steadied him down the dark stairs, fearful he might fall over her as she went ahead. Secrecy of movement seemed to have no significance for him. If his friends were disturbed, Laramie was not. He evidently knew the harness room, for he opened the blind door with hardly any hesitation and stepped into the office. The office was empty, but the street door of the stable was open. McAlpin stood in the gangway talking to some man who evidently caught a glimpse of Laramie, for he said rudely and loud enough for Kate to hear: "Hell, McAlpin! There comes your dead man now!"

Kate recognized the heavy voice of Carpy and shrank back. The doctor, McAlpin behind him, dumbly staring, confronted Laramie at the door: "What are you doin' here, Jim?" he demanded.

"What would I be doing anywhere?" retorted Laramie.

"Go back to your den. This man says you're dying."

"Well, I'm not getting much encouragement at it—I've been waiting for you three hours to help things along. I'm done with the hay."

"Looking for a feather bed to die in? Some men are blamed particular." As he spoke Carpy caught his first glimpse of Kate. "Hello! There's the pretty little girl from the great big ranch. No wonder the man's up and coming—what did you send for me for, McAlpin? Where you heading, Jim?"

With his hands on the door jambs, Carpy effectually barred the exit. Knowing his stubborn patient well, he humored him, to the verge of letting him have his own way, but with much raillery denied him the drug store trip. A compromise was effected. Laramie consented to go to Belle's to get something to eat. In this way, refusing help, the obdurate patient was got to walk to the cottage.

"Don't let him fall on y'," McAlpin cautioned Kate, as the two followed close behind. "I helped carry him upstairs. He's a ton o' brick."

But Laramie, either incensed by his condition—the idea of any escort being vastly unpleasant to him—or animated by the stiff hypodermics of profanity that Carpy injected into the talk as they crossed the street, did not even stumble; he held his way unaided, met Belle's amazement unresponsively, and, sitting down, called for something to eat.

"How does he do it, Doc?" whispered McAlpin, craning forward from the background.

"Pure, damned nerve," muttered Carpy. "But he does it."

They got him into bed. While the doctor was excavating the channel ripped through his shoulder, Laramie said nothing. When, however, he discovered that Kate was missing, he crustily short circuited Belle's excuses. Words passed. It became clear that Laramie would start out and search the town if Kate were not produced.

"She wanted to see me," he insisted, doggedly. "Now I want to see her."

Carpy found he must again intervene. He dispatched McAlpin as a diplomatic envoy over to his own house whither he had taken Kate as his guest when she declined to return to Belle's.

However others may have felt that night about Laramie's affairs, one man, McAlpin, was proud of his ride, desperately wounded, all the way to town. Laramie had made a confidant of no one but Kate. His experience in being trapped was not so pleasant that he liked to talk about it and neither McAlpin's shrewd questioning nor Carpy's restrained curiosity was gratified that night.

In the circumstances, McAlpin's fancy had full play; and distrustful of his imagination unaided, he repaired early to the Mountain House bar to stimulate it. Thus it gradually transpired along the bar, either from the stimulant or its reaction or from McAlpin's excitement, that a big fight had taken place that morning in the Falling Wall from which only Laramie had returned alive. It was known that he had come back and inference as to who the dead men might be could center only on his two active enemies, Tom Stone and Harry Van Horn. The pawky barn boss, who possessed perfectly the art of tantalizing innuendo, thus stirred the barroom pool to the depths.

McAlpin chose the rustler's end of the bar—as Abe Hawk's old stand was called—and held the interest of the room against all comers.

He had become so absorbed in his recital that the entrance into the barroom from the barber shop of a booted and spurred man escaped him. The man, advancing deliberately, heard the last of McAlpin's words. He got fairly close to the unsuspecting barn boss unobserved. A few in the listening circle, noting the approach of the new arrival, stepped back a little—for, of all men that might be expected, after McAlpin's dark intimations, to appear, then and there, alive and aggressive, was Tom Stone.

Freshly barbered, head forward, keen eyes peering from under staring, sandy brows; thumbs stuck in his belt and his face framing a confident leer, Stone sauntering forward, listened to McAlpin. So intent was McAlpin on impressing his hearers that the foreman elbowed his way, before McAlpin saw him, directly to the front.

McAlpin caught his breath. The wiry Scotchman was not a coward, but he knew the merciless cruelty of Stone. Armed, McAlpin would have been no man to affront his deadly skill; he now faced him unarmed.

Stone, leaving his right hand hooked by the thumb in his belt, rested his left elbow on the bar. The bartender, Luke, just back of him, leaning forward, mopped the bar more slowly and, listening, moved a little farther down the bar until his fingers rested on an electric button underneath connected with Tenison's office in the hotel.

"Name the two men, McAlpin," said Stone, ominously, "while you're able to talk."

McAlpin exhausted his ingenuity in his efforts to evade his danger, but Stone drew the noose about him tighter and tighter. He played the unlucky man with all the malice of an executioner. He baited him and toyed with him. McAlpin, white, stood his ground. His fighting blood was all there and he broke at length into a torrent of abuse of the man that he realized was bent on murdering him.

Made eloquent by desperation, McAlpin never rose to greater heights of profane candor. It was as if he were making his last will and testament of hatred and contempt for his murderer, and when he had showered on his enemy every epithet stored in a retentive memory he struck his empty glass on the bar and shouted: "Now you hellcat, shoot!"

It might have been thought Stone would check such a public castigation. He did not. Impervious to abuse, because master of the situation, he seemed to enjoy his victim's fury. "I'm finishing up with your gang around here, McAlpin," he snarled, never losing his grin. "You've run a rustler's barn in Sleepy Cat long enough. I've warned you and I've warned Kitchen. It didn't do no good. Fill up your glass, McAlpin."

"Stone, I'd never fill up a glass with you if I was in hell 'n' you could pull me out."

Stone's grin deepened: "Fill up your glass, McAlpin."

Onlookers, knowing what a refusal would mean, held their breaths. But McAlpin, white and stubborn, with another oath, again refused.

"Fill it, McAlpin," urged a quiet voice behind the bar. Looking quickly, like a hunted animal, around, McAlpin saw Harry Tenison, white faced and cold, pushing the bottle in friendly fashion toward him. Every man save one, watching, hoped he would humor at least that much his expectant murderer. But the barn boss had reached a state of fear and anger that inflamed every stubborn drop in his blood. He swore he would not fill his glass.

Tenison spoke grimly: "Will you drink it if I fill it, you mule?" he demanded, picking up the bottle and pouring into both glasses in front of him.

In the dead silence McAlpin's brain was in a storm. He collected a few of his wildly flying thoughts. Perhaps he remembered the wife and Loretta and the babies; at all events he stared at the liquor, gulped to see whether he could swallow, and, reaching forward, picked up the glass. Stone lifted his own. The two men, their glasses poised, eyed each other.

Stone barbed a taunt for his victim: "Goin' to drink, air you?" he sneered, wreathing his eyes in leering wrinkles.

"No," said a man, unnoticed until then by any except Tenison and Luke, and speaking as he pushed forward through the crowd to face both Stone and McAlpin. "He's not going to drink."

Stone's glass was half way up to his lips; he looked across it and saw himself face to face with Jim Laramie. Laramie, who, unseen, had heard enough of the quarrel, stood with his coat slung over his right shoulder; one arm he carried in a sling, but as far as this concerned Stone, it was the wrong arm. Daring neither to raise the whisky to his lips nor to set the glass down, lest Laramie, suspecting he meant to draw, should shoot, Stone stood rooted. "McAlpin's not going to drink, Stone," repeated Laramie. "What are you going to do about it?"

The mere sight of Laramie would have been a vastly unpleasant surprise. But to find himself faced by him in fighting trim after what had taken place in the morning was an upset.

"What am I going to do about it?" echoed Stone, lifting his eyebrows and grinning anew. "What are you going to do about it, Jim?" he demanded. "You and me used to bunk together, didn't we?"

"I bunked with a rattlesnake once. I didn't know it," responded Laramie, dryly. "Next morning the rattlesnake didn't know it."

"Jim, I'll drink with you just once for old times."

"I wouldn't drink with you, Stone. No man would drink with you if he wasn't afraid of you. And after tonight nobody's going to be afraid of you. You're a thief among thieves, Tom Stone; a bully, a coward, a skulker. You shoot from cover. When Barb made you foreman you and Van Horn stole his cattle and Dutch Henry sold 'em for you and divvied with you. Then, for fear Barb would get wise, you and Van Horn got up the raid and killed Dutch Henry, so he couldn't talk.

"Now you're going to quit this stuff. No more thieving, no more man-killing, no bully-ragging, no nothing. Tenison will clear this room. Hold your glass right where it is till the last man gets out. When he gets out set down your glass; you'll have time enough allowed you. After that, draw where you stand. You're not entitled to a chance. God, Stone, I'd rather bunk with a rattlesnake than with you. I'd rather kill one than kill a thing like you. Your head ought to be pounded with a rock. You're entitled to nothing. But you can have your chance. Get the boys out of here, Harry."

Not for one instant did he take his eye off Stone's eye or raise his tone above a speaking voice, and Laramie's voice was naturally low. To catch his syllables, listeners crowded in and craned their necks. Few men withdrew, but every one courteously and sedulously got out of the prospective line of fire.

What it cost Laramie even to stand on his feet and talk Tenison could most shrewdly estimate. From behind the bar he coldly regarded the wounded man. He knew that Laramie must have escaped Carpy and Belle to look for the men that had tried that morning to kill him. Having found Stone he meant then and there to fight.

Tenison likewise realized that he was in no condition to do it, and promptly intervened: "Don't look at me, Jim," he said. "But I'm talking. There's no man in Sleepy Cat can clear this room now. Most of this crowd are your friends. They want to see this hellhound cleaned up. But you know what it means to some of 'em if two guns cut loose."

Stone saw the gate open. He welcomed a chance to dodge. Eyeing Laramie, he swallowed his drink, set his glass on the bar. With a voice dried and cracked he cried: "Keep your hands off, Tenison. I'll give Jim Laramie all the fight he wants, here or anywhere."

Tenison was willing to bridge the crisis with abuse. "Shut up, you coyote," he remarked, with complete indifference.

"You'll throw a man down no matter how much of your whisky he drinks, won't you, Tenison?" cried Stone.

Tenison, both hands judicially spread on the bar, seemed to fail to hear. "McAlpin," he said contemptuously, "walk around behind Laramie and lift Stone's gun."

Stone started violently. "Look out, Tenison! I lift my gun when there's men to stand by and see fair play!"

A roar of laughter went up. "I don't lift it for no frameup," he shouted, turning angrily toward the unsympathetic crowd. "Get out!" cried one voice far enough back to be safe. "Send for Barb," shouted a second. "Page Van Horn," piped a barber, as Stone moved toward the door.

The baited foreman turned only for a parting shot at Laramie. "I'll see you later."

"If I was your friend," retorted Laramie, unmoved, "I'd advise you not to. If you ride my trail don't expect anything more from me. And I make this town," he hammered home the point with his right forefinger indicating the floor, "and the Falling Wall range my trail."

"Stone ought to have tried it tonight," observed Tenison at the cash register. He was speaking to his bartender long after Stone had disappeared, Laramie had been put to bed again, and the billiard hall had been deserted. "He'll never get a chance again at Laramie half shot to pieces."

Laramie, held for a week in bed, learned from the doctor of Belle's outburst at Kate, and, acting through him and with him, arranged peace.

Complaining of a cold, with her other troubles, Belle took to bed when Laramie was moved to the hotel and Kate turned in to nurse her.

"You won't starve while she stays, Belle," declared Carpy, leaving Kate in possession at the cottage, "and while I think of it," he added, turning to Kate, "Laramie says he wants to see you. You call him up on the telephone, will you?"

"What for, doctor?"

"To oblige me, girl. I want to hold that fellow in his room a few days more and keep his arm in a sling. He's no easier to handle than a wildcat."

Kate looked perplexed. "What shall I say to him?"

Carpy stood at the door with his hand on the knob. "Jolly him along—you know how. He says he's coming down here for dinner tonight. Tell him Belle's sick."

Belle listened. The more Kate considered the mandate the more confusing it seemed. But she rang up the hotel, called for Laramie, and heard presently a man's voice in answer.

"Is this Mr. Laramie?" she asked.

"It is not," was the answer.

"Isn't he there?"

"No."

"Can you tell me when he will be in?"

"He won't be in."

She sighed with impatience. "I want to speak to him. And I think this is he speaking. You know very well who I am," she persisted.

"I do."

"And I know very well who you are."

"In that you may be mistaken."

"Surely I'm not mistaken in believing Mr. Laramie a gentleman."

"But you are mistaken in believing any person by that name here."

"There is a person there who loves to persecute me, isn't there?"

"There is not."

"Is there one there that likes to have his own way?"

"No more than you like to have your own way."

"Is there a man named Jim there?"

"Speaking, Kate."

"I've a message from Belle."

"What is the message?"

"She is in bed with a cold and fever and wants you not to come tonight. As soon as she is up she will let you know."

Belle held her peace till Kate left the telephone. "I can't make Dr. Carpy out," she grumbled. "If he didn't want Jim Laramie to come down here, what did he ask you to call him up for? If he doesn't know any more than that about doctoring," she added, contemptuously, "I'd hate to take his medicine."

She waited for Kate's comment, but Kate possessed the great art of saying nothing. "I guess," continued Belle at length, "it's time to take that pill he left, but I guess I won't take it. What do you think about it?" she asked, referring again to Carpy.

Kate was not to be drawn out. "I found out a long time ago that Dr. Carpy doesn't tell all he knows," she observed, dryly. "But I do know he wants Mr. Laramie to stay in his room. He says his shoulder will never heal if he doesn't keep still."

To this Belle made no response, but when Laramie knocked at the door in the evening she knew who it was. Kate received him.

Talking in leisurely fashion to her, he walked to the door of Belle's room, looked in, wanted to know whom she had been fighting with, and asked if she would get up and get supper for him.

He carried his right arm at his side with the thumb hooked into his belt. "Where's your sling?" demanded Belle, tartly. Laramie pulled it out of his pocket. "I put it

BATHING SUITS ARE CHIC AND SERVICEABLE TOO

By CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special correspondence.]—Bathing suits of bizarre fabrics and design used to come out of the water in a state far removed from their original pomp. This day has almost passed. And now a bathing suit may be as festive as you like without renouncing any of its serviceability.

Of course, as far as color is concerned bathing suits of this summer are not bizarre. The most fashionable ones are of either black or navy, and responsibility for vivid tints is put squarely up to cap, cape, or other accessories. Of the materials which achieve these somber suits satin is still in the lead, and this in spite of the fact that crepe de chine refuses to abide by the dry laws and is today one of the most fashionable of the deep sea going costumes.

If you go into a specialty shot to price these exclusive crepe de chine suits you decide at once to spend the summer on land. Eighty or even $100 is the sum they ask for one of these little whipped cream affairs. And if you protest they point out that the crepe is of the finest and that this suit echoes in workmanship and design some of the smartest of dry crepes de chine.

All this is quite true. Look them over—these costly bathing togs—and you will find the skirt with the handkerchief panels or the looped panels, or the something or other that places them side by side with the most famous of Vionnet's crepe de chineries.

Even the more moderate priced costumes emphasize the fact that chic can get as damp as you please. For instance, they now bind cire ribbon on crepe de chine and jersey creations—preferably black upon gray. Indeed, the same passion for black and gray and for blue and gray is seen throughout these clothes they have assembled for Mr. Neptune's morning ball. A black Canton crepe suit is perhaps paneled and knickered in gray Canton crepe.

And by the way, when I mentioned crepe de chine as one of the favorites of the season I included its more portly relative, Canton crepe. Or a gray wool jersey costume is bound about with navy blue. You simply can't go wrong if you do gray with either black or navy, and the combination is permitted in almost any manner that you please.

However, you don't need to be gloomy as a Whistler nocturne about your bathing togs. For rivaling black and navy is henna. A suit combining henna and gray in materials such as Canton crepe, crepe de chine, satin, or jersey is lovely, and has the sanction of the smartest shops. Another favored combination is old blue and rust. Still another, of course, is black and white or black and red.

All this reference to color excludes, too, the cotton fabrics. Of the utilization of such for bathing suits there is no end. This winter at Florida found the most fashionable women taking their daily dips in gingham—preferably red, brown, or navy checked in white. That the gingham dog of Eugene Field's famous lyric is now become, in fact, a regular sea dog, is proved by the teams of these all ready to drag us into the waves. They are said to be immensely serviceable, inasmuch as they are light, dry quickly, and retain their color. To young girls, it seems to me, they make their most enthusiastic appeal, and for la jeune fille was designed the suit of red and white checked gingham at the right of this page.

Unlike many of the gingham bathing suits, which are made with collar and sleeve trimmings of white organdy, this costume is self-trimmed. Ruffles of the material take away the severe line of the usual bathing suit short sleeve, and they encircle the back and front panels of the overgarment. These panels are held together at the sides by two gardenias of organdy, and the same horticulture is tried out on the gingham cap covering the rubberized one below.

The buds are certainly logical this year. On street and at the dance and in the waves they are all taking to petals. The bathing suit with the petal skirt is one of the smartest of the season, and it has been affirmed in many different materials and forms. Next to the right we find it carried out in a suit of black satin, which provides, so it seems to me, a good suggestion for the girl who wants to both look and swim well.

A word right here about this girl who goes into the water with a purpose. Many of these gay suits which we see are made for a crawl, but not for the Australian crawl. Consequently, the real water athlete usually selects a two piece garb much like the one worn by her brother. This is always sleeveless, low at the neck, and one sees it most often in wool jersey.

Here again the most fashionable tones are black and navy. But to offset the severity of this, your Annette Kellermann does an overhand stroke of color. She ties a silver girdle about her boyish garment, or else she picks out a wide tricolette sash, striped or checked in most vivid of tones.

But gingham is not the only one of the cotton family to qualify for immersion. Thus we see second from the left of this page a costume combining blue chambray with blue and white figured English print. The suspender straps, the frilly peplum, and the knickers with their riding suit suggestion are all features to lift this model far from the commonplace.

Skirts of the new water togs are various in form. Sometimes the chemise overgarment is caught or belted at the sides to effect that desired lateral fullness. In other cases a sash or girdle polices the normal waistline of the chemise overdress. Occasionally the skirt of the outer garment is caught up to provide variety of hem and perhaps a more complete vista of ornate knickers. And frequently the skirt is scalloped. In this last connection I may mention that some of these models are laid out in two or three scalloped flounces.

Whatever its system, the skirt of this type of costume is often uneven. Petals and panels—handkerchief, fan shaped, side ones longer than the hem under which they are probably turned—these function in achieving the irregular, whimsical hem. In the last model this irregularity is carried out in a black satin stripe with silver gray, which is worn over silver gray knickers bound with the fabric of the tunic. And do not forget that silver—just a touch of it—is often used on these sable silks and wools.

We have had a sous-ure of gingham this year, and the modish gingham bathing suit is represented at the right in red and white gingham trimmed with ruffles and self-material. Next, a black satin suit with petal skirt offers both practical and decorative advantages to the girl who really swims. Another novelty suit is found next, when blue chambray is combined with blue and white figured English print. Last, black satin striped in silver gray is completed by knickers of silver gray satin bound in the tunic fabric.

The neck line of this year's water clothes is sometimes round, but more often elliptical. The Eton collar of white is found insistently upon suits of all materials, and certainly nothing is more widely becoming. In the way of trimming, one does not see nearly so much of embroidery. Occasionally, however, Hindu or Persian motifs, echoing those emphasized in real styles of this summer, are employed effectively, particularly upon silk or wool jersey.

For ornamentation the designer now turns more to pipings of contrasting or self-fabric, to motifs, bindings, and even the fashionable rosettes of ribbon, and to combinations of color in one fabric. Kimono sleeves grace some of the models, and for those who fear either sunburn or the effect of their elbows there are prim looking long sleeved bathing dresses often cuffed in white.

We all remember the old bathing cap that was as unbecoming as sweeping day. Nowadays—O, what charming concoctions of headgear are to be seen! The usual and most fashionable cap is, to be sure, just a cap, but it comes in such posterlike tints—jade, red, yellow, French blue, etc.—and it is so betrimmed that the sting is all taken out of its practicality. Most of the caps are of rubberized batiste and are wreathed with rubber flowers of contrasting tint. However, these flowering caps have by no means supplanted the kerchief cap worn by the figure at the left of this page. These latter may either match the costume—in which case they tie on over an unornamental rubber cap—or, to offset suit of somber hue, they may themselves be of some rubberized fabric in a pattern assembling most vivid of colors.

One thing is certain. If our suit be of black or navy or gray, we usually select the gayest of caps. Sunshades carry on with the bright tints, and certainly never were these latter accessories more appealing than they are just now. The one which we show on the page is shellacked cloth in jade, with a large floral design in yellow and black. It is made after Japanese ideals and has a short stem and rather chunky little handle. Many of the new parasols for the beach follow this specification of line and color. Some of the most charming carry a chintz pattern on either jade or red background.

Equally brilliant are the capes which we wear over our somber little suit. Many of these are of rubberized taffeta or of a combination of taffeta and ratine in contrasting tones. Ratine is also used alone, and so is a knit material which comes in either white or in white and black. These latter introduce color through gay linings of turquoise blue, jade green, or rose. There is a new thin and therefore most acceptable rubberized material which comes in loveliest of tints and which is being chosen by many seafaring folks.

As to stockings, one usually wears black silk clocked in white or ribbed in heavier silk, but here again all those who yearn for color have the rainbow from which to pick.

A CHERRY LUNCHEON.

THERE is one dictum of the menu makers that we can in jolly mood utterly defy. It is that no one of the major items used shall appear more than once on a menu. If you have chicken soup, according to this, you must not have chicken salad later on for the same meal.

In the season of the gayest of all fruits—namely, the cherry—we can afford to go to the opposite extreme and for a merry luncheon put cherries into every course, and even so we might get up a luncheon for four people without using more than a pound of the rather expensive dessert cherries. At the same time, we may learn that with thrift there is really more than one bite to a cherry, a profitable thing to know when the dessert cherries cost 60 cents a pound, as they do early and late, and sometimes between early and late supplies, or when the sour cherry is at the height of its season. A three ounce bag can be made to do wonders for a family of two.

The dessert cherry makes a fine and fancy breakfast relish or appetizer, a delicious luncheon motive, and, piled high on showy glass, it makes for the height of elegance at dinner. As a dessert garnish or a beverage ornament it is unexcelled, and it may give perfection to creams—cooked or frozen—ices, plain little batter puddings, and so forth, when used as their distinguishing ingredient.

CHERRY LUNCHEON MENU

Cherry Omelet
Bread and Butter Sandwiches
Cherry Bavarian Cream Little Cup Cakes
Pink Lemonade Cherry Bon Bons

Wash, drain, dry, and stem cherries and remove seeds. A quill was formerly used for this work. A fruit knife may be used and each cherry cut in several pieces at the same time. Put the seeds into a cup or bowl and cover them with lemon juice, which is colored a beautiful pink by them, and is so prepared for lemonade. Sprinkle the cutup cherries lightly with sugar. The sugar draws out the juice, and this may be drained off also for the lemonade, as it makes the fruit rather wet for the omelet, unless it should be beaten into the egg white, as it may be.

To remove cherry stains from hands, rub the squeezed half of a lemon over the stained fingers, and then rinse them thoroughly in cold water.

A Cherry Omelet.

For two people we can make a large omelet to bake in a pan ten inches across with only two eggs if we are skilled in beating the eggs, but the amateur would better take three eggs, perhaps. After washing and wiping them, break eggs and separate whites from yolks. Add as many tablespoons of cold water—the colder the better—to the yolks as there are yolks used, and beat them until they are of the lightest canary color, and until they will stand up almost as stiffly as the whites when beaten till dry.

People have been amazed at the tremendous expansion of one egg white when beaten with a power whip, but see if in this case you do not get considerably greater bulk in the yolks beaten with water than with the same number of whites beaten till stiff. I get more bulk beating two egg yolks with two tablespoons of cold water than I can beating two whole eggs.

Add about a fourth teaspoon of salt for each egg white, beat until dry or "to a point," fold this into the yolks carefully, and spread evenly in a hot, buttered pan. When cooked spread cherries or any other prepared fruit on one-half and fold other half over.

To Cook an Omelet.

When an omelet is correctly cooked it is almost as soft to the tongue as an eggnogg or sabayon. The secret is in having the pan hot, but after that using little heat. With much heat under it a tough surface is formed, because it is the chemical nature of egg white to toughen with heat. So much is this its nature that the white of an egg will commence to cook over 75 degrees below the temperature required for boiling water.

Put a teaspoon of butter in an omelet pan, let it heat until this butter begins to brown, turn off surplus of butter, turn in the omelet, spread it over the pan evenly and lower fire. With a fork prick and lift the egg until this operation uncovers portions of the pan. Then leave to "bake" slowly—ten minutes at least for two eggs—lift edge with spatula, and if it should not be browned slightly turn up fire for a minute. It should not be cooked slowly and long enough to dry out much, nor fast enough to brown.

In filling an omelet with wet fruits or with the Spanish mixture of onions, peppers, and tomato, the egg will wet through on the bottom if it is not cooked dry enough before this is added, then, instead of inverting it for serving, slide it off on a platter, the turned part up.

Garnish for Cherry Omelet.

Some green cherry leaves or other green leaves with some whole cherries, stems on, make a beautiful garnish for an omelet whether it is cherry filled or not. If we follow the rule that everything used as a garnish shall be edible, some cress will be the best, and may be used with some whole cherries. It is quite appropriate for any omelet. In choosing cherries for a garnish, which may be used without the green, it is possible to choose at least four shades from light to dark, and such little nice points have their place when we wish our service to be of the nothing more beyond sort, as for wedding luncheons, birthday celebrations, and so forth.

Three Cherry Recipes in One.

The following preparation may be used as a Bavarian cream, or it may be frozen in a mold like any mousse, or if the cherries are in large pieces we may serve the frozen preparation as a salad, with a fruit salad dressing stiffened with gelatin.

Take three teaspoons of gelatin, wet and cook them in one-half cup of boiling water. Add one-half cup of milk brought to a boiling point and one-half cup of sugar. Beat with an egg beater until it cools and thickens, and when it is cool add the cherries—from one-half cup to a cup cut in bits—and then fold in thoroughly and carefully one-half cup of cream after it is whipped, and pour in mold or individual molds and chill. If it is to be packed in salt and ice that should have been prepared beforehand—a mixture of ice and salt in the proportion of fifty-fifty. It will freeze in two hours, but may be left longer, but not until the cherry turns to ice.

As a Bavarian cream it may be served with whipped cream, and each serving garnished with a whole cherry or two. A mousse, or the Bavarian cream frozen, may be served in the same way, and so may the salad, but with this there should be the stiff fruit salad dressing also.

Little Cup Cakes.

We may alter the standard cup cake recipe in several hundred fashions, and in this case we may add some raisins and candied cherries chopped fine, bake the batter in the smallest of muffin tins, ice it with that always convenient summer icing of icing sugar sifted, and wet up with two tablespoons of cream per cup. In this case cherry juice may take the place of the cream as at other times orange and other fruit juices are used. Or part cream and part juice may be used. The recipe is: One cup sugar, one-half cup butter, two eggs, one-half cup milk, two teaspoons baking powder sifted with one and one-half cups of flour, and flavoring.

Drying Cherries.

A freshly dried cherry is a gratifying thing in summer ices and ice creams and for garnishes. It is also an excellent sweetmeat. Either the sweet or the sour cherry may be used.

The following old recipe produces excellent results: Wash, drain, dry, and stem cherries, then remove stone and save juice that escapes in the process. Allow one pound of the best light brown sugar to three pounds of cherries, or white sugar may be used. Wet the sugar with the cherry juice, stirring over the fire until it is dissolved and the sirup formed boils, then put in the stoned cherries, stew them fifteen or twenty minutes, take them out of the sirup and let them drain, and put them on deep dishes to dry either in the sun or in the slowest of ovens. If out of doors, they should be covered with glass, which must be frequently wiped off.

As the cherries dry some of the sirup left over may be poured around them, and they should be frequently turned. The sirup may all be used in this way or not, so that we get fine results. When the cherries are evenly dried and well coated with dried sirup, put them away in layers of granulated sugar. The larger the cherry the easier it is to stone them and get a handsome confection.

Pink Lemonade.

Lemon juice over cherry stones gets just enough of color and flavor—so slight usually as not to be recognized as cherry—to make a handsome and pleasant beverage. Cooked cherry juice may be used thriftily also in this and other beverages. Since this fruit contains 80 per cent of water, it is difficult to put it up without having an excess of sirup which may be separately canned.

Thrifty Cooked Cherries.

Wash cherries, remove stems, and put to cook without water in a flat bottomed aluminum kettle over a low fire. In a short time they will steam and presently thereafter be surrounded with juice. Cook about ten minutes, drain off the juice for use in beverages or sauces, and while the cherries are hot cover them with enough sugar to sweeten them to taste. By the time the cherries are cold they will stand in a delicious sirup.

Fondant for Dipping Cherries.

Because of the nice handle—stem—and because they will stand much longer than will dipped strawberries, cherries dipped in fondant make a satisfactory bonbon, even a luscious one if perfect. If each is set in a tiny paper cup, they will go further and appear most elegantly. The dipping fondant must be as smooth and soft as silk. A shallow double boiler is the best for melting the fondant, which is then partly cooled before the perfectly clean and dry cherries are dipped in it.

For the fondant take two cups of sugar, one-half cup of hot or cold water, one-half cup of white corn sirup. Stir sugar in water over the fire until it has thoroughly dissolved, but not for a moment after it boils, then add the half cup of white corn sirup or plain glucose. Cook to 238 on a candy thermometer or to the soft ball stage.

In pouring out on a greased platter hold back the last few drops, which have already cooled much more than the mass. When the whole is almost cold work it until it is white and creamy, then cover with a damp cloth and let it ripen. It can be used within an hour or so, but most people think it better after twenty-four hours. While it is cooling do not let the edges harden, but turn them in occasionally, and do not let them be so thin that they will set readily.

For dipping melt some of this over hot water, and if it should be too dense add a tablespoon of hot water carefully if you have no sirup. It should be worked till smooth and flowing with a wooden paddle. Cherry juice heated might be used to thin it.

Home, Sweet Home

In the United States more than six million homes are owned by those living in them. And the number is rapidly increasing. This was the thrilling statement which recently caught our eyes in the newspapers of the nation.

More home owners in this country than in any other.

Thirty billions of dollars is represented in this "Own your own home" idea.

Should not every encouragement be given by bankers, employers, contractors and labor to this most wonderful fundamental in the making of real men, real women, genuinely patriotic citizens, and last, but not least, loving and contented parents for the oncoming generations?

The question answers itself.

Why?

Because each home is the source of America's best strength.

Any influential part of all activity cannot render itself or the nation a greater service than to undertake as its duty in the readjustment, the encouragement and establishment of the old-fashioned American home. We suggest a slogan:

Twelve million homes will satisfy—nothing less.

Perspiration Remedies

Be Particular About Bathing, Dress Shields, Clean Underwear and Stockings, and Drink Plenty of Water

WHILE it is not the most esthetic theme in the world to discuss, still the troubles due to perspiration are common enough, accentuated in warm weather, and consequently require discussion.

To get right down to it, generally speaking the delicacy of the subject lies in its being due more often than not to carelessness about personal hygiene. Sometimes, to be sure, excessive perspiration is due to a run-down nervous condition which requires medical treatment or a good tonic.

Where the trouble is present, however, excessive care about personal hygiene is required, because if this is neglected an unpleasant odor is given forth with the perspiration.

A body not bathed frequently enough, carelessness about underwear, about dress shields, about stockings, and about airing clothes will offend with an unpleasant odor. Heavy sachets and perfumes will only make matters worse.

Get the Daily Bath Habit.

The first remedy is excessive and scrupulous cleanliness. People with the daily bath habit react psychologically to a particularness about matters of dress. It is an almost impossible feat to put on soiled underwear and stockings where the daily bath is an established habit. Even though it requires a little extra washing at night to augment the supply, the clean and wholesome girl will have them.

The morning cold shower and the evening warm bath are required in summertime, even more than at any other season. Clean stockings every day, and fresh underwear, too.

Shields are worn day after day by some women, even a season's length, without being washed and they hold an odor of perspiration which is exaggerated and repeated after each wearing. It is a simple matter to wash them. There are tiny safety pins on the market quite inexpensive, to save the sewing in of the shields after each washing.

Woolen and silk dresses, which have once become infected with a perspiration odor must be sent to a cleaner's. But if after each wearing they are hung where the air may get through them, the trouble is minimized greatly.

Many are not themselves conscious of a perspiration odor about them, while others are painfully sensitive about it. So, when in doubt, bathe, and bathe whether in doubt or not. And be careful in the matter of underwear and airing clothes.

The most serious consideration is urged on this subject and its prevention and remedies because more than one girl has lost out both in romance and business because of a fault that seems not to beget easy forgiveness on the part of the male.

A Doctor's Advice.

Just a tip that many girls and women are not familiar with. Dr. William Lee Howard says:

"At certain times girls will have more or less of an odor from their skins and breaths. It is extremely noticeable in some, and in others of the most careful cleanliness and habits it will be detected. Perfumery only makes matters worse: the attempt to cover the natural odor is too marked. These odors are all caused by acids and other chemical materials which exist in the natural secretions of the body: the perspiration, breath, and other secretions.

"The less water there is in the human system the more will these chemical odors pervade the atmosphere surrounding the girl. It is lack of plenty of water that causes the skin to give forth odors. If you have exercised to the extent of bringing on profuse perspiration and have not drunk plenty of water before, during, and after exercise, no amount of bathing will prevent an odor from coming from the skin.

"If you are going out to a dance or any place where you will be in a warm room, you will be unable to disguise the chemical odors coming from the skin. But if you have filled your system with water two or three hours before going out, your skin will have a natural, delicious odor. You can so saturate your system with pure water that all these fatty acid odors become highly diluted, and scarcely any of them will make their presence known to those around you."

Formula for Lotion.

Then there is an astringent lotion which I recommend heartily. It came to me through Dr. A. W. Williams, skin specialist, and I have been recommending it for some time, with great success to my correspondents, they report. It is efficient and inexpensive.

A 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water is dabbed gently on the part every second or third day, and allowed to dry on. This will cause a rapid amelioration of excessive sweating. It is usually sufficient to make three such applications, then to wait for a recurrence before resuming treatment, or one application a week may be made to ward off recurrences.

This may be used with great success on the feet and on the hands, as well as under the arms. If the skin is extremely sensitive it has been known to cause irritation, in which case the simple expedient of diluting the formula by splashing water first on the part before applying is all that is necessary. Excessive use of it will cause irritation, a sharp and stinging sensation, which subsides if the part is not scratched. But where reasonable care is exercised the trouble will be nil. If itching does occur, in spite of precautions, anoint with cold cream.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story, one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

BUT HE DID NOT COME.

ABOUT eight years ago a romance was begun which was one of the saddest I have ever known. In our home town lived a girl who was then 20 years old. Her younger brother had a chum whom he brought home with him. He fell in love with the sister and she grew to love him.

All might have ended happily had it not been that her parents objected to any young man's paying attention to their daughter. She was a lovely girl—one of the most beautiful I have ever known—both physically and spiritually. So when her parents objected to his attentions she told him that she would not meet him in secret but he must wait until her parents gave consent.

He begged her to marry him and go away, but this she would not do. So they parted with the understanding that she was to write and let him know if her folks changed their minds about him.

In a few months he enlisted in the army, and occasionally she heard from him through his sister and her brother. Several years went by; 1917 came, and with it the war. After obtaining his address from his sister she wrote a friendly letter and asked him about his life in the service. This brought a prompt reply. The correspondence continued, and he finally asked her again if she would marry him when he came home on furlough. She answered that she would not promise to marry until she had seen him again, as four years could make a great difference in any one. She said she knew she loved the boy who went away, but the man who came back might be different. So they left the final decision until he came home, which was in the spring of 1918. He expected to be sent to France in July.

When he came and she saw the boy she had not seen for so long she knew that she still loved him and was willing to marry. But both thought it would be harder to be separated again if they married. They kept waiting. Finally, six days before he was to go back to camp, they were married.

It was hard for them to part, after their short honeymoon, but they kept up their letters to cheer one another until the time when they would again be together.

When the armistice was signed she was a happy girl and planned on his homecoming. But he did not come, as his troop was transferred to the Hawaiian islands.

In August, 1919, he wrote that he would be out of service in October and would come home to her in November. But on the 8th of October she received a cablegram telling her that he had undergone an operation, and on the 9th she received another cablegram telling of his death.

They shipped his body home, and he was given a military funeral on the 20th of November, just nineteen months from their wedding day.

We attended the funeral, and that is the last time we saw her alive. On Feb. 2, 1920, she died of pneumonia on the day following her twenty-seventh birthday. They are buried side by side.

Beauty Answers

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

C. K.: FLABBY EYELIDS ARE due to a lack of physical tone—same as flabby cheeks or flabby skin on any part of the body. The remedy? Toning up the system generally by hygienic living. The floating particles people complain of in the eyes are more often than not a disordered stomach, constipation, or kidney trouble. If there is no strain felt, eyes do not need a daily wash. If there is, take boric acid, 1 per cent; sodium biborate, one gram; water camphor, sixty drops, and three ounces of distilled water. Apply with eye cup. Another good wash is boiled water in which a little salt—just enough to make water taste salty—is used. Has same effect as tears.

BETTY W.: IT ISN'T WHAT clothes you should wear, Betty. It is what food you should not eat and what forms of idleness and inactivity you should not indulge in. At 23, 5 feet 6 inches, a girl should not weigh more than 135, and here you are that plus thirty pounds. Let me send you a little pamphlet covering the subject of reducing—with exercises and diets. Send s. a. e.

J. S.: REDUCING LEGS AND ankles is a job that can be done and done well. The swimming movements set the leg muscles to working, so do all of that you can this summer. And then I have some fine exercises for that particular part of the anatomy, to which you are welcome in return for the s. a. e.

O. O. C.: THAT SWELLING HAS for its cause some chronic ill upon which a doctor should be consulted and his advice followed. It sounds somewhat like gout symptoms—but don't take my word for that. See a physician.

MARJORIE: DON'T TRY ANY OF those superstitious remedies for removing the warts. A physician will burn them off with electricity for you. When you have such an extreme case of them you ought to have medical attention.

DRY CLEANING AT HOME
by Alma Harding

This is the seventh article of a series giving instructions in dry cleaning, fine laundry work, bleaching, and dyeing.

ALPHABETICAL TABLE OF SPOT REMOVERS.

EAU DE JAVELLE is one of the most useful adjuncts of the laundry both as a general bleach and as a spot remover. It may be used only on cotton and linen, as it absolutely destroys animal fibers, and if should be used only on white goods unless you do not mind the color disappearing on colored goods. As a general stripping bleach, it is as effective as boiling with caustic soda or bleaching with peroxide. It is, however, probably not quite as good for the material as either of those two bleachers, if it is a question of a thorough 100 per cent bleach to be given.

There is probably nothing simpler to make at home than this bleach in quantity sufficient to last two or three months and costing only 15 or 20 cents, whereas the chlorine bleaches which you buy under a patented name cost more than that for a quart.

Dissolve 1 pound of sal soda and ¼ pound of chloride of lime in 2 quarts of boiling water. Do this in an agate kettle, and let the mixture settle for 24 hours. Then pour off into glass bottles slowly in order not to stir up the sediment.

Another slightly different recipe is: Dissolve 1 pound of washing soda [sal soda, carbonate of soda] in 1 quart of boiling water and let cool. Dissolve ½ pound of chloride of lime in 2 quarts of cold water. Let it settle, and add the clear liquid to the soda. Strain through a muslin, and keep in a dark place in glass bottles.

The French use this bleach in a weak solution for whitening all kinds of table, bed, and body linen. They let the washed linen soak about 10 minutes in a bath made up of 1 cup of the liquid to a tubful of water. Or if you have less than a tubful of clothes, in the proportion of 2 tablespoonfuls to a dishpan full of water. The usual percentage for direct bleaching is 5 per cent and as strong as 10 per cent may be used on fruit stains or old blood stains. But it must be washed out immediately and not left even for a few minutes in the goods.

After any use of this bleach a thorough rinsing is obligatory if you have the welfare of your linen at heart. It is better to add a little ammonia to the water always, in rinsing after the eau de Javelle, as the ammonia absolutely counteracts all effects.

Eau de Javelle affects colors and silks, so that if your table linen should be darned in mercerized cotton or with white darning silk, it would be turned yellow. The straps on combinations and vests are completely eaten away if they are of silk. Therefore, you must pay attention to these details.

The French in their homes use this bleach about every two weeks.

If you should spill clear eau de Javelle on the material, daub on ammonia at once to counteract the effect. I don't want to frighten you away from this bleach by telling you how strong it is when used on materials for which it is not intended. It has little if any injurious effect, even after continued usage on white cotton or linen, and it is a joy to the homekeeper's heart on account of the snowiness it gives to the week's wash.

Egg Spots.

Plain soap and water are sufficient for wool or cotton wash goods, but on silk, spot with a little chloroform. If there is any left, moisten with a pure soap solution, using the same color as the goods and dry quickly with buckskin. In removing egg from silver, if no polish is handy, apply salt with a wet rag.

Embroideries.

These are difficult on account of the many colors and the different kinds of dyes. Soak them for three minutes in a bath of a weak solution of castile soap. Drain, but do not wring. Spread them on a slab or the cleaned kitchen table. Use a soft brush on them crosswise, after smoothing out the creases. Do not press too hard. Slowly pour a bowlful of cold water over the piece, and work again with the brush to get all the soap out. When all the soap is gone, dip in a bowl of weak alum water to make the colors fast. Do not wring, but change from towel to towel until the moisture is nearly gone. If, in spite of all, bleeding begins, rinse the article in cold water and place in a bowl. Then dip in a weak solution of titanous chloride to clear the color which has already run. Place once more in alum water to set the colors, and start all over again. With care even the most difficult embroideries can be made like new.

Enamel.

Old stains will have to have ether. If it is on something where the odor does not matter, use turpentine. Enamel often contains nitrocellulose, in which case you will have to use a mixture of acetate and amyl acetate in equal parts if it does not yield to acetate alone. With enamel, as with many other paint stains, the application of a little butter or lard or olive oil will usually hasten the work by softening the old paint and then after scraping all that is possible off, the paint and the grease stain alike yield to an ordinary solvent.

Engravings.

To remove yellow stains on the margins, sponge with care with a solution of hypochloride of soda

Ermine.

The French secret of cleaning this delicate fur necessitates a long period of airing afterward to free from the odor. They mix a paste of turpentine and plaster of paris and work it in gently with the fingers. Let it dry, and after brushing out powder well with talc to soften the fur. Then brush with a soft cloth, polishing the fur, so to speak, always brushing in the direction of the growth. Then shake and beat softly until all the powder is gone.

Fading.

When the color has faded in spots out of a material, due to perfume or some colorless liquid, it is often brought back by sponging with acetic acid. In any case, this acid cannot harm the most delicate material, and is always worth a try. If the color is not revived, try retouching the spots with dye, if they are small.

Face Powder.

The collars of suits and dresses often become thick with powder and grease. Use equal parts of carbon tetrachloride and chloroform and if there is a shiny spot left afterward work up the nap gently after sponging with an alum solution. Then iron while damp.

Fats.

Carbon tetrachloride is an excellent solvent for all fats. When there are old stains of solid fats, such as tallow, lard, paraffin, or wax, first soften with a little castor oil, and then treat with carbon tetrachloride or chloroform.

A New Sense of Freedom

In Cantilever Shoes you walk with a new sense of freedom, a new lilting step, a new rhythmic swing of the weight from one foot to the other. Gone is the wise-like restriction of stiff soles, gone is the weariness due to distorted feet and poor posture, gone are the aches and pains of fallen arches. Health and comfort walk in the Cantilever Shoe.

The last is patterned from the outline of the foot. The natural inner sole line provides room for the toes and allows them to point straight ahead. This and the well-set heel encourage correct posture. In Cantilevers the weight is distributed so that there is no strain on the arch of the foot.

And the shank of the shoe flexes! With every step the shoe yields with the foot. The muscles have free play, they exercise and grow strong. Cantilevers correct and prevent flat foot because they strengthen the muscles that surround and uphold the ball bones of the arch.

Trim oxfords in several leathers and in white linen; also high shoes and pumps. Widths from AAAAA to EE.

MAIL AND TELEPHONE ORDERS FILLED FOR CHARGE CUSTOMERS UNLESS OTHERWISE SPECIFIED

WISHING luck into the wedding present is what every donor tries to do. In the world of bride lore, it is not a new game. They have been doing it since brides and gifts first became synonyms. "The luckiest present of all is an apron and a half dozen dish towels" was a luck gift practiced by many a relative in days gone by.

A broom given the newlyweds was a present significant of luck and the best of wishes.

A dictionary as a wedding gift promises trouble for the husband and wife, for there will be arguing and looking up continually.

Care must be taken to keep a clock, received as a wedding gift, going the first night it has been wound in the new home or the husband or wife will be short lived.

It used to be customary in some countries for the bridegroom to give the bride on the day of betrothal, instead of a ring, a valuable coin as a pledge that the compact between them was binding.

As many ironholders as are given to you when married, so many boys will you have.

"If you wish a strife, between man and wife, present them with a silver knife."

If the bride receives much table linen her family will never want food.

If among the wedding presents there happens to be a match box the bride will marry twice.

If you receive a piano as a wedding gift and cannot play on it you and your husband will part.

For the bride to receive a pieced quilt as a wedding gift brings great good luck.

Present the bride with a small ball of twine, which as it decreases denotes an increase of fortune.

It is good luck if the wedding gift arriving first is silver.

The groom should wear something that was given him as a present if he wishes good luck.

If a bride wishes to always retain her husband's love and confidence she should never wear to the altar anything that was given her by a male friend.

To break a wedding present before the wedding means trouble.

Duplicate presents should not be changed unless one is willing to take a chance on changing their luck.

If a man marries a second time he must present his wife with the first wife's jewels or he will never be happy.

It is unlucky to give one's sweetheart a brooch or pin.

If a young man presents a girl with a calendar it is a sign he wishes her to hurry and set the date for the wedding.

To have some one present you with a gift of chinaware is a sign of a wedding.

If a man gives his fiancée an emerald, and with wearing the stone becomes paler, his love has lessened; but if it becomes darker his love has increased.

A yellow garter to be worn on the left leg, made and presented by a girl friend, promises the wearer she will be engaged before the end of the year.

Don't give your sweetheart a pen, pencil, or penholder or he will write to others and forget all about you.

If a man gives his sweetheart an umbrella they will surely quarrel.

The maid who accepts a watch from a man will never marry him.

It is bad luck to accept a four footed animal from a male admirer.

An old custom used to be to present something valuable on the first anniversary of the wedding to a man and wife who would swear that neither of them in a year and a day had, either waking or sleeping, repented of their marriage.

If you lose or break a gift from a fiancé you will not marry him.

The wedding anniversaries, with their appropriate gifts, follow:

First—Cotton.
Second—Paper.
Third—Leather.
Fourth—Fruits and flowers.
Fifth—Wooden.
Sixth—Sugar.
Seventh—Woolen.
Eighth—Rubber.
Ninth—Willow.
Tenth—Tin.
Eleventh—Steel.
Twelfth—Silk and fine linen.
Thirteenth—Lace.
Fourteenth—Ivory.
Fifteenth—Crystal.
Twentieth—China.
Twenty-fifth—Silver.
Thirtieth—Pearl.
Fortieth—Ruby.
Fiftieth—Golden.
Seventy-fifth—Diamond.

Ingrown Toe Nail Turns Out Itself

A noted authority says that a few drops of "Outgro" upon the skin surrounding the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail that it cannot penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

COMMON SENSE SHOES.

ANN has seemed like a different person all this week. She has decided to go away, and already the decision has had a happy effect. She's to leave the first of the week, and she's been so busy in her spare hours shopping and getting her wardrobe in order that she hasn't had time to feel sorry for herself. The prospect of three weeks in the north woods has begun to seem alluring.

She had no difficulty about arranging her vacation at this time with the firm, and now that everything is practically settled she is beginning to enter into a holiday spirit. She thinks we ought to take our vacations at this time, too.

I saw her look attentively at Minnie the other day, while the girl stood by waiting for us to make up our lunch order. When the waitress left the table Ann said:

"Minnie certainly looks tired this morning. She probably needs a vacation worse than I do. Look at the way she's walking."

Marion, Dorothy, and I turned like automatons and glanced at the retreating figure. She did look tired. She was—not limping exactly, but walking with such a strained step as to suggest bruise or uncomfortably shod feet. I looked down and caught a glimpse of a pair of ridiculously inadequate shoes just before she disappeared into the kitchen. As the door closed after her Marion exclaimed:

"Well, it's no wonder she looks tired! Did you see the shoes she's got on? They're enough to make a cripple of her for life."

They were pumps or oxfords, I couldn't quite make out which, but with heels of the French variety that must have been almost three inches high. They were badly fitting shoes, too, for in spite of a look of newness the heels curved in and were worn down on the outer edges.

I had never noticed Minnie's shoes before. She always had looked so demure in her black dress and white cap and apron that I'd have taken it for granted that she wore comfortable, well fitting shoes with common sense rubber tipped heels.

"Can you imagine," Marion went on after a few moments, "walking for six or eight hours a day on a tile floor like this trying to balance yourself and a heavy tray on such wabbly pedestals as those heels?" She shivered at the thought. "I gave Minnie credit for having some sense."

"But if a girl like Minnie takes such chances on her health," observed Ann, "the majority of the girls in her occupation must be as careless about themselves."

We took note of the girls as they passed our table to and from the kitchen. With but a few exceptions—and those were worn by middle aged women—the shoes of the other waitresses were no more comfortable or appropriate than Minnie's.

When Minnie came back with our lunch, Ann undertook to lecture her, while the girl walked around setting the dishes on the table, about the importance of taking the proper care of her feet. Minnie admitted that her feet ached most of the time and that occasionally she felt a twinge of pain in one of her legs. "But," she said, "all the other girls wear shoes like these, and I guess if they can stand it, I can, too."

"You won't stand it for long," Ann told her. "Pretty soon—if you keep on wearing shoes like those—your feet and legs will begin to swell, and the veins will begin to stand out on them and before you realize it you'll be an invalid and forced to give up your work altogether. But this sort of work will never hurt you if you take the proper care of yourself—especially of your feet. I'm appealing to your good sense, Minnie, and I hope you'll not only begin to give some little attention to your own poor aching feet, but that you'll get the other girls to follow your example. When I come back from my vacation I hope to see you wearing broad toed shoes with straight, medium sized heels. They'll probably look much nicer with your uniform than the ones you have on now."

Minnie took Ann's lecture in good part. Ann lingered at the table for a moment after the rest of us had gone on, and when she joined us she said that Minnie had promised not only to dress her own feet properly but to do some missionary work of the kind among the other girls.

THE FOOT OF THE RAINBOW.

MY DEAREST ROSE: No one could possibly imagine how happy I was when I received your loving note which contained the one most pleasing word in our language. That one little word yes. Indeed, dearest one, it is a small word. But how much it meant to me. Surely I have come to the foot of the rainbow where the cup of happiness awaits every one.

Since I wrote to you, my love, I lived in a world of expectation, hoping and praying that you would accept my one request.

It will be three long days before I can come to you and hold you in my arms and claim you as my own most precious Rose.

When we met you were like a delicate budding flower. One that had not yet opened its petals to this glorious old world. But since then several years have passed and now you are as a wonderful and priceless blushing rose. Dearest one, "I have searched everywhere, but none can compare with my wild Irish Rose."

And now, love, I will try to live through the three longest days of my life, content with the thought that at the end of that time we will be together forever. Lovingly yours,

GERRY.

TOLEDO Tea Cakes—Two eggs; ½ cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup milk, 2 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon each lemon and almond flavoring. Bake 20 minutes in muffin tins in Toledo Fireless Cookstove, using 2 radiating discs.

How the "Water-Seal" Top has revolutionized cooking

Everywhere women are doing all their baking and roasting without one minute's use of their ovens; cooking whole meals in the Toledo Fireless Cookstoves—without watching, stirring or basting of foods.

The Toledo "Water-Seal" Top, with its groove in which moisture collects and forms a perfect heat seal, permits cooking results that are truly remarkable.

Now women bake bread, pies and cake without oven heat; they roast meat and fowl perfectly, brown them beautifully, cook anything that a range can cook by the new Toledo Fireless Method.

They put the foods cold into the Toledo Fireless Cookstove, with the heated radiating discs, and dismiss all thought of them until meal time.

Nothing can burn; nothing can be underdone. Results are uniform, because the cooking is done by temperature. The heat is thermometer-regulated. Many women find that their Toledo Fireless Cookstoves save them as much as 3 hours a day, as high as 80% of fuel and 25% of nutritive food values.

See Toledo Fireless Cookstoves Demonstrated

In nearly every town there is a good dealer who can show you these remarkably efficient fireless cookstoves. Get him to demonstrate the Toledo features, the famous "Water-Seal" top, the extra-heavy, seamless aluminum lining, the automatic steam-valve, and all the other features which have made Toledo Fireless Cookstoves the greatest kitchen aid offered women in forty years.

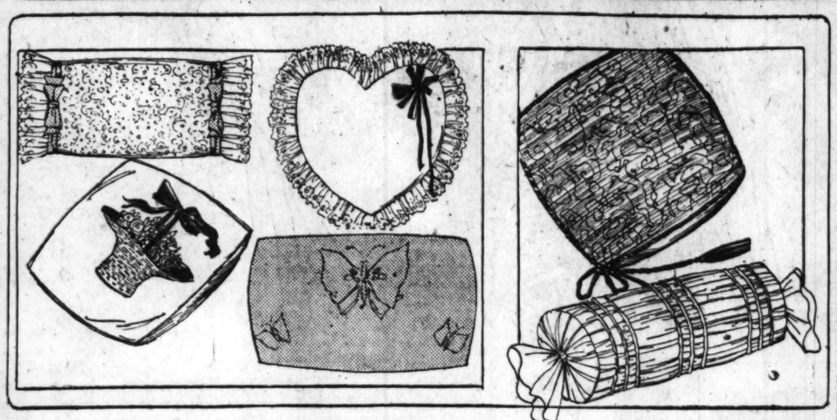
PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK

BY CLOTILDE

Questions on problems confronting the home sewer will be answered in this column or by mail if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago.



COVERS FOR PILLOWS.

THIS time of year most every woman finds many little things about the house that need doing over, or else made entirely new. Sofa pillows of every description will be included in this list by many. The sunshine is so bright it makes hangings, covers, etc., look shabby.

Every sort of material is used for pillow covers, depending, of course, on the sort of room they are to be used in. Chiffon, satin, taffeta, velvet, brocade, and cottons of all kinds, including lovely cretonnes, are used. Then for the baby and for the small bed pillow there are exquisitely embroidered white handkerchief linen pillow covers.

Oblong, round, or square—one sees them of all sizes and shapes; so it is possible for every purpose and taste to be satisfied. If you are fortunate enough to have good feathers, you can make pillows that will always be comfortable. These should always be put in a good quality of ticking, to prevent coming through. Lots of sofa pillows one buys are stuffed with cotton, and this you can do yourself, or if you wish, it is probable that you can buy the shaped pillow you wish and make and put on the cover at home.

Naturally, even with good materials one can make up these pillows much less expensively than if they are bought ready made, and it is delightful work.

The oblong shapes which look like miniature bolster rolls, are often covered in taffeta, with rows of shirred tucks set in. This makes an attractive cover, and should not be tedious work. The tucks are about one-fourth inch wide, and there might be a cluster of three at each end—setting the tucks maybe two inches apart. Then the ends, which measure seven or nine inches, have the tucks also.

For the porch, sun parlor, or lounge in a bedroom, linen in rose, green, blue, tan, or brown will be good looking, with some design in colored floss in a cross stitch pattern. Make the cover an easy fit, and have the underside plain; then work one or more designs on the upper side. A basket of flowers with handle with ribbon bow ends fluttering would be enough decoration for one pillow; or several conventional designs, done in gay, contrasting colors, would be good.

A butterfly pillow would be lovely with one large butterfly in the center, and smaller ones near the corners.

Some of the wash pillows could be finished with a narrow, rather heavy lace edge, or an embroidered scallop. And the heavily padded raised satin stitch, used for black eyed susans on a brown pillow would be stunning.

For the living room or den, one of the beautiful furniture tapestries would make a stunning pillow. It is often possible to find remnants at attractive prices. These pillows should be made perfectly plain, and a silk cord blind stitched around the edge and either fastened invisibly at the ends, or finished with a couple of silk tassels, looping the cord once or twice close to the pillow.

A most attractive porch or bedroom pillow can be made of gingham in a small check. This should have a ruffle stitched in with the seam all around. Care has to be taken at the corners to have the fullness well adjusted. The hem can be simply stitched, or a line of feather stitching, matching the color in the plaid, will be good looking.

Heavy cotton crash in art shades is excellent for a cross stitch design, and the contrasting colors show up well.

MRS. A. T. W.: I think the chain stitch would be effective with the silver metal thread on the dress you are making, and much easier to handle on organdie than an eyelet stitch. I think white Canton crepe with your white garbardine would be lovely, although white is used a good deal now with some other color. You could introduce a color in the girdle if you like. If you will write to the company that makes the machine you use, they will, I am sure, be able to tell you just what to do.

Varied Activities of Women

The household accounts of Buckingham Palace and other royal residences are examined personally each month by Queen Mary.

The mummified body of a woman who died 3,000 years ago was found recently buried in a field in the Jutland district of Denmark.

Irene Hoynes, a hotel clerk in Detroit, is known as the human card index and is said to know personally more than 50,000 people.

Ten per cent of the students in the Christian college at Canton, China, are women.

Princess Mary of England, now at the age of 24, is still unbetrothed.

Mrs. Arthur Hamilton will make another attempt to swim the English Channel some time in August.

Mrs. Oswald Chew of Radnor, Pa., is leading a movement to form a national organization of women who served overseas during the war.

Katherine Green, now in her seventy-fifth year, has written a total of thirty novels and 400 short stories, all dealing with mysterious crimes.

Despite the fact that she is now nearly 80 years of age, Sarah Bernhardt, the sterling French actress, is now appearing in the rôle of a young man.

Mrs. William Laimbeer, assistant secretary of a large New York trust company, was the first woman to address the American Bankers' association, appearing at its last annual convention held in Washington, D. C.

Mme. Celine Renooz, a noted woman scientist of Paris, has reached the conclusion that a woman has written the Bible. According to her findings, women at one time ruled Egypt, and during this period a woman named Myriam of Hathor, disguised later under the name of Mary the Egyptian, wrote a wonderful book, the Sephar. This is claimed as the origin of the Old Testament.

Miss Belle Da Costa Greene, custodian of the J. P. Morgan private library, a life position by the terms of the late financier's will, has been honored with the gold palm of the officer of public instruction by the French government.

By beating out several men in a competitive examination, Prof. Louise McIlroy has been placed at the head of the first London hospital department of obstetrics and gynecology, at the annual salary of $10,000. Her first assistant is also a woman.

Miss Lulu M. Collins is practicing law from a cell in the Pike county [Kentucky] jail, where she is confined in default of $2,500 bond, charged with uttering and selling a forged instrument. Her being in jail has not interfered with her law practice, and she receives her clients in her cell just as though they were conferring with her in her office at Bowling Green.

LOOM PRODUCTS

Lloyd Baby Carriages and Furniture

Lloyd Looms Woven Wicker Are First in Demand; In Every Way Better Than Those Made by Hand.

Proudly Daddy Pulls This Precious Cargo!

Of course everybody looks first at the pretty baby, but the smart new sulky wins admiration too.

Baby loves its smooth, easy-riding comfort. Mother likes the trim Lloyd lines, its perfect workmanship and finish, while Daddy appreciates the genius of Marshall B. Lloyd. It was Mr. Lloyd who invented the method and loom which produce Baby Carriages and Wicker Furniture thirty times faster and finer than the old hand woven products. These inventions cut labor costs, enabling Mr. Lloyd to weave the finest wickers, use the best materials, employ the most skilled workmen, and the latest refinements and still sell his wicker product at remarkable prices. That's the power of invention.

When you go to see the carriages, look at the handsome loom woven furniture too; all very reasonable in price. Ten thousand dealers sell Lloyd Loom Woven Products. If yours doesn't, write us for name of nearest one who does. Send for booklet.

THE SCIENTIFICALLY BUILT WATCH

That You May Appreciate the Adjusted Watch

In our advertising we have sought to educate the public in watch values. We have done this for three reasons: First, that we believe the purchaser of a watch is entitled to some knowledge of what he is buying. Second, that the buyer of a watch should be protected against inferior foreign watches, sold nameless and unsponsored by their foreign manufacturers. Third, that we believe Americans should be informed of the mechanical superiority and world-leadership of the Waltham Watch.

We have, therefore, in a continuous series of advertisements, taken the public into our confidence. We have taken a great deal of the "mystery" from the "works" of a watch. We have fearlessly, and by unanswerable comparison, shown wherein the Waltham Watch is entitled to the world-leadership it enjoys.

We have, moreover, proved that the majority of foreign-made watches lack that mechanical excellence which is pre-eminently American, whether you find it in a Liberty Motor or in a Waltham Watch.

Americans are born mechanics. The majority of American boys know the secrets of wireless telegraphy; and the structure of an automobile is common knowledge with them. As a nation, we have a "mind" for things that move.

And there are no people in the world so keen about fine time-keeping. We want watches that vary but seconds in given periods of time. The saying of a famous Waltham master-mechanic, "A thing is either right or wrong," could well be our national slogan. We want it right.

It is this appreciation by the average citizen of accurate time-telling which gave Waltham the incentive to develop and perfect the adjusted watch.

It is a well-known law of nature that all metals expand or contract under the influence of heat or cold. The hairspring of a watch controls the function of the balance wheel, and indirectly the time-telling ability of the movement. And the hairspring is extremely sensitive to heat or cold.

To overcome this expansion or contraction, the compensating balance was invented. It is so constructed that the same heat which weakens the elastic force of the hairspring serves, at the same time, to reduce the diameter of the balance. This property of automatic compensation is obtained by Waltham in constructing the balance wheel rim of two metals having widely different ratios of expansion.

These metals in the Waltham balance wheel are of specially treated steel and brass, fused together and hardened by a secret process to produce the necessary temper after fusing. In the making of this standard Waltham balance wheel there are thirteen master stages, and about six hundred detail operations.

In addition to this scientific method of watch-building, the Waltham Adjusted Watch must undergo two final tests for position and temperature before it goes into the world to perform its duty of keeping time.

The five positional tests include timing, for stated periods, face down, face up, and in three different vertical positions. Then the Waltham Adjusted Watch undergoes its famous temperature tests.

Imagine a large, perfectly equipped refrigerator plant in connection with watch-making! Yet, that is just what you see at Waltham, and no other watch-making establishment in the world can boast one like it.

The adjusted Waltham Watch goes on a "temperature" journey around the world before you buy it. For stated periods it is kept running in extremes of temperature at an average thermometer reading of 40, 66 and 92. The variation is then adjusted, and the watch so timed that you can carry it with you in confidence and pride, as a dependable companion, anywhere in the world. Yes, from the Tropics to the Arctic Circle, if need be.

To own a Waltham Adjusted Watch is to possess all that horological achievement can give you in the art of telling the time. No watch made, in all the world, has so many exclusive advancements in its "works" typical of American leadership in mechanics as applied to watch-making.

There is no watch "just as good" as a Waltham. Therefore, it will profit you to insist upon this American masterpiece as your first and last choice, when you visit your jewelers to buy a watch.

No Corns Today

unless folks let them stay

Millions of people nowadays keep completely free from corns.

At the first sign of a corn they use Blue-jay—the liquid or the plaster. The pain then stops. In a little while the whole corn loosens and comes out.

People who pare corns keep them. People who use old treatments—harsh, unscientific—do themselves injustice.

There is now a scientific corn ender. A famous chemist perfected it. This world-famed laboratory supplies it through druggists everywhere.

It is at your call. A touch will apply it. Its use seals the fate of a corn.

At least 20 million corns yearly are now ended in this easy, gentle way. Apply it to one corn tonight. Watch what it does.

Bobbie was fond of big words, and never let a chance slip by of using one. He did not, however, always get them in the right place. He was sick abed with an attack of measles. The doctor calling one day, took up a handmirror and showed Bobbie how he looked. Bobbie gazed at his mottled face disgustedly in the mirror, and then looking up to the doctor, asked, "When do you think I will be back to civilization?" E. M. S.

Beatrice was standing in the front yard when Irene, passing by, stopped and eagerly invited: "O, Beatrice, come over to my house and we'll have a lovely time! I've got just heaps of nice playthings to show you."

Beatrice couldn't resist, and they were soon trotting pleasantly along. It was no until some time afterwards, when they were in the midst of their play at Irene's home, that Beatrice cried in sudden dismay,

"O, doodness, I forgot to ask muvver if I could come here."

"Well, it's a good thing you did forget to ask," serenely replied Irene, "'cause I'm pretty sure she wouldn't have let you." F. J.

Mother was giving Billy a bath. The water in the tub was unusually blue, and mother said it reminded her of the water at the lake where they spent their vacation. "Yes," said Billy, "it's just like it, only it ain't drownding water, is it?" C. S. C.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

FOR SUMMER AFTERNOONS.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—The lady that you can only see the top part of is supposed to be sitting in a motor. She drove out to Armenonville, the smart restaurant in the Bois du Bologne, for tea, and this is the way she looked to us as she approached.

She was of olive complexion and beautifully framed in a mass of gray squirrel, topped with a black crêpe turban. From the soft cushions of hair on the sides under it swung great pearl earrings.

She was in a white Rolls-Royce, and beside her smart chauffeur sat a white Russian wolfhound, who was smart and haughty, too. She was but one of hundreds who drove up in motors and taxis for the afternoon occasions of a Paris summer, and it was awfully interesting to watch them.

The full length figure of the sketch represents a coat which appeared there that same afternoon—the weather was cool. This coat would not be a bad investment for fall, for it has the narrow shoulders and the wide skirt which promise to prevail.

It is of tan kasha or cashmere, and the line which makes the shoulders look narrow carries the decoration for the coat. It is oriental in tendency—brown and yellow in color and embroidered, with tassels hanging from the design at intervals in tête de negre. It is accompanied by a big hat of brown straw, with a cocarde in ribbon on one side and a bow on the other.

Notwithstanding this hat, straw, generally speaking, is far from smart. Felt is playing for place as a summer material for hats. As for satin—it exists no longer as a possibility, as a kind friend informed me today when I donned a last year's hat in black satin and monkey fur. And as for the ancient style in vogue in the remote one week ago—better have no hat at all than to try to imitate the queen of the Belgians by having a long streamer of something hanging over your right ear. Cut that off, an get yourself a Spanish scarf to wear 'round your neck instead of a fur piece and you will be all set for the next act in the fashion game.

But to continue with the display at Armenonville—the girl in the second sketch displays a new idea in the trimming of her coat. It promises to be a fashionable note of summer—and fall. The coat itself is of black satin, and the border is of beads—made from white wool! They are arranged in a band about two inches wide 'round the coat and four inches 'round the sleeves.

The blouse and the skirt are of the same satin as the coat. The hat is of black straw with a lone feather pointing horizontally northeast along the edge of the brim.

This girl in the third sketch is also gowned in black satin, but her costume is in a different style—that is to say, it is in the different style; for this season is rich in supplying two in all. Of course, you know this one; Paul Poiret and Vionnet between them got it launched and can't stop it.

Suit of black satin trimmed in white woolen beads.

The skirt is in panels, and these are of black chiffon, finely plaited. That is all there is to it—the rest of the dress is a short sleeved foundation for the display of this garnishment. The bodice blouses a little, and the skirt is round.

Long, black, shiny gloves and a silver fox fur contribute to the chic of the ensemble. The hat is of horse hair braid, which is fashionable along with felt, and it is trimmed in black satin ribbon that ties in loops of varying lengths on the side.

Black satin dress with pointed panels of plaited tulle.

I saw Mrs. Henry Worth of New York in a Renee frock of black satin—surely when I mentioned the material was out of style you understood that I was referring to hats. The distinguishing thing about this dress is that it has only one button. You have heard of such costumes—usually tailored suits—but where is the button located? At the waistline? This one is at the neck. The front from that point to the waist line (which is low) opens over pink crêpe de chine. The entire series of plaits in the skirt are piped in white satin.

Renee dress; black satin. Skirt plaits piped in white satin.

The lady carried one of the new, flat purses and a scarf of sable. The purse is in green velvet edged with steel beads and clasped with pink quartz. Her hat is by Reboux and is of black felt with a feather, very scraggly, which the artist calls a "fantasie" and I should describe as two question marks.

The Iceman Stares.

I was feelingly exceptionally good, and decided that I would manifest my happiness by singing a song. The only song I could think of was an old one, "School Days." Please understand that though this song was supposedly a manifestation of my happiness, all those who heard me must have thought I was feeling terrible.

I drifted into tune and soon was singing—rather chanting the words. I walked back to the kitchen, walked out again, then, still singing the song, went back to the door separating.

I came to the part, "You wrote on my slate, 'I love you, Joe.'" Muttering the "You wrote on my slate," I finally came to the other part and sang—spoke—it loudly. Imagine my surprise to hear an awful crash on the back porch. Looking around, I saw Joe, the iceman, staring at me dumfoundedly, a mass of ice at his feet. E. F.

Conductor Only Smiled.

I am here in the United States only seven months. Last week, on a street car, I opened a package of gum. The transverse ticket I held in my hand, and by crossing the street for the other car I threw away my transverse ticket, and without thinking on anything, especially not on what I was presenting as my transverse, I only wondered about why the conductor did refuse to take my ticket. I thought maybe I picked up an old ticket from the pocket, so I paid the fare again, and only as I was sitting I looked over my ticket. It was the gum envelope. The conductor was polite. He only smiled. H. G.

Still Interested.

The other evening while visiting my girl friend her "steady" unexpectedly appeared on a fudge making scene, at the same time casually remarking that he had walked over with an old flame of mine. Thinking that I at least would have time to see his departing figure, I ran into the parlor, making a dash for the nearest window. To my surprise and chagrin, I bumped pell-mell into the object of discussion amid roars of laughter from the kitchen. C. A.

All Is Vanity.

My sister and I live in a boarding house. One night we went to bed considerably earlier than usual, as we had been to a party the night before. Shortly after retiring a slight noise disturbed us. Turning on the light, we discovered a mouse in the waste paper basket beside the bed. We scrambled on to chairs in our fright, shrieking the while, bringing all the boarders to our room. They were relieved and highly amused on finding the trembling cause of the commotion.

When they had departed taking the dreadful waste basket and occupant, my wits began to return, and the sight of my sister, hair done up in rags, and face smeared with cold cream, was such a ludicrous spectacle that I burst into laughter. It was stilled suddenly as I realized I was similarly adorned.

Among our rescuers were our escorts of the night before, by whom we were considerably smitten. We scrubbed the grease from our faces and registerede a solemn vow never to go to bed such frights again, but it was days before we could again meet the merry twinkle in the eyes of the boarders, and I grieve to say the blush on our faces, almost continuous for some time, was not caused by the shock to our modesty in being seen in our nightgowns but the far worse blow sustained by our vanity. D. E. G.

Hard on the China.

We had been married a number of years, but I had not yet mastered the art of keeping handles on cups. Incidentally my sugar bowl had suffered with the cups. One evening we were dining with some friends. When the sugar bowl reached me I noticed my small daughter looking at it with round, surprised eyes. In a clear tone she piped, "Oh, mamma, it's got a handle on it." Then as the bowl reached her she turned it around for a better look. "Why, mamma, it's got two handles." Amid the laughter of the company I was obliged to explain her surprise. M. B.

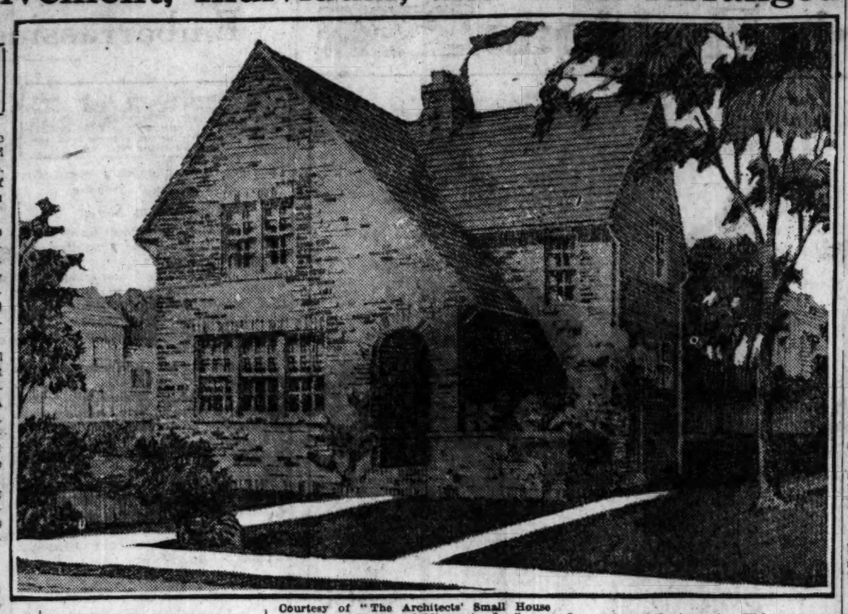
An Economical Five Room House—Homelike, Convenient, Individual, and Well Arranged

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.



"I'D LIKE to build a home like that." No doubt you have heard people say this many times. You may have said it yourself about some home that seemed to you well nigh perfect.

Successful homes do not depend on luck. And they do not necessarily require a large amount of money. People often harbor the idea that only costly structures can have the character, the quality, the comforts, and conveniences which make them wonderful homes instead of just houses.

A good proportioned window well placed is no more expensive than if it were poorly placed from the standpoint of balance and proportions. A simple, artistic fireplace costs no more, and often costs less, than a more fanciful but less desirable design. Also it effects great economies to group the rooms together for convenient intra communication instead of stringing them out in a conventional, unimaginative arrangement which increases the excavating, wall, and roof construction costs.

Good homes are the product of plans carefully designed to make the home comfortable, convenient, and individual within as well as beautiful without. And the skillful, resourceful, and experienced designer can create such plans without materially increasing the cost of building, and in fact, he can frequently give you a more desirable home for less money.

Here we have just such a home—an economical five room house, possessing the homelike feeling and character of the modern English style. The enduring face brick veneer walls are nicely handled with interesting relief in the treatment of the lintels, sills, and entrance arch. The terrace has a patterned brick floor and brick border.

In planning your home, give as much consideration to the materials which you build as to the interior arrangement. The character of the walls determines to a great extent the comfort of the rooms—whether they are snug and cozy in winter or cold and draughty. They should also safeguard you and yours from the dangers of fire. In this house the face brick exterior walls can be backed by metal lath and gypsum plaster. The interior walls should be of the same enduring materials.

This house can be built nicely on a lot with a 42 foot frontage, leaving space for a lawn on either side or a driveway. The design is exceptionally good for a city or well built up community. It is of a type that can be built to advantage among houses that are far more pretentious and expensive.

The long line of the gable stretching down across the front of the house and the graceful arched doorway set off to advantage the rather severe lines of the exterior. Flower boxes along the terrace walk will further enhance the generally good lines and proportions. A pleasing effect may be secured by the use of vari-colored asphalt or asbestos shingles.

FIRST FLOOR CEILING HEIGHT 8'-6" — SECOND FLOOR CEILING HEIGHT 8'-0"

The entrance, placed a little to one side, opens into a handsome hall with coat closet and open stairway. A window on the stair landing lights both hall and stairway. This stair hall permits direct access from the kitchen to the front door, the stairs, and basement.

The generously proportioned living room is interesting with its hospitable corner fireplace of brick and its triple front windows. With two additional windows on the side, good light is always assured. Such a room lends itself well to artistic treatment in the furnishings. The wide doorways into the hall and into the dining room make the first floor seem more spacious than it really is.

The dining room, separated from the living room by French doors, is also well lighted. The two windows in the far wall command a view of the garden which adds greatly to the cheerfulness of the room.

The kitchen is a model of labor saving arrangement. The sink with double drain boards is placed to advantage underneath twin windows and flanked by cupboards. The pantry has thus been eliminated. The broom closet and built-in ironing board are worthy conveniences.

Upstairs are two large bedrooms, each with windows on two sides to assure a cooling breeze even on hot summer nights. The closets are large and of a shape that will accommodate considerable clothing and make it readily accessible. The linen closet and a generous storage space off the hall are great conveniences. The bath room is of fair size, and contains a medicine cabinet and a closet with a chest of drawers.

The basement is divided into a laundry with vegetable cold room and the furnace and fuel room. This arrangement helps keep the laundry clean.

Any one may well be proud to own a home like this. It is well arranged inside and artistically designed outside. And it is built of permanent, fire resistive materials which will preserve its commendable character for generations.

* *

E. L.: Gather your net to upper and lower rods on your French doors. The popular plan is to have the upper rod at the lower edge of the top panes of glass. I should omit the curtains in the doorway, and if necessary use a decorative screen as a substitute.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Dreamers May Decide.

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you kindly tell me which is proper, for the lady to take hold of the young man's arm or the young man to take hold of the lady's arm? BUTTERCUP."

In this age of emancipated, independent young womanhood, it is not necessary to lean upon a young man's arm, so saith that code. But e'en in this age of independence, as the heart leans so doth the arm. Or, in other words, it is one of those private little matters between love's young dreamers—whether he shall proffer his arm for the maid to lean upon or whether he shall grasp hers in a chivalric, supporting way.

C. K., Please Note.

"Dear Miss Blake: I communicate to you herewith a few answers for the benefit of 'C. K.,' who asks why does a girl close her eyes when a boy kisses her. 1. Because she feels in the seventh heaven and does not want to look down for fear to become dizzy. 2. Because it does not require any supervision. 3. Because she knows it by heart. 4. Because love makes her blind. 5. Because she does not want to see what folly she commits. 6. If we see in others a weakness we should close one eye; if their weakness is too severe we ought to close both eyes. Well—kissing is for most people the biggest weakness, hence we close our eyes. A. L."

Here's a Recipe.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 18 years old and I would like to have your advice. I met a girl at my boy friend's house a week ago. She seemed to like me at first sight. I asked her to go to a show and she said yes. I am going to take her to a show this Sunday. Would you please give me your opinion how to win her courtship? H. A."

You are starting out all right, H. A. I don't think you will need much coaching. Just remember that kindness count many points, thoughtfulness in little as well as big things, many more, and a dash of flattery now and then mixed into the batter makes a fairly good recipe.

A Card Will Do.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am keeping company with a young man, and as his birthday will be next month I would like to know whether I should give him a present or not. I have never received a present from him. What shall I do? MARION."

No present from you, Marion. It is bad taste and might prove quite embarrassing to the youth. Send him a birthday card, if you feel you must observe the day somehow.

HOW TO ORDER YOUR CLOTILDE PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly on dotted lines, giving number and size of each pattern you want. Inclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (wrap coin carefully) for each number, and address your order to Clotilde, CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

How to Use the Patterns

THE short waisted or empire effect of the little dress, No. 1018, is one that will be becoming to almost any child. The design is suitable for thin or heavier materials, and if the ruffles are used as suggested on the pattern no other trimming will be required.

The dress opens in the back and the material is slit as far as the perforation and the opening hemmed. On the buttonhole side of the opening lay a half inch hem, laying it straight from top to bottom. On the other side lay a narrower hem, laying this straight the entire length also. After these are stitched on the machine, lap the wide hem over the other, the width of the wide hem, baste across the bottom to hold in place; stitch twice across the bottom, fastening the threads on the wrong side.

After the side sections of the skirt are gathered and pulled into position, lay a strip of the material on the under side, and baste the waist and gathered skirt part to this so that there is no puckering at the inside end of the seam. This strip should, of course, be neatly turned in on the four sides and carefully basted to the dress. It should be just wide enough to hold well and catch the stitching of waist and skirt.

If the strip measures ½ inch when the edges are turned in, make one for the outside measuring five-eighths or three-fourths of an inch, turning in both long edges first and then the short ones. Baste on carefully and stitch exactly on the edge. If the sash is not used this outside strip could be made effective with some gaily colored embroidery.

The ruffles should be divided into quarters or eights and set on with care, for a ruffle looks anything but well if there are bunches of fullness alternated with plain spaces. One sees too many badly put on not to caution against it.

No. 1012 is a one piece slip on dress. A lightweight twill, tricotine, or serge would make up well by it, or it would lend itself equally well to any of the silks or wash materials. It is a design that will be especially becoming to a slender figure.

Gray, brown, or blue Canton crêpe would be smart looking, and the pockets may be omitted if desired. The side sections of the skirt are extended out beyond the edge of the waist, gathered, and brought back in the same manner as No. 1018.

The pattern shows two different ways to finish the neck. In both cases the front is cut down the middle to a perforation showing the end of the opening, and in one case the fronts are faced and joined to a collar that extends across the back. This is a pretty and becoming way. In the other way the neck and opening are finished with a binding, and the opening held together at the neck line with any preferred fastening.

If the collar and facing are preferred, the under part of the collar should be joined to the front neck edges, having the seam come on the wrong side of the dress. The outside collar section is joined in the same manner to the front facings, the seams pressed open, then the facing and collar section are laid on the right side of the dress, with the wrong side of the seams showing, pinned carefully to the collar and fronts, matching the seams, then stitched around the edge and turned right side out. Hem the lower edge of the collar over the neck seam, turn in the edges of the facing, and blind stitch lightly to the dress so the stitches will not be visible on the right side.

No. 1011 is designed for a girl or small woman. It will be becoming to a slight figure, not so much so to one who is inclined to be stout.

Dimity or dotted swiss in brown with the slashes bound with yellow would be dainty and summery, or a black and white check combined with white—the checked material a fine gingham and the white, organdie, rose, green, or blue would be lovely for the bindings. These are not difficult to put on, but do require care, especially where the turn is made to the next scallop. The seam taken should be narrow, and more so at the end of the slash. And at this point, there should be three tiny clippings—one exactly at the turn and one each side of it. This is to prevent the binding puckering there. The skirt is in two pieces and is straight, measuring at the bottom, for a 16 years old size, 2 yards.

A FRIEND IN NEED

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"Do you know a mission or institution which would like a large Bible, 12x10? If you do, have one to give, and will deliver to any address in Chicago. Mrs. J. J. D."

J. J. D.'s address will be given to the person interested.

"Has anybody got a wheel chair for a boy of 9 years old who has just lost his leg in a railroad accident? He is coming home from hospital this week, the father is out of work, and the family large, so he is unable to do anything for the boy. Would appreciate so much if you could do something for this little unlucky chap. It will probably take four or five months before he can use crutches so the parents would take good care of the chair and return it in good shape.

"B. M."

I hope some one has a chair that is not needed any more. And if such a chair is offered I shall see that the little chap gets it.

"I have been sick for quite a while and had to sell my clothes to keep up my room and board. The clothes I now have on are worn and shabby. I have a position in view that would pay me well, but must have a rather neat appearance. I have not been able to work much since discharged on a surgeon's certificate of disability and since I got out of the army I could not work at any job. This job is just the kind I could work at and also do as well as a healthy man. I could enjoy working at it because I cannot enjoy work where I know I am just on the job out of sympathy. If any one has an old suit that they have no use for, would be glad to get it. My size is 35.

"F. M."

Another urgent case of real need. Can some one help soon?

"Being familiar with your loving kindness to so many others, come seeking a home for a little cat family that I have taken in and cared for until they are perfectly trained flat dwellers. Will be greateful indeed to find homes for them. M. W."

If you wish to be the possessor of the little cat family I suggest that you write to me soon for the address of M. W.

"I have a palette, brushes, and about a dozen different colors of paints for some one who is interested in China painting and cannot afford to buy same. "M. E. J."

I shall be happy to supply the address of this kind correspondent.

"TIZ" FOR TIRED AND SORE FEET

Why go limping around with aching, puffed-up feet—feet so tired, chafed, sore and swollen you can hardly get your shoes on or off? Why don't you get a box of "Tiz" from the drug store now and gladden your tortured feet?

"Tiz" makes your feet glow with comfort; takes down swellings and draws the soreness and misery right out of feet that chafe, smart and burn. "Tiz" instantly stops pain in corns, callouses and bunions. "Tiz" is glorious for tired, aching, sore feet. No more shoe tightness—no more foot torture.

The Magnetism of Complexion

Why the Use of Stuart's Calcium Wafers Has Such an Influence That It Clears Skin of Pimples.

It is generally admitted that the laxative action of calcium sulphide is one of the best influences to clear the skin. But not until Stuart's Calcium Wafers were introduced was this fact so generally manifest.

Their action in the bowels and liver is so prompt that the blood is cleansed of those impurities that show in the skin in the form of pimples.

The skin thus influenced by these wonderful Stuart's Calcium Wafers clears of those little eruptions, and firm skin shows with the health that protects from wind and weather.

These wafers contain no poisonous drug of any kind and soon overcome bad breath and the dull, stupid feeling that results from constipation. Mild in action.

No matter how hard you have tried to make your skin beautiful, Stuart's Calcium Wafers should work wonders with it. Rash and a muddy "filled-up" skin texture all give way to a more lovely complexion.

You can get Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store at 60 cents a box, and you will be positively delighted with their wonderful laxative and beautifying influence.

Reed, Fiber and Collapsible Baby Carriages

BABY is visiting far from home. Her own Collapsible Sidway Carriage came with her. Folding flat, it takes up little room in daddy's car, or fits beneath the Pullman seat. And yet when in use, how roomy it is! More space for baby to roll and kick in, and more space for wraps and bundles than in any other type of carriage. The upholstery and hood are of waterproof Fabrikoid and washable. Let it rain! Let it snow! Baby is kept snug and dry. And how comfortable—with well-padded seat and adjustable back, and long-leaf smooth-floating springs which can be adjusted to keep pace with baby's growth!

You'll find these springs only on Sidway carriages. Here's a serviceable, handsome vehicle. Write for dealer's name and valuable book.

SIDWAY MERCANTILE CO.
1120 Fourteenth St., Elkhart, Indiana
Chicago Office (Wholesale Only)
1411 S. Michigan Ave.

Perhaps your baby is now big enough to need a Park Wagon. Then here it is—the graceful Sidway—the show vehicle of park and boulevard. It is comfortably upholstered in handsome corduroy. The body and hood are genuine reed, woven into graceful curves which only skilled hands can execute. The practicability of this carriage is the ease with which you can get baby in and out of it—and in its unusually light weight.

The gondola shape for reed buggies is popular everywhere—partly because baby can be placed in either end without reversing the carriage body. Especially popular is this SidweaveGondola—so named because of the special close weaving of the fine-texture fibre. This elegant carriage has a roomy body, long springs of great resiliency and handsome corduroy upholstery. It must be seen to be appreciated.

Sidway reed, wood, fibre and collapsible carriages are made in endless variety by the world's largest manufacturers of baby carriages.

JUNE 12, 1921.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond.

UNTIL autumn comes we shall have to be content, like the philosopher in the Russian proverb, to [illegible] and wait for a wind.

[illegible] will there be stirring in this [illegible] theaters. Nothing will happen to disturb the inertia, save the auspicious plotting of the vaudeville bills; for the managers are sick and full of fears over the drama's prospects and rely [illegible] upon this capital as the [illegible] in all their provinces. In New York the usual number of "revues" will take place, and twenty-three theaters will be open to amuse the guests. But dividends passed and wages reduced, if not obliterated, seem to have put the blight on gayety in the middle west. From the movies and the minor variety houses hereabouts are in pain for want of sustenance, and a hurried lowering of the admission tariffs leaves the situation unamended. The party is over, it seems; at least until fall.

The gentlemen, however, are a hopeful band and look forward to the next season with faith if not serenity. Excepting Mr. Cohan, of course, who prefers the oblivion of private life to the public discomforts of the pending war of the actors. The New York Times today, announcing the plans for the early months of the season of 1921-'22, says that Mr. Belasco will open earlier than usual with a French comedy, "Kiki," in which Miss Leonore Ulrich will have the leading rôle. The production of "The Wandering Jew," under the direction of Mr. Belasco and Mr. Erlanger, is not based upon Eugene Sue's story but is an original play already acted in London as a pageant play that depicts the Jew for four or five periods of the world's history. In London the leading rôle was acted by Matheson Lang; here it will be in the hands of Tyrone Power. Still speaking of Mr. Belasco, it has been generally reported, and not contradicted, that the Lyceum theater will be the scene of a revival of Eugene Walter's "The Easiest Way" some time in September. Laura Murdock, of course, will be played again by Frances Starr.

John Golden's first New York production, as matters now stand, will be another comedy by Frank Craven, author of "The First Year." This piece, hitherto unannounced, is entitled "The Spite Corner." After "The Spite Corner" will come a comedy by Montague Glass, at present entitled "Easy Come, Easy Go," in which Robert North will have the leading rôle.

After the Glass play—all this on the solemn word of Mr. Golden—will come Austin Strong's "Three Candles," a work tried out in Detroit more than a year ago under the title of "Heaven," and since rewritten by Mr. Strong. Then—Mr. Golden swears it—will come "Poor Man's Pudding," by Winchell Smith and Tom Cushing, the latter the author of the adaptation of "Blood and Sand," in which Mr. Skinner will be seen. As for Winchell Smith's "The Wheel," the immediate destination of that piece, rests upon a financial decision as to the fate of "Lightnin'." If "Lightnin'" goes to Chicago "The Wheel" will come to the Gaiety; if "Lightnin'" stays at the Gaiety "The Wheel" will go to Chicago.

The Selwyns will be unusually active next year. They promise eight New York productions for early in the season and three or four of them have already been definitely assigned to theaters. The first of these to be revealed will probably be "Honors Are Even," which has already spent a prosperous three months or more in Boston. It is a comedy by Roi Cooper Megrue, said to be a play of the "Tea for Three" school, and will have Lola Fisher and William Courtenay in the leading rôles. Another August offering of the Selwyns will be Henri Bataille's "L'Homme a la Rose." In this play, which will be acted here under the title of "Don Juan," Lou Tellegen will have the leading rôle.

In September, at the Selwyn theater, New York, will come the presentation of Somerset Maugham's "The Circle," with a cast that promises to be the most illustrious of the early season. In "The Circle" will appear Mrs. Leslie Carter, returning to the American stage after a considerable absence; John Drew, Estelle Winwood, Ernest Lawford, John Halliday, and A. E. Matthews—as near to an all-star cast as any one is likely to come in these days of easy abuse of that term. Among the other Selwyn productions is "The Poppy God," a Chinese tragedy, with Edna Hibbard and Ralph Morgan; "The Love Chef," with Leo Carrillo in the leading rôle; "The White Peacock," in which Olga Petrova will be seen in New York in September; George V. Hobart's "Sonny," a comedy with songs, with a cast including Emma Dunn, Ernest Glendenning, and Carl Randall as its principal players, and, finally, Hubert Osborne's, "The Puppet Master," with Alan Dinehart as its leading actor.

Sam H. Harris, although he has been buying plays by the handful of late, has lined up only a few for definite showing here in the fall. Early in September he will present Emery Pettie's "The Hero" at the Belmont. For its leading rôle Richard Bennett has been engaged. Mr. Harris' most promising attraction is annually presented at his own New York theater, the Sam H. Harris. Although no definite booking has as yet been made, Mr. Harris declared early in the week the most likely occupant is William Anthony Maguire's "Six Cylinder Love," in which Ernest Truex and June Walker will have the leading rôles. In Atlantic City on Tuesday following the premiere of A. E. Thomas' "The Turn in the Road," Mr. Harris declared that he would send that piece to New York about the middle of September with Mary Ryan in the leading rôle. The only remaining Harris attraction is "St. Ursula," the Edward Sheldon-Zoe Akins play, with Emily Stevens as the star.

A. H. Woods, besides Zoe Akins' "Daddy Goes A-Hunting," in which Miss Marjorie Rambeau will have the leading role, will try "Gertie's Garter," at the Republic theater, New York, on July 17.

Then will come Fannie Hurst's "Back Pay"—Miss Hurst's first original play, and accordingly of more than passing interest. "Back Pay," with Helen MacKellar in the leading rôle, is scheduled for September. A fourth early offering from the Woods office will be "The Pink Slip," with Bert Williams and Harry Fox in the cast. ("The Pink Slip" is just musical enough to fall within both the dramatic and nondramatic classifications.) Then, for his fifth offering, Mr. Woods will present Marjorie Chase's "The Reckoning."

Charles B. Dillingham, entering the field of nonmusical production on a considerable scale for the first time, will produce at least two plays early in the season. Lennox Robinson's "The White Headed Boy" will be with the original Irish company. Mr. Dillingham will probably also produce Aaron Hoffman's "Two Blocks Away," with Barney Bernard breaking away from Potash to act an east side shoemaker who encounters prosperity.

The Shubert plans are particularly uncertain, although they expect to make a dozen or more nonmusical productions. It is not far from a safe guess, however, that their early legiti-

MISS MARY THOMAS of "THE PASSING PARADE" MARIGOLD GARDENS BLOOM PHOTO

A Comedian Who Extracts a Laugh with the Ancient Jest—Mr. Richard Carle

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, June 11.—[Special.] "The Broadway Whirl," which is a little bit of last year's Shubert roof show, another little bit of last year's Greenwich Village Follies, a large chunk of 1918 vaudeville, and whose remaining per cent is contributed by six authors and composers, does nothing so much as bring Richard Carle back to Broadway. Mr. Carle is fortunately all over the stage at nearly all times. He has the happy faculty of fitting snugly into any hand-me-down of a show, which is what "The Broadway Whirl" is.

What is particularly lovable about Mr. Carle is that he and you have so much fun with his bad jokes. Mr. Carle has no use for good jokes. Anybody can crack a good joke. Mr. Carle will now show us how to crack a bad one.

Mr. Carle talked about wood alcohol, income tax, and other frayed topics, and, honestly, he was funny. There is pleasant irony under Mr. Carle's naked skull and purple cutaway. If you care to trace it backwards from your symptomatic side ache, you will find that the laugh that you laugh is at the laugh that Mr. Carle laughs at your laughter. It is very funny, insinuates Mr. Carle, that you should be so easily amused. He is right. It is perfectly ridiculous.

The piece enfolds Miss Blanche Ring, who has been another absentee, less happily. Though everybody concerned, including Miss Ring, tried prodigiously, nothing came of the music to revive memories of Blanche Ring warbling "Rings on Your Fingers" into the hearts of a million pianolions. The music left Miss Ring flat.

Miss Winona Winter, who is also a ventriloquist, sings "Poppy Land," a borrowed melody, and this good song stands out like the mint on a julep. But Miss Winter's other voice is her best one.

When an obscure young lady, whose name—Virginia Birmingham — barely manages to creep into the printed cast, dashes out of a row of pretty girls at one moment of the evening, the title of the show is at once, and only this once, unerringly suggested.

Apart from the enumerated incidents and persons, "The Broadway Whirl," with nice girls in the chorus, an enormous amount of scene shifting, and at least two numbers which call for the presence of the nice girls in the aisles, turns out to be very average summer stuff. It can pleasantly numb an overheated brain.

The actors had a bitter all night battle last Sunday when two rival groups of them—the Lambs and the Actors' Fidelity league—held synchronous benefits in neighboring theaters. It usually takes a deal of explaining to tell what a benefit is about. These will take even more.

There was once a chorus girl, and Leonard Merrick wrote a story about how she paid for her own pair of stockings. Then there was a strike about how Mr. Shubert should pay for her pair of stockings. Then the actors disagreed about how Mr. Shubert should pay for her pair of stockings. Then the pair of stockings got split, and some actors, who banded together as the Fidelity league, got Mr. Shubert to pay for one stocking in their way and some other actors, who organized as the Equity association, got Mr. Shubert to pay for the other stocking in their way. And now Miss Flossie Thespia dances in free stockings, but they do not match, and, because their colors quarrel, so do Thespia's legs, and she is continuously treading painfully on her own feet.

It was by what looked suspiciously like a scheme that the Lambs, who represent Equity, gamboled on the night of the Fidelity show. The two entertainments developed into a contest for endurance and general brilliance. The Lambs scored for endurance, playing in the Hippodrome until the small hours. The Fidelity folk were more brilliant. They had Mrs. Fiske, Miss Julia Arthur, Margaret Anglin, Chauncey Olcott, George Cohan, Henry Miller, and Frances Starr.

In the Hippodrome, De Wolf Hopper, as spokesman for the Equity, hurled a vociferous challenge at the enemy in the New Amsterdam theater. In the New Amsterdam theater Cohan, as spokesman for the Fidelity, made a do or die speech in which he advanced the grewsome suggestion that the bitter animosities of the numerically stronger Equity, backed by the American Federation of Labor, would force Fidelity actors off the stage this fall, when, according to rumors from both camps, the ultimate battle between the right leg and the left leg is to be fought.

"I am ready to play in a tent," Mr. Cohan told Mrs. Fiske, Miss Arthur, Miss Starr, and Miss Anglin, and advised them to prepare likewise.

Great will be the lament of Pagliacci if all these things come to pass. It is utterly ridiculous, but quite probable, that Thespia will solve this problem of mismated hose by cutting off one or the other of her precious legs.

FOR SEVENTY YEARS NORDYKE & MARMON COMPANY HAS STOOD FOR HONORABLE MANUFACTURING, FOR CLEAN, FAIR DEALING AND FOR BUSINESS FAIR PLAY

121 MARMONS SOLD!

85 Delivered to Chicago People

Remarkable record during past 5 weeks. Public recognizes unusual offering, and reduction from $5000 to $3985 has multiplied sales of the finest Marmon ever built.

THE marvel of the motor industry is the continued sales record of the Marmon 34. Since the price reduction on May 2d the momentum of sales has gradually increased. It was not a temporary stimulation.

The reasons for success of the Marmon 34 are self-evident. It has long been recognized as a superior car. It has won the respect of the wise motorists. But many could not afford a Marmon 34 built under war-time and after-war production costs. So there was created a group of people who wanted a Marmon 34 and were waiting for it.

These are the people who have responded instantly to the price reduction, and their buying power is so extensive that already our factory is being restored to normal production.

IT is not a local situation—not confined to Chicago—but it is a nation-wide appreciation of Marmon values. In every state in the Union Marmon sales have multiplied.

The Marmon 34 has gained a prominent position. It stands alone and supreme—uncrowded by competition.

Its performance, its price, its permanency of investment, all make it a car that men cannot fail to consider. It fairly commands consideration.

The Marmon 34 has become the most wanted quality car in America. It is the leader in sales in Chicago.

All of which means: You cannot afford to consider any car until you have become acquainted with the Marmon 34 and its unusual values.

Each Artist in His Turn Plays Many Parts at Ravinia

By Edward Moore.

SOWING further seeds of joy for Ravinia, with the blossoming time to begin in less than two weeks, Mr. Eckstein sends out word of a new and interesting system of casting his operas.

In effect it means that nearly every important rôle in the répertoire will have two and even three artists ready to sing it, and not only ready but actually alternating in the performances throughout the season. Each performance will thus be different from the one before.

The plan was tried a few times last summer. There was one Saturday night when Florence Easton sang the name part of "Mme. Butterfly." On the next Saturday night, Edith Mason sang it. The same two sopranos also alternated as Mimi in "La Bohème."

Neither Miss Easton nor Miss Mason will be among those present this summer, but the plan worked so well that Mr. Eckstein decided to make it general. It will be interesting to the audiences, and it will stimulate artistic rivalry among the singers. When an artist knows that his performance of a part is gong to be compared in a short time with that of another, it is sure, as they say in our set, to put him on his toes.

The permutations and combinations of such a system are almost infinite. Look at "La Bohème," for example. In its four principal rôles as arranged for the Ravinia company this summer, Mimi will be sung by Frances Peralta, Anna Fitziu, and Marie Sundelius; Rodolfo by Charles Hackett, Morgan Kingston, and Mario Chamlee; Marcello by Riccardo Stracciari and Mifio Picco; and Musetta by Miss Sundelius, who knows both parts, and Margery Maxwell.

Looking over the list, one learns that Hackett and Chamlee will do the principal tenor rôles in no less than seven other operas—namely: "The Barber of Seville," "Don Pasquale," "L'Elisir d'Amore," "Faust," "Martha," "Rigoletto," and "Traviata," and that Stracciari and Picco will be baritone teammates not only in "La Bohème" but in "Aida," "The Secret of Suzanne," "Trovatore," and "The Barber of Seville."

There are several sets of three. Misses Fitziu, Florence Macbeth, and Sundelius are announced for the name part of "Manon" and as Suzanne in the opera relating to her secret; Peralta, Fitziu, and Sundelius as Mimi, just mentioned, and Nedda in "Pagliacci."; Hackett, Chamlee, and Kingston as Pinkerton in "Butterfly" and Mario in "Tosca"; Stracciari, Picco, and Graham Marr as Sharpless in "Butterfly" and Tonio in "Pagliacci."

Other reasons for being on the north shore of nights have also been synthesized. Peralta and Fitziu are prepared to sing Mallella in "The Jewels of the Madonna," the title rôle of "Tosca," Flora in "L'Amore dei Tre Re," and the name parts of "Zaza" and "Fedora." The Macbeth-Sundelius union is on Micaeli in "Carmen" and Juliet in "Romeo and Juliet." Misses Fitziu and Sundelius will appear as Marguerite in "Faust" and Elsa in "Lohengrin"; and Peralta and Sundelius are announced for the name part of "Aida" and the rôle of Ah-Yoe in "L'Oracolo."

This includes most of the répertoire, but some of the net's finer meshes contain "Cavalleria Rusticana," wherein Santuzza will be sung by Miss Sundelius and Alice Gentle, and Turiddu by Kingston and Chamlee; "Thais," with the rôle of Athanael divided between Stracciari and Léon Rothier; and the Violetta of "Traviata" to be sung by Miss Macbeth and Miss Sundelius. Whatever rôles remain probably will be in the hands of individual artists, firmly planted and not to be displaced.

Successful National Music.

Nelson Illingworth, the Australian singer, stopped off in Chicago last last week, bringing with him some facts about the national conservatory in Sydney with which he has been connected.

NELSON ILLINGWORTH

Apparently the Australians are fully able to do things in music as well as in other activities. The national organization was founded only about three years ago, but out of it in that time has grown a national orchestra, a great chorus, a variety of chamber music organizations, not to speak of private instruction of all kinds.

After the bill creating it had passed parliament through the efforts of the premier and the minister of education, the first question was a site. This was settled by placing it in the center of Sydney's famous Botanical gardens, on part of the government grounds. Next came the appointment of a director. The post was given to Henry Verbrugghen, violinist and conductor, who had made a great success of a Beethoven festival in London.

He organized the staff and started the classes, meanwhile putting a symphony orchestra into operation. Out of the school came many things, chamber music departments, choruses, and singing classes, and out of the latter a selected chorus of 100 voices.

Public performances started soon after. Here was one of the most astonishing phases of the whole affair. The public seemed to be ready for the gravest and most learned music that could be prepared. No preliminary campaign of education was necessary. Mr. Illingworth says that sixteen performances of Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" were given in two years, with seven performances of the same composer's Ninth Symphony and a liberal assortment of the Bach Motets during the same period.

As Mr. Illingworth expresses it, the chorus competed successfully with the musical comedies of the period. Also the symphony orchestra made such a showing that it was taken over by the government, and after giving three and four concerts a week, closed the season with a financial surplus. This was a new chapter in musical history.

M. Ravel Jits Our Best Musicians.

Maintaining the same cautious approach with which one draws near to the nervous and unstable dynamite, it becomes a duty to record the fact that a new and unexpected defender for jazz music has been found.

Caution is necessary. In this country there is no closed season on jazz. Almost anywhere that you care to look you can find a saxophone emitting startled yelps as it takes for cover a little ahead of its enemies; the master of the drums folds his percussion instruments like the Arabs, and, not quite so silently, steals away.

Pretty nearly everything in the calendar is laid at its rhythmic door. From Evanston comes the dictum that it is the musical equivalent of rouge, lip stick, short skirts, bedroom plays, questionable dancing, and everything vulgar and indecent. Out of Chicago arises the charge that it is diabolical, the nation's curse. A convention of club women in Atlantic City last month indorsed a campaign to make it unpopular. In general our best musicians would seem to hold with our best dietitians that whatever is particularly liked by the common people is by that token certain to be bad for the physical and artistic insides.

The one who writes these lines has but a scant belief in the power of jazz, or any other kind of music, to be either immoral or moral. He believes that music, as such, has other functions. At the same time, he knows enough not to be even an innocent bystander when the subject comes up for discussion.

It was, therefore, with some consternation that no less a person than Maurice Ravel was discovered to have delivered an opinion, Ravel, the admired of all our best musicians. A few weeks ago, as was narrated in the European edition of THE TRIBUNE, a body of forty colored players, calling themselves the "Synchronic American Orchestra," gave a concert in Paris. M. Ravel heard the program and then spoke thus:

"Admirable, thoroughly admirable. The American Negro melodies have a swing and a verve that is almost hypnotic.

"In America you have the novel and interesting phenomenon of what comes close to being a real folk music being built up by artificial means. Started by a small group in your population, fostered by white composers and white music publishers, the Negro melodies, serious and gay, are becoming something distinctly American, representing the country just as, say, the music of the Italian peasants represents that land."

Now here's a pretty howd'ye do, as they say in "The Mikado." That Ravel should have turned upon his trusting admirers in such a fashion is another case of "The Lost Leader," without even a handful of silver or a ribbon to pin on his coat for an excuse. It may be, it must be, that M. Ravel is wrong, and that the people who accuse jazz of everything from loss of memory to wife beating are right. But Ravel's compositions are welcome visitors to the music racks of our best musicians, and have been ever since he evolved his first dissonance.

Altogether, it gives one furiously to think.

Children Dance Today.

With more courage than the recital givers, the dancers are keeping up their appearances pretty well into the heated season. Pupils of Miss Cecelia O'Shaughnessy will give a dance program this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Garrick theater. Lucile Tannrath, Frances Mack, and Betty Rushlebrook will be among the principal performers.

The Helen Wallack dancers will also appear in a "Revue Intime" at the Central theater this afternoon at half past 3 o'clock. A large company will support Miss Wallack in Russian, Grecian, Chinese, Arabian, and continental peasant dances.

FLORENCE MACBETH ©MOFFETT PHOTO.

Miss Macbeth, a native of Minnesota, has during the last half dozen years made a deserved name for herself among the prominent American sopranos. She has appeared many times in operatic and recital performances, and she is held out as one of the persuasive reasons for attending the opera season at Ravinia this summer.

LUCILE TANNRATH

Miss Tannrath, who is 9 and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Tannrath of 1428 Wimmemac avenue, will be one of the performers at a dance recital to be given at the Garrick theater this afternoon by pupils of Miss Cecelia O'Shaughnessy.

Looks Like "Curtain!" When Along Comes Steve

"THE GIRL FROM NOWHERE." Produced by Selznick. Directed by George Archainbaud. Presented at the State-Lake.

THE CAST.

Nicky Cole.....Elaine Hammerstein
Jimmie Ryder.....William B. Davidson
Mr. Whitman.....Huntley Gordon
Mrs. Groucup.....Mattie Fleming
Percival Groucup.....Colin Campbell
Steve.....Al H. Stewart
Mrs. Cole.....Warren Cook
Miss Packer.....Vera Conroy

By Mae Tinée.

ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN is vurr' lovely in this most ordinary picture, "The Girl from Nowhere." Also she has splendid support and has been finely aided and abetted by the technical departments. The picture is well dressed, well set, and well photographed. But, so far as the story's concerned, it's a frost.

Because the young woman in question insists on marrying a man her grandfather objects to, he gets pretty nasty. Whereupon the young woman leaves home, with the man, in a snowstorm. She doesn't know, of course, that he's a thief and a cad.

Chance separates them; shadows her with the suspicion of being the thief, and brings her to a strange cabin in the woods. All before they have even reached the city in their flight. Her presence in the cabin is questioned by the caretaker. Along comes the owner who says she is his wife.

The owner has just been given the go-by by a lady who preferred a title to the honest if unromantic name of Mr. Jimmie Ryder. So the owner, being unhappy and seeing that his plight is the same, suggests that they take a chance and really get married.

They do. Follows a lot of this wife-is-same-only stuff. Then the thief and cad turns up, and lo, he's the brother of Jimmy's former fiancée. He's still sorry about Mrs. Jimmie, and says that if she doesn't respond to his advances he'll tell that she's wanted for robbery. She won't come across, so he steals his sister's pearls and fixes it so things will look dark for the bride. But, ha! along comes Steve.

Who's Steve? Never mind — but Steve knows ALL ABOUT everything. Happy ending.

It's a shame to waste Miss Hammerstein on pictures like "The Girl from Nowhere." Stories built around original ideas may be hard to get, but better a clever picture now and then than a lot of potboilers that get nobody anywhere.

That's where the Germans are going to put their foothold in this country. Their pictures won't come often, but when they do, they'll come BIG. At least, judging from the present examples over here now, that's the way it's going to be.

COUNTESS DU BARRY WITH MISS DORIS KEANE IN "ROMANCE," GARRICK THEATER. WHITE PHOTO

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

B-4: You sound like a submarine. An optience is an audience, only it ops, not auds. Emphasis on the first syllable "op." As in "hop," omitting the "h." Don't consult Noah—consult us. We are strictly up to date and speeding onward.

AN ADMIRER: The "beautiful and rather handsome young men" I imagine you refer to are Harrison Ford and Herbert Agnew, both of whom may be reached in care of the Talmadge company, 318 East 48th street, New York City. Gwine write to 'em?

BBETTY ANN: Bright child! The picture you were asked to guess about was Priscilla Dean. Head of the class for you!

DR. FAUSTUS: Glad we helped out. No, Mary Flynn did not play in the picture you speak of. Come again.

The Theaters

mate presentation will include "Main Street," the O'Higgins-Ford dramatization of Sinclair Lewis' best seller; Cosmo Hamilton's "The Silver Fox," already tried out (produced by William Faversham in association with the Shuberts, and not unlikely to be acted here by Mr. Faversham himself), and Louis Evan Shipman's "Fools Errant," recently tried out.

Mr. Broadhurst's plays promise to be five in number, but as yet the only one of them that is definite is "Tarzan of the Apes," which has been well known in story and film for a number of years.

George C. Tyler is planning the presentation of two plays during the first half of the season. Besides "Dulcy" he will do Eugene G. O'Neill's "The Straw," with Margalo Gillmore in the leading rôle.

Two plays are listed on Mr. Brady's immediate list. One is "Dreamy Eyes," a farce by Adelaide Matthews and Martha M. Stanley, authors of "Nightie Night." "Dreamy Eyes" will be followed in the fall by Alice Brady in "Drifting." This is a vivid tale of the Chinese coast.

The opening attraction in William Harris' list will be "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." Arnold Daly has announced himself as coming to the Greenwich Village theater on Oct. 10 in "The Children's Tragedy" and Shaw's "Man of Destiny." Max Marcin recently tried out his own and Guy Bolton's mystery farce, "The Night Cap," and announces it as a definite early attraction here, although he has not revealed the name of the playhouse. William Hodge will play "Beware of the Dogs," by himself.

Brock Pemberton's first production of the season will be a medieval piece, entitled "Swords," written by Sidney Howard. Clare Eames will have the principal rôle.

The new Ziegfeld "Follies" will begin at the Globe theater, New York City, June 21. Ten dollars will be charged for the lower floor on the first night, and $5 thereafter. The increase in price is due to the fact that the Globe is a small theater, and that at a $4 rate there would be losses, not profits.

Miss Ina Claire has been engaged by William Harris Jr. to star in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," adapted, by Charlton Andrews from the French farce by Alfred Savoir, which has been running successfully in Paris. Miss Claire sailed for Europe with her husband, James Whittaker.

Mr. Belasco's "The Gold Diggers" is due at Powers' in August, with Bruce MacRae, Reves-Smith, Theodore Babcock, Day Manson, Miss Jobyna Howland, and also Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt in place of Miss Ina Claire. . . . Miss Grace Valentine is to be presented by C. Morosco in "Mme. Mlle," by the Hattons, who used to call it "Miss Sappho." . . . Henri Bataille's "L'Homme à La Rose," which the Selwyns will present here under the title of "Don Juan," will be staged by Frank Reicher. . . . Florence Moore will be the principal comedienne at Mr. Harris' New York Music Box in the fall. . . . "The Detour," by Owen Davis, has been bought by the Shuberts and will be tried out in the course of a few weeks. . . . Langdon McCormick, author and inventor of "The Storm," is planning a similar opus entitled "Adventure," said to be filled with sensational scenery.

Laurette Taylor is planning three new productions for next season. One is a new play written by her husband, J. Hartley Manners, the nature of which she does not disclose; another the dramatization of "Humoresque," by Fanny Hurst, author of the novel from which the moving picture was made, and the third a new play which was especially written for Miss Taylor by Robert Hitchens, author of "The Garden of Allah." Miss Taylor will be her own manager.

"The penalty of success in any part," says Miss Taylor, "is that after we have finished out eight months or a year in New York, we must go to the uttermost ends of the country to play it, and then play it and play it, until everyone has had a look. The penalty of failure is that we must almost immediately come into New York again with a new play for another verdict."

Here is an aphorism from Miss Taylor delivered as a curtain speech at Powers with perhaps her tongue in her cheek. "Noting the taste for the undressed form of dramatic art in Chicago, I told the women of my company that the would have to take off more clothes or close. They replied that they would rather close than take off clothes."

Reading in the newspapers of a feud between Miss Doris Keane and Miss Laurette Taylor, Miss Keane dispatched by special messenger the other night to Miss Taylor the following message:

"Dear Laurette Taylor: What silly stories I have just read in the papers! "The idea that I should say or even think such a thing! I have always had such great admiration for you and your brilliant successes.

"Basil says he saw you Sunday and you expressed a wish to see Romance again. As you know, I do not play Sunday nights, but I shall be delighted if you will come next Sunday night and I will give a special performance in your honor.

"Let me know if this is agreeable to you, and, instead of pulling hair, we will embrace. What a disappointment to the scandal mongers! Always yours, DORIS KEANE."

"Why, no; what happened to him?"

"The other day he found a tray of diamonds."

"In a jewelry store?"

"No, in a pack of cards."

"Hasn't your brother been having trouble with his wife?"

"Yes; she left him last week."

"Was it because he took his typewriter out to lunch?"

"No, it was because his wife found it out."

"I'm feeling happy today."

"You look about as cheerful as the first plume on a hearse."

"Nonsense, I feel as if I'd like to do the whole world a favor."

"If you want to do the whole world a favor, them give my brother a job."

"Why certainly. What business is your brother in?"

"He's an undertaker."

"Say, do I look like a dead one?"

"I'll ask my lawyer."

"Oh, the fellow you introduced me to?"

"Yes."

"I hadn't been talking to him over five minutes before he called me an idiot."

"I wonder what caused the delay?"

Rand and Gould:

"They tell me you are fond of animals."

"Yes, I like you very much indeed."

"What became of that nice little kitten you had?"

"Didn't you hear?"

"No; was it drowned?"

"No."

"Poisoned?"

"No."

"Then what became of it?"

"It grew up into a cat."

"I saw you buying a trunk today."

"I expect to go on a pleasure trip shortly."

"Will you take your wife?"

"Didn't you just hear me say it would be pleasure trip?"

"What was that piece of paper you were studying a few minutes ago?"

"A doctor's prescription, but I couldn't make it out."

"I bet any jackass can read it."

"All right, you tell me what it is."

"That's not the right way to talk to me."

"I know it isn't, but there are ladies present."

"Please understand that I'm used to associating with the best people. While in England I saw them put a gold crown on King George's head."

"That's nothing. I saw them put a gold crown on William Jennings Bryan's tooth."

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

In His Turnout for Beach and Breakers

By Alfred Stephen Bryan

Who Wouldn't Lead the Life of a Life Saver?

NEW YORK.—Differing from women's modes, men's fashions are not like a railway time table—subject to change without notice. They vary, to be sure, in the incidentals, but the essentials are retained, embellished, improved, as men get along in years or in wisdom, or as they get tired of the same old, tame old thing.

Time was, not so long ago, when fashions were believed to be fixed by the sophomoric stripling, who, assuming to be a man about town, was usually a man about 18. If the youngster ever was an appreciable influence in molding fashions—and that is questionable—he has ceased to be. It demands both maturity of taste and of figure to select and set off clothes.

The best dressed man is in his 30s and 40s, rather than in his teens and 20s. He is "past my salad days when I was green in judgment." He turns his back upon extremes, mindful that fads are not fashions, and that what is becoming to the individual is more important than to be coming out with the latest thing, which, anyway, is only superseded in a few weeks by the still later thing.

However, in his turnout for the beach and the breakers every man wants to be in the swim. Belying a general impression, such dress need not be awkward and misshapen, but may have all of the fit and much of the smartness of street clothes. Perhaps the fault is that many men choose their swimming outfit at random and at the last moment, instead of giving it the same time and thought they give to dress for tennis, golf, or any other sport.

If cheapness is ever undesirable, it is surely to be avoided in a swimming suit. Sun, sand, water, and sprawling about soon reduce the tuppenny-hapenny suit to a pulp. The material should, preferably, be pure wool or all worsted, which, when dry, regains its first softness and smoothness. Shoddy fabrics become as wrinkled as a raisin after a single dip. Loud and queer colors in a swimming suit may attract attention, but it is the attraction of repulsion.

Portrayed is a smart two garment swimming suit composed of a shirt of white worsted and trunks of blue worsted or flannel. This is a suit to which seasoned swimmers are most indulgent, as the neck and armholes of the skirt are cut low for arm play and as the trunks are loose and wide for leg stretch. A belt always adds a spruce touch to the turnout, looking trim and sportsmanlike. The belt, shown on the figure and also separately, is made of white canvas with a burnished nickel buckle. Some belts have a small pocket, fastened with a snap button, to carry coins, keys, and the like.

While striped swimming suits—that is, striped in contrasting colors at the armholes and the trunk bottoms—are also worn, most men this season seem to prefer solid black, navy blue, or heather mixed patterns. Bathers' sandals are made, high or low, of white canvas with rubber soles. Bathers' handbags are made of rubberized fabrics to fold into the smallest possible compass. Bathers' robes are made of poplin, which is light, or of terry cloth, which is heavier.

For golf, tennis, and all field sports, the flannel shirt has never been outdone, and so it never becomes outmoded. It is not only cool, but absorbent, fending off many a chill which might follow copious perspiration from a grilling day or a touch-and-go game. The shirt shown is plaid flannel with a ditto collar and soft double cuffs. The cravat is the narrow knitted four-in-hand of navy blue.

Types of sporting shoes appear, disappear, and reappear, as the new becomes old and the old becomes new. The shoes pictured is white buck having a tip and vamp strap of black calf, black patent leather, or calfskin, as one may like best.

Swimming suits are of three general types—the one garment coast or California suit with an overhanging shirt which makes it look like two garments; the conventional slipover two garment suit, and the two garment suit having a shirt that buttons down the front like a jacket. The one garment suit is now banned from most beaches.

Divers' skull caps are procurable in oiled silk and rubberized stuffs. These help to soften the impact upon the head of a high jump.

R&V Knight

(FORMERLY MOLINE-KNIGHT)

Many of the R&V Knights you see on the streets today were built and sold in 1913. The difference between these eight-year-olds and the 1921 models is in the body lines—the motor in principle is the same. And were you to ride in the 1913 model you would notice that it ran just as quietly, had just as much power and perhaps even greater smoothness—for the Knight-type engine is one that improves with use.

The Knight-type engine is the nearest approach to complete satisfaction—a power plant unexcelled. In four and six cylinders.

Join the TRAT Club

I'll allow right off the bat that there's too many kids' clubs, and women's clubs, and clubs for superannuated grocery boys, and rheumatic icemen and all that, but look here! Suppose some honest, open-faced, reliable chap asked you to join a club that would keep your hair from turning gray, would rub the wrinkles off your face, stop up one of the most annoying leaks in your pocketbook and make it easy for you to be pleasant even on rainy Mondays.

Would you listen? You would!

Then listen to me. That's just what I am offering you now, and there isn't any membership fee, any dues, any saving, any evenings away from home or any trouble at all. It's a time-saving, money-saving, trouble-saving, worry-saving club. That's what it is! And I call it the TRAT.

Might mean most anything. "Tough Rough Auto Thieves," or "Tramps' Red Anarchists' Trust" for example—but it's simpler than that. "TRAT" means—Threaded Rubber Anti-Trouble.

Not only Anti-Trouble, but Anti-Expense too, for when you hook a Willard Threaded Rubber Battery up to your electrical system, you've seen the last of battery worry and reinsulation expense.

Is it a Secret Society? Not by a jug-full! There's no secret about the fact that the Willard Threaded Rubber Battery saves you the worry and expense of reinsulation and gives you more miles of uninterrupted service per battery dollar. There's no secret about the builders of 185 cars and trucks over at the right—all charter members.

If you want to join the TRAT's, just drive up to the red Willard sign, and have the secretary of the order (that's me) sign you up.

AVIATION

Nimmo Black Is New State Agent for the Swallow

Partridge and Patterson Test Their Ships; Both Fly Well.

BY MORROW KRUM.

NIMMO BLACK, who is the principal booster for the Peterson road flying field, has taken over the state agency for the Laird Swallow, according to an anouncement made last Friday by Lee Hammond, national agent for that ship. Black will make his headquarters at the flying field and at 2216 South Michigan avenue.

The Peterson road flying field is located at Lincoln avenue and Peterson road. It is a large field lying adjacent the polo grounds and is one of the most accessible fields near Chicago. Black has a hangar sufficiently large to house five ships.

Besides selling the Swallow, Nimmo Black will operate an air taxi service between Chicago and nearby cities, he asserts. He plans a round trip excursion between Chicago and Milwaukee for $75 a passenger. The Swallow will be entered and flown in the trophy races at Detroit next September, Black says.

"I know the Swallow can do well over 90 miles an hour and therefore believe I will be able to put up a strong fight in the Aviation Country club of Detroit trophy," said Black. "I will be the first to enter this race from Chicago and perhaps the only one."

The race in which Black plans to compete is fo light commercial planes. The conditions of the race require all ships entered to have an air speed greater than eighty miles an hour. The prize money amounts to $2,500.

The five place airplane constructed in Homewood by Elmer Partridge is now set up and flying at Ashburn field every day. This ship, which is the first four passenger carrying job to be built in Chicago, is equipped with a French Hispano motor that develops 150 horsepower. The ship resembles a De Haviland in many respects.

"How fast?" I asked Partridge.

"Get in and we'll find out," he said. "I think it will do a hundred without any trouble."

It took off in less distance than a "Jenny" or a "Canuck" and climbed right up to 5,000 feet with neatness and dispatch. The time was taken between the roads bounding a mile square field. There was no air speed indicator.

Against the wind the ship flew the mile in sixty-one seconds. Coming back with the wind on the tail the time was forty-six seconds. Across the wind the ship covered the distance in fifty-one seconds. He was so informed.

"I had her throttled on the last two trips across—had to keep the temperature down," said Partridge, and the motor was then throttled so low that his voice was easily heard. Moreover he wasn't losing any altitude when the motor was throttled.

The ship landed slow, about forty miles an hour. Four passengers and a pilot at 100 miles an hour—a neat accomplishment for Chicago.

Charles H. Paterson's "Hornet" got off the ground on its first trip last Tuesday. Paul Milnor made the test flight and despite the fact that the Curtis OX-5 motor was turning up only 1,000 revolutions a minute the ship performed well. Paterson believes when he steps the tachometer up to 1,400 the ship will get away like an S. E. 5 and that it will fly close to the 100 mile an hour mark.

They Stop at the 'Why Go To' Island for Gasoline—?

A BIT of news and a smile comes in a report of an aerial transportation company to be opened on June 15 between Detroit, Mich., and Cleveland, O. The company is called the Great Lakes Airways and final arrangements for the opening of the air line have been completed.

Two Curtiss HS-2 flying boats will be used, one leaving each city daily, according to Rex L. Uden, vice president of the company. The ships will stop at Lelee island, which is on the Canadian side. The gas tanks will be filled at this island and after a short waid the trip will continue.

"You know the island has been given a nickname by the aviators," said Uden. "They call it 'Whydotuh' and there was considerable mystery in Detroit and Cleveland regarding the nickname.

Another feature of the island station is that there are large poultry farms there. They flying boats will carry fresh eggs in both directions for the Statler hotels in both Detroit and Cleveland. The fares are going to be as reasonable as train transportation, Uden asserts, and the time required to make the trip will be considerably shorter.

Mapping Haiti.

Aside from making a photographic map of the entire coastline of the island of Haiti for the coast and geodetic survey, the United States Marine corps aviation service is engaged in scheduled mail carrying in Haiti and Santo Domingo, and regular mail trips are now being made from Santo Domingo City, D. R., to Santiago and San Pedro de Macoris, D. R.

The roads in Haiti and Santo Domingo, across country and among hills, are really nothing but trails, and, while it takes several days to transport mail by old methods, it is a matter of only a few hours to carry the mails by airplane.

Navy and marine corps officers and officials of the two republics find it more convenient to travel by airplane than by the train or automobile service over the country roads. Consequently, regular inspection trips and official trips are made from city to city in Santo Domingo and Haiti by airplane.

The Marine corps air squadrons are exceedingly popular with governmental officials and planters, and in consequence of their activities owners of large sugar plantations are negotiating for planes for private use and to establish commercial lines.

WINNIE WINKLE, THE BREADWINNER. Winnie Bit

"VETERAN"

R. H. Bloxhom, whose red standard flies from Ashburn field every day, spent eighteen months flying for the army air service. He arrived overseas early in the war and spent much time training pilots.

Iowa Air Meet.

More than thirty pilots have entered their ships in Iowa's first airplane meet, which is to be held in Red Oak, Ia., on June 23, 24, and 25. According to the announcement sent out by the Red Oak Aero club, every airplane manufacturer in America and many from other countries will have ships in attendance both for entrance in the contests and for passenger carrying.

The purpose of the meet and show is to promote aviation in the middle west. There will be many cups and cash prizes. Army airplanes will be flown to Red Oak by Maj. Rader and Capt. Cook, who make their headquarters at Fort Crook, Neb.

"Free gasoline—free oil—free hotel accommodations" are the inducements offered pilots, outside of passenger carrying and the contest prizes.

Rieman Pleads for Vision in Aviation Game

A PLEA to the business men of Chicago to seize the airplane manufacturing industry of the country and make Chicago to aviation what Detroit is to the automobile industry was voiced by Charles S. Rieman, chairman of the automotive section of the Pageant of Progress exposition at a luncheon conference of officials this week on the municipal pier, where the big exposition is to be held July 30 to Aug. 14.

"The aircraft industry is coming along faster than the automotive industry in its early days," said Mr. Rieman. "It is the last, the greatest, the ultimate means of transportation, and I believe Chicago can become the center of the industry. If Chicago business men go after this business in a broad, far visioned way, Chicago can become to the aircraft industry what Detroit is to the automobile industry.

"Detroit got the automobile industry in its early days by showing a little more vision than other cities, and today she draws tribute from every village in the civilized world. There are airplane men in many cities of America today standing just where the pioneers did in the days of the automobile industry. They need money and help, and if we give it to them now we will see the day when every little village in the world will pay us tribute."

Heavy Work.

To date more than twice the weight of bombs dropped by the entire American expeditionary forces has been dropped at the Aberdeen proving grounds. It is believed that Aberdeen proving grounds has the smallest active flying field in the air service, yet on three days—April 4, 5, and 6—25,855 pounds of bombs were dropped by the operating personnel of Flight B, 14th squadron, which consists of six officers and sixty-three enlisted men. Flight B therefore believes that it is warranted in challenging any and all air service stations to a duplication of this record.

"Look, shofter," wailed Ned, pointing to a hole in the stocking, "I've had a blowout!"—Motor Life.

ASTRONOMY

JUPITER AND THE FOUR MOONS

BY S. F. MAXWELL

A FEW nights ago I turned my telescope on Jupiter. He is that huge blue white star that shines in the west all evening long, well set in the constellation of Leo. No doubt you have noticed him, and if you have no glass, not even a pair of binoculars, it is a great pity, for his moons make an interesting spectacle and it requires almost no optical aid at all to see them. All four would be quite visible to the naked eye if Jupiter himself did not drown out their feeble rays with his glare.

I have watched Jupiter many times, and yet I always experience a thrill of novelty and pleasure on seeing him again. His family, a complete little solar system in itself, set out in space far from the earth, is always in motion. Four moons are ordinarily visible, a large telescope shows a fifth, and still more refined watching brings the total number up to nine.

We ordinarily think of the swing of a planet or satellite in its orbit as something slow and majestic, but I can assure you that some of Jupiter's moons go fast enough for the fast to be easily noted, even from a station five hundred million miles away.

When I first turned the glass on him one of his satellites was rushing on, about to interpose itself between us and Jupiter himself. There was something a little uncanny in the rapid relentlessness of its motion. It neared the ball, crossed its edge as it appeared to us in perspective, shone for a time against the greater, brighter bulk behind it, disappeared, reappeared out of the brightness, and sailed serenely and earnestly along its circular track in strict obedience to Jupiter's powerful gravity, just as a helpless little satellite must do before the will of a great master.

There is either an eclipse or a transit of one of Jupiter's moons visible from the earth almost every night. A world so plentifully supplied with attendants is never at a loss for configurations to put them in, and this is one reason why Jupiter never loses interest with those who know him.

Jupiter is a great world, a planet circling the sun like the earth, but so much larger than we that 1,300 of our petty planets would have to be rolled together to equal his bulk. He is hot, too, and quite uncondensed. There is no surface to him at all, but only banks of clouds, growing denser and denser down to his center.

His moons, which sparkle so jewel like in our telescopes, are not altogether inconsiderable bodies, either. The smallest one is larger than our own moon, and the biggest is almost the size of Mars, and may indeed at some future time support life.

Sometimes astronomers are asked why it is that they so prefer round numbers, and never agree among themselves, sometimes to millions of miles, on their assigned astronomical values. Figures that might be a third in error either way would never go in a bank, but in the sky it is quite a different matter.

Astronomers are as careful a set of calculators as there are on earth, and have more small errors expressed by large numbers to reckon with than almost any other set of men. They always measure down to the limits of human and mechanical possibilities in all they undertake, and if their values show wide discrepancies, it merely indicates that they are striving and testing to see if they cannot achieve what would be impossible by any but the utmost methods.

The measure of objects so excessively small that hairs seem as big as sticks and cables beside them, through "boiling air," as they term bad atmospheric conditions—and they are usually bad for delicate work—and after long nerve racking, eye straining, patient measurement they deduce value certainly two-thirds correct. We should not look so much to the error as at the achievement that has been done.

Slaves of Life

by J. P. McEvoy

THE BIG FIGHT.

Perhaps you think I do not care
To hear about this fight affair,
To seek and ponder and peruse
The snappy Dempsey training news;
How Jack runs twenty miles a day,
So he can catch Carpentier,
And how he boxes fast and free,
Is immaterial to me?

Perhaps you think I don't subscribe
To each and every diatribe—
That warm discussions pro and con
Leave me inert and woebegone;
That what they do or leave undone
Does not disturb this placid bun,
That unannoyed I hear them rouse
The little brother of the cows.

In short I feel perhaps you think
I am a cold and callous gink,
That whether Dempsey treats him rough
Or gets a wallop on his oeuf,
And loses this important strife,
Is nothing in my tender life—
Perhaps some people may not care
A damn about the whole affair—
NEITHER DO I.

Motorists Ready to Force Issue in Road Fight

Gaps in Federal Aid Loop Form Sore Spots in State Temper

BY J. L. JENKINS.

MOTORISTS in every section of Illinois began a new cooperative movement toward forcing action on the state's highway construction program last week after the house had passed appropriation bills calling for more than $60,000,000 in road expenditures. Leaders in the movement in Chicago declared that results of the recent judicial election here should be sufficient warning to stop any further political meddling with the vital state program, and that they would demand that the work which should have been launched early last March be started even at this late date.

Immediate closing of the forty miles of gaps in the 800 mile federal aid system of paved roads is the first concern of the highway boosters. It is believed these gaps, which have not even been placed under contract for construction this year, can be completed quickly and economically by allowing contractors who are working on various nearly complete stretches to continue their operations this summer and fall. Reports from Springfield are to the effect that Gov. Small ordered the highway department to advertise for bids on these gaps last week, but later withdrew the advertisements for some unknown reason. Unless the gaps are placed under contract soon the splendid paved loop will be practically lost to through traffic for another year.

Motorists voiced bitter opposition to some of the appropriation bills passed by the house and known as administration measures. The bill calling for $3,500,000 for a secondary road system to be built of crushed rock, gravel, or macadam is expected to be met largely through the proposed tax of 1 cent per gallon of motor fuel oil sold.

"Only a small percentage of these 'secondary' roads would be available for the use of motorists generally," declares a bulletin issued by the Illinois Automobile club. "In other words, city dwellers would be compelled to pay for farmer roads. The motorists of Illinois have already had license fees increased for the purpose of building roads. These roads are not being built, although the funds are provided, and it is unfair to make further increases in license fees until the motorists get what they have already paid for."

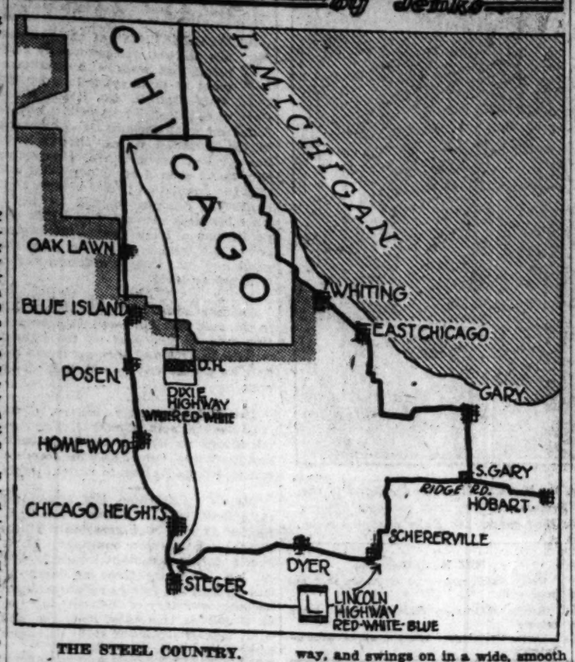
Another indication that Illinois people have reached the limit of their patience in the highway situation and are weary of watching the "machine" consistently delay road construction is seen in numerous plans for county bond issues. Franklin county is ready to vote on a proposed $1,000,000 bond issue and other counties are formulating plans to go ahead inividually, despite the governor's attitude.

Non Skid.

Eighteen pointed spikes, mounted on a circular frame, constitute a new anti-skid attachment for motor truck wheels and to help them to climb grades on icy roadways.

Little Journeys Hereabouts

by Jenks



THE STEEL COUNTRY.

A FLAMING monster lurks at the lower end of Lake Michigan. Never resting, never at peace, he toils day and night to meet the gigantic needs of a nation hungry after steel. The roads are his roads. The country is his country, flat and desolate and ugly, a strange, restless land made for hard work.

There are few pretty places to be found in a swing around the steel lands, but the trip is one that Chicago motorists can hardly afford to miss. We found pleasant enough going along the hard pounded pavements of Western avenue where, even in the early morning, a steady stream of heavy duty traffic flows into and out of the heart of Chicago.

Across the inner and outer belt line railroads, the main artery pushes its vast load of freight to thread the swamp lands at the city's southern boundary. The usual spring patching and rebuilding along the "wheel tax" section of the highway has put it in fair conditions, at the usual huge expense. There have been no figures produced recently to show just how much the wheel tax section of Western avenue has cost per mile, but it is said that each mile has cost a fortune.

Through Blue Island the brick pavement is a horrible example of poor construction. It has been pounded out of all semblance of a road and five miles an hour is a fast pace over it. Slightly better brick footing leads out of Blue Island and through Posen, the town famous for its grade crossing and grim justices of the peace, to connect with excellent county concrete. And here the swamps end and Sauk hills begin. The last stand of the Indians about Lake Michigan is now a country club and summer home haven. The traveler will go far before he finds happier country.

Above Homewood Western avenue merges its identity with the ancient "Hubbard trail," now the Dixie highway, and swings on in a wide, smooth sweep into Chicago Heights. Here, as in the north of Cook county, people are up in arms against the destruction of their dearly bought country pavements by tractors. The tractors' trail is plainly visible between Chicago Heights and Steger, where its heavy, lugged wheels have chewed and broken the macadam.

"That road was nearly wrecked a week or so ago, and by a road contractor, too," said a still angry Steger official. "He was hauling some stuff down south to build a new road when we caught him. We headed him off here and made him take dirt roads to get to the job, but the damage was already done. In some places the tractor has broken the concrete, too, but the man who tries to take another one over the road will have to deal with every man, woman, and child from here to Grant Park."

We took the newly concreted Lincoln highway east to Dyer, across the state line and into the rough macadam and stone that used to be northern Indiana's crack highways, and soon will be made the "ideal section" of the transcontinental trail, through Schererville to the barricade, where repairs are going forward, and then turned north into the Huntington-Manitau-Culver trail. It runs through the maize of railroad tracks to connect with Ridge road.

A right turn in Ridge road took us to Hobart, the hospitable Indiana town which this season has distinguished itself by setting aside four beautiful wooded acres as the first official tourists' camping park in the state. To date the town committee has received more than 100 letters of appreciation from grateful trail people.

From Hobart into Gary and home by way of Fifth avenue, the concrete road winding through the Calumet manufacturing district, Forsythe avenue and Indianapolis boulevard, rough spots in the road are overshadowed by the magnitude of man's labor.

Chance and Pets Taboo This Year in Coast Parks

CRAP SHOOTING, "stud," and other chancy games are to be barred absolutely from Uncle Sam's public playgrounds in California this summer.

Gambling of all kinds, even to nickel matching, is to be taboo in Yosemite and other national parks of the state, according to word received from government officials by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Never again will the lonesome white chip call to its mate in the shadow of the stately redwoods. Never again will the beetling brow of El Capitan wrinkle at the cries of a father seeking shoes for his baby.

Sad news is also transmitted by the auto club to owners of pet animals and pet cats in particular. No animal pet shall be a visitor to any of Uncle Sam's garden spots. Tabby, however, can now pass through the national parks if in a cage, but no pet cat may remain over night in the park.

Last year no pet animals could even pass through the parks. Now they may pass through, but they must pass through quickly.

Other things prohibited in Yosemite this summer, for instance, are trucks of more than three tons in weight, except on the El Portal road or on the floor of the valley. Motorists who have planned to take Fido or Tabby on a pleasant vacation outing which was to include any of the big preserves in the state must now make other arrangements, says the government.

NEWS OF THE NEW

TRUCK FEATURE.

SOMETHING new in solid tires for heavy duty trucks has been developed by the Chicago factory of the Morand Cushion Wheel company. It is a "remountable" cushion element to replace giant pneumatic truck tires, a feature that is expected to eliminate the expense and highway damage caused by solid truck tires that have been worn beyond the point of proper service. The new cushion development is being produced to fit all standard rims. It can be removed as easily as a pneumatic tire.

"MOTOR CONTROL."

The Whyte-Dumeld Manufacturing company, Michigan avenue and 13th street, has introduced a new motor control instrument board which removes all instruments, including speedometer, motor meter, oil gauge, battery indicator, electric switches, clock, etc., from the dash and places them in compact form inside the steering wheel at the top of the steering column.

CAR WASHER.

A mechanical automobile washing machine has been placed on the local market by the Turbine Aetion company of Chicago following its receipt of patent papers from Washington. The machine includes a water turbine motor which revolves a brush at from 300 to 400 revolutions per minute. The exhaust water is shot through the brush, giving a constant spray of clean water to aid in removing all mud and dirt.

CHECK ON GASOLINE.

A new recording instrument which records the flow of gasoline from the filling station pump has been produced by the National Liquid Recording corporation. The apparatus, a small instrument attached to any pump, unrolls a tape as the pump is operated, thus giving both patron and station owner a receipt of the exact flow of gasoline.

ANOTHER LOCK.

The board of underwriters has approved a new steering gear lock which is now being manufactured by the Eureka Auto Lock company, 1134 West Lake street. The invention, a simple device including but two moving parts in connection with a standard cylinder lock, holds the steering wheel rigid when the key is turned, and can be installed on any car without the addition of a special steering wheel.

PLUMS

The fight being waged in Springfield against the administration plans to abolish state civil service is several weeks behind the starting line, according to automobile interests. They point out that the Meentz bill creating state highway maintenance and patrol was passed by both house and senate with a "patronage" joker tucked snugly away among its popular paragraphs.

The joker abolishes civil service in the state highway department, according to the interpretation of road engineers, who say that nothing now remains to prevent politicians from dealing out huge slices of patronage to the faithful through departmental jobs in every corner of the state.

"Sixty million dollars' worth of patronage" is the way civil service advocates put it.

Detours Ended.

George N. Lamb, district highway engineer, has announced the opening of newly paved gaps in both the Dixie highway and Chicago-Joliet road. The newly completed piece of concrete pavement south of Crete, Ill., on the Dixie, was opened to traffic Friday. The pavement between Lockport and Joliet was thrown open yesterday.

Cut Prices Cut Taxes.

With the prevalent movement to cut prices of automobiles, the government is facing a serious loss in taxes. When one automobile concern in Detroit cut its prices recently the United States taxes were reduced $656,250 a month.

CARELESS.

"I hear you had a puncture this morning." "Yes. I ran over a milk bottle." "Didn't you see it in time?" "No, the kid had it under his coat."—Awgwan (Nebraska university).

Reduced Prices Make Chalmers a Better Buy

The Chalmers is more desirable than ever at its reduced prices. Its motor is generally recognized as a wonderful mechanism; the car is unusually good.

The total reduction since last fall is $300 to $450, according to the model. This means that you can buy a large, six-cylinder car for but little more than you would pay for many smaller cars.

The Chalmers motor pre-heats the fuel with a hot-spot at the intake. Combustion is much better. Gasoline is saved. Wear and tear is reduced.

These things aid in keeping the Chalmers out of the repair shop. They make for lower maintenance and replacement charges.

All of which makes the Chalmers an exceedingly sound investment. It is a car which confirms the good judgment of any owner.

May we prove Chalmers superiority to you.

Motorized Farms Newest Feature in Auto Census

Survey Shows Farming States Are Greatest Car Users

THE Pacific coast and the northwest rank first in automobile density based on population; New England and Atlantic seaboard states rank second, the middle southern states take third position. For the entire country there are 11.4 persons per automobile. This information comes from the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company, which has just completed a nation wide survey of automobile density.

The states in the first group, which includes Ohio, Indiana and Michigan, have more cars in proportion to population than the country's general average. Every state excepting the three mentioned can be classed as an agricultural state. The average runs from five to ten persons per car.

A close race between South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska has been waged for the greatest proportionate automobile ownership. South Dakota boasts a car for every 5.2 persons; Iowa has one auto for every 5.5 persons, and Nebraska possesses a car for every 5.9 persons. Fully 85 per cent of the cars in these states are owned by farmers who purchased their cars principally for business purposes.

While Ohio, Indiana and Michigan are quasi-agricultural states, their dense automobile ownership probably can be traced to the fact that over 90 per cent of the country's total motor vehicle output is manufactured within their confines.

New York state, which leads the country in registration, has more motor vehicles than South Dakota has inhabitants, although South Dakota leads the country in auto density. New York has 658,155 motor vehicles, while South Dakota has a population of 653,047. New York has 15.8 persons per automobile.

Florida and Texas are the only southern states in the second group, which comprises states with ten to fifteen persons per car. In this group are also the New England states, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Missouri and Utah. The last named state leads the group with 10.6 persons per auto; Vermont ranks second with 11.1; Illinois and Missouri are tied for third with 11.4 people to a car.

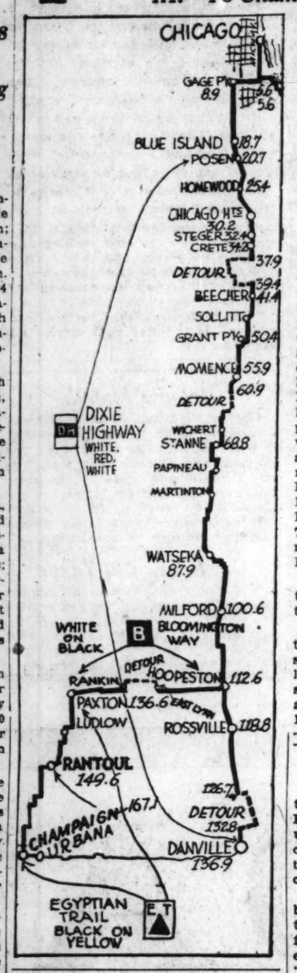
The third group has fifteen to twenty persons to a car, and includes the following states: New York, Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, and New Mexico.

The fourth group—more than twenty persons per car—contains all the middle southern states. They are: West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Arkansas. This group is led by Kentucky with 21.4. The state with the fewest cars in proportion to population in the United States is Alabama, with 31.5 people per car.

That the southern states rank last in the density column is attributed to the fact that this section has poor roads. However, the south is now engaged in a gigantic road building campaign and has now available for expenditure on good roads over $275,000,000.

Tribune Tours

IX.—To Champaign and Urbana.



WITH some 3,000 Cook county students enrolled at the University of Illinois this year, the fifteenth annual commencement exercises, which open in Urbana today, should prove a Mecca for motorists of the great Illini family. The trip of 167 miles through some of the finest country offered in the state is a pleasant one this year, despite the several detours along the main route, and one well worth the Chicago driver's sampling.

The best route this season leads out of Chicago by way of Michigan avenue and Garfield boulevard to Western avenue. Turn left in Western and follow Chicago Motor club route No. 1 marking through Blue Island, Posen, and Homewood, where the street merges into the Dixie paved highway. Follow the paving through Chicago Heights, Stegen and Crete. Here a new stretch of pavement was opened Friday. Follow paving through Grant park and Momence to end of concrete. Detour left to end of road and turn right to pavement through St. Anne, Watseka, where the new bridge is now in place, and Milford to Hoopeston. There turn right on concrete road marked with Bloomington way signs and follow it to East Lynn. Detour north through East Lynn to main road running west. Turn right and follow U. of I. trail markings to Rankin, and pick up the Bloomington way again to Paxton.

At Paxton turn south in the Egyptian trail and follow it through Rantoul and Thomasboro to Champaign.

Natural roads are in excellent condition at present. In case wet weather sets in, the Dixie highway may be followed into Danville, necessitating a stone road detour at Moore's Corners, and the Diagonal trail followed from Danville to Urbana.

An Invitation.

An invitation to motorists who plan to include the Pageant of Progress Exposition on their vacation tours to use the camping sites in the Cook county forest preserves has been extended by the board of forest preserve commissioners.

"I am confident that the board will be extremely glad to have any such tourists take advantage of the beautiful camping sites afforded in the forest preserves," President Ryan wrote. "Comprising more than 20,000 acres, this vast outer park belt stretches from one end of Cook county to the other. I am sure motorists will find much pleasure and relaxation amid this vast and varying acreage of sward, woods, and cleared reaches which form a real wonderland of nature and a popular playground.

"Here's hoping that you have 400,000 motorists as visitors at the Pageant of Progress."

Playgrounds Road Association Will Guide Tourists

HELPING the road traveler and his family plan their vacation trip this summer is an important detail that the National Park-to-Park Highway association is furnishing, without cost, from its general offices, 1668 Broadway, Denver, Colo.

In addition to a road guide which gives the distance between towns on the 6,000 mile master circle route connecting the twelve national playgrounds, the association, through its managing secretary, Gus Holms, has arranged with the chambers of commerce and automobile clubs in seventy-five cities on the highway to mail prospective travelers free literature concerning automobile camps, side trips, and points of interest in their communities.

Government officials and promoters of transcontinental highways recognize in this movement a big educational and recreational program giving the tourist a knowledge beforehand of the things worth considering in making his vacation itinerary.

The road guide and other literature can be had by dropping a line to the association headquarters in Denver. And to give the man of moderate means traveling overland with his family the proper start, the association will act as silent guide over any one of a dozen transcontinental highways, leading to the giant scenic loop and to national parks that contain such unrivaled wonders as geysers, granite hills, glaciers, ruins of prehistoric cliff dwellers, petrified forests, active volcanoes, deserts below the level of the sea, and mountains of perpetual snow.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

STABILIZATION of the automobile market was practically completed last week with announcement of price reductions by the Ford, Paige-Detroit, and Kissel Motor Car companies. Industrial leaders found no small amount of satisfaction in the situation which, they believe, has at last brought the automotive ship to an even keel. They point out that the liquidation period is over, that banks are anxious to lend for legitimate business expansion and that the public has a huge volume of buying power left and is ready to play the game now that they have forced values to a proper level.

Another source of satisfaction lay in the fact that April and May production was 67 per cent of the banner months in 1920 and that prospects are rosy for continued climbing in sales figures.

The Paige-Detroit reduction, effective June 7, affects all models. The Ford cut brings its lists to a pre-war basis, and the Kissel cut of $500 on standard models brings its lists to normal levels.

Walter C. Marmon has announced the election of A. R. Heiskell and H. G. Shafer as new vice presidents of the Nordyke & Marmon company. H. L. Purdy, former assistant treasurer, will fill Mr. Heiskell's place as treasurer, and H. H. Rice, former sales manager, becomes secretary of the company. H. H. Brooks is now sales manager, and A. J. Rogers assistant sales manager, completing the reorganization.

"YELLOW" COMMANDMENTS

Five simple rules for driving, which are being enforced by the Yellow Cab company, have reduced accidents among drivers 60 per cent in two months.

"The rules, only one of which is covered by police regulations, should be adopted by every driver in the city whether he operates his own car or is a chauffeur," said John Hertz, president of the company. "We are enforcing them to the letter, and the result has been to eliminate carelessness and recklessness, which cause most motor car accidents."

Here are the rules:

Never drive more than twenty miles an hour.

Never pass a street car on the left side, whether it is standing still or moving.

Never drive in car tracks when they are wet; even chains will not prevent fatal skidding.

Never dodge in and out of traffic. Keep your place in the rank and travel with the car ahead.

Never fail to signal your movements to the car behind you.

"If these rules are observed, there will be fewer accidents," Mr. Hertz said. "They only represent common sense, after all.

"We have 2,500 drivers who are highly trained. If simple rules will cut down their mishaps, they will do so for any driver."

TUBE BAD.

"We had nothing but trouble all the way—four punctures and two blowouts."

"Quite a threesome journey."—Cornell Widow.

The Test of Economy

Economy of Investment

At the newly reduced prices of $1145 for open cars and $1815 for closed models, F. O. B. Pontiac, Oakland has established a new record of economy of investment for six cylinder cars.

Today's Oakland is the lowest price six cylinder automobile built.

Gasoline Economy

What car at Oakland's price produces greater gasoline economy—18 to 25 miles to the gallon? There is none.

Tire Economy

What car at Oakland's price is equipped with as large as 32"x4" tires? There is none.

Oakland owners regularly report from 8,000 to 12,000 miles per set of tires.

Economy of Light-Weight

What car of Oakland's wheel base weighs as little as 2421 pounds for the open models? There is none.

Even the closed models weigh less than those of other makes having a similar wheel base.

Economy of Maintenance

Simplified construction, elimination of superfluous parts, use of high grade materials, close inspection, strength of weight bearing parts, combine to reduce maintenance costs.

Oakland

NOW WE ask you to apply the test of economy to Today's Oakland Six.

Compare it with other cars of similar size, wheel base, horsepower or price.

Go even further. Compare Oakland economy with that of much smaller cars—cars of shorter wheel base, less horsepower, less seating capacity, costing much less money.

Even then you will find Economy in Today's Oakland Six an outstanding fact easily demonstrated.

When you purchase a car and use it for six months, a year or longer and then sell it, the net result to you has been the use of a certain number of miles of travel.

It is upon what these miles cost you that you must base your judgment of economy.

There are five prime factors that contribute to a car's ability to deliver miles at a low cost—the price of the car, its weight, the number of miles it will travel on a gallon of gasoline, the number of miles a set of tires will carry you, and simplified construction.

In these essentials, as applied to the low cost of travel-miles, Today's Oakland is not surpassed, if equalled, by any other car.

And in addition to these prime factors Oakland Six is noted for many other features that contribute still further to low mileage cost.

The use of high grade materials, elimination of superfluous parts, heavily braced 6½ inch frame with rigid cross members, high speed overhead valve six cylinder engine, improved carburetion, and accessibility combine to make a car so strong and sturdy that maintenance expenditures form only a small fraction of the per-mile cost of operation.

These features create in To-day's Oakland a re-sale value that establishes it as one of America's most economical cars to own, maintain and operate.

FARM AND GARDEN

Flower Fields of Cook County Lure the Apiary Fan

By Frank Ridgway.

CHICAGOANS have found a new vocation. Beekeeping has become so popular among people who live in the city that hundreds of apiaries have sprung up in Cook county within the last few years. The hives can be found in attics and on roofs leading out from back windows, as well as in crowded back yards, all parts of the city. Observations from tiers of glass have been substituted for parrot and canary cages in many homes where space in attics is not available for bees.

Most of the city bee men keep their hives in the suburb or in the country, where there is an abundance of clover and other blossoms. Cook county's honey crop has grown so rapidly within the last few years that there are now hundreds of apiaries with from one to 100 colonies of bees in Chicago and in the territory immediately surrounding the suburbs.

Require but Little Care.

The Smith-Holmes apiary, typical of many others owned by Chicago people, is located away under the branches of old apple trees that overhang the well beaten Indian trail which winds along the banks of the Chicago river in the Cook county forest preserve near the junction of Milwaukee and Devon avenues. Rivaling the beekeeper of Warrilow in their methods of beekeeping, A. G. Smith and M. T. Holmes produced $3,000 worth of honey from sixty colonies last year in spite of the fact that the season was a poor one.

Like many other beekeepers, Smith and Holmes work in the city and look after their bee farm during the week ends. The two men are neighbors. Smith is a cable splicer for the Illinois Bell Telephone company, and Holmes is a mechanic. When their week's work is over, they drive out to their bee farm in a car, feed the bees, add a new super, or requeen a hive. Whatever work is needed it does not interfere with their regular work, for the bees can be properly cared for by looking after them once a week.

Queen in Each Package.

Since last season they have added forty more colonies to their apiary, making a total of 100 colonies that are now busy gathering nectar from the white clover blossoms in the fields near by. This apiary is so managed that the bees are kept busy gathering and storing honey from the opening to the close of the season, and instead of allowing the bees to swarm to increase the size of the apiary new colonies are bought from southern bee keepers.

Smith and Holmes have added several new colonies that were shipped to them from southern Texas and Alabama this year. The season is far enough advanced that the bees coming from there are strong and well developed and ready to gather nectar as soon as the honey flow season opens here. The bees are shipped in three pound screen wire packages. A tested queen is included in each package. Only a small percentage of the bees are lost in shipment where jars of sirup are carefully placed in the package for the bees to feed on while they are in transit.

"More Interesting Than Baseball."

"All I knew about bees when we started in the business three years ago was that they could sting," said Mr. Smith. "But by reading books on bee culture and making a careful study of the busy creatures, I find that bees are more interesting and much more profitable than the baseball game I used to attend on Saturday afternoons.

"Instead of regarding the job of taking care of the bees being work I consider it recreation. When the weather is warm I bring my family out with me. We are not only well paid for our work, but the bee farm furnishes recreation grounds for the children."

Mr. Holmes said that one of their first problems when they started into the beekeeping business was to find a suitable location for the apiary. In the first place, it is never wise to locate a new apiary within a mile of other bee farms. Sweet, alsike, and white clover furnish the chief source of nectar for bees in this section, and it is important that the apiary be located as near clover fields as possible. Most of the surplus honey crop is made from the nectar gathered from the sweet clover fields.

Clip the Queen's Wings.

"Swarming is one of our big problems at this time of the year," added Mr. Holmes, "but we are able to keep the bees at home by clipping the queen's wings so she can't fly and stray off with the workers when they swarm. By clipping the wings of the queen we are reasonably certain that when we leave the apiary the bees will not swarm and get away while we are at work in the city during the week. They may swarm but all of the bees return where the queen's wings are clipped so she can't follow.

"An apple orchard, like this one we use, seems to be an ideal place to keep bees. If the hives are exposed to the sun all day, it encourages the bees to swarm. Keeping the hives in the shade of apple trees not only helps to keep the bees from swarming, but also furnishes shade for us to work in, and serves as a windbreak in winter. The bees, of course, feed on the apple blossoms early in the season.

Extracting the Honey.

"As soon as the cells of the honey comb are capped, we begin to extract the honey. The honey is usually ready to extract about the middle of July in hives around Chicago. We never extract until at least two-thirds of the cells are capped. All of the extracting is done by a centrifugal machine. Before we begin uncapping the combs and extracting the honey, we drive all of the bees out of the supers through a bee escape, which prevents any of the bees from returning to the supers."

In extracting honey many beekeepers remove the entire crop and feed the bees to keep them alive during the winter. Smith and Holmes leave at least thirty-five pounds of honey in every hive for the winter store. Their bees go through the winter in good condition, and come out in the spring vigorous and healthy, ready to do a big season's work. Others claim, however, that they have excellent results where they extract all of the honey in the fall or late summer, and feed sirup to the bees in winter.

Winter Storing Method.

The winter storing method at the Smith-Holmes apiary has a great deal to do with their success in keeping the bees alive during cold weather and free from disease throughout the year. When cold weather comes on they set the hives close together in groups of four on a platform covered with tar paper. A one inch box is placed around the four hives, leaving a space of about ten inches for leaves to be packed around the sides and over the top to provide the necessary insulation.

A top covered with tar paper is then placed over the box. An opening is provided for the bees to pass in and out at the bottom of the box, and where feeding in winter is necessary the top of the box can be lifted and a jar of sirup set on the hives.

If the season is favorable they expect to harvest 12,000 pounds of honey at the Smith-Holmes apiary this summer. These two men started out with a small investment three years ago, and they are planning to enlarge their operations and devote their entire time to beekeeping within the next few years.

$3 will take the Chatter out of Your Ford without renewing linings

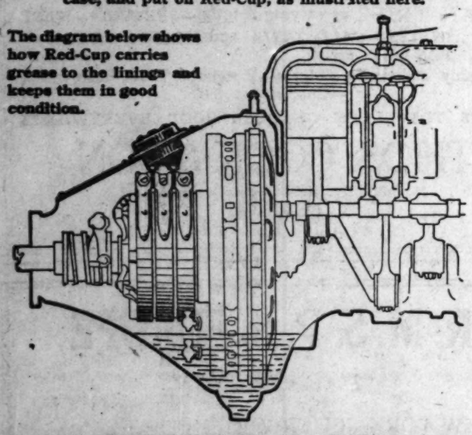
Just remove the old plate from the top of your transmission case, and put on Red-Cup, as illustrated here.

The diagram below shows how Red-Cup carries grease to the linings and keeps them in good condition.



All your old linings need —is grease!

But not too much grease

Expert repairmen will put grease on your bands to stop the chatter. Others will try to sell you new linings. Both operations are now an unnecessary expense because Red-Cup will feed your linings with just enough grease to make your old linings last three times as long as ordinarily. No mechanical knowledge or help is required to install Red-Cup. A Red-Cup, a screw-driver and ten minutes of your time makes your Ford chatter-less.

Red-Cup

does not dump large amounts of grease into your engine to interfere in any way with the oil-holes or drains. Just enough grease is fed at a twist of the wrist to keep all three linings pliable, yet firm; lubricated, but not drippingly so. With the Red-Cup in your Ford the repairman's bills are minimized—chatter is eliminated and comfortable starting and stopping are assured.

MONEY BACK when you send $3 in with the corner coupon of this page, you get a Red-Cup—complete and ready for installation—by return mail. This Red-Cup must perform to your satisfaction and do the things it is made and advertised to do. If not, you get your MONEY BACK—right on the dot.

At last—a simple, practical cure for chatter!

Any Ford owner can apply a Red-Cup in ten minutes, using only a screw-driver. Red-Cup will eliminate the chatter, revive your old linings, make starting a comfort and quick stopping both smooth and safe. Do not re-line your transmission bands—just send three dollars with the coupon below for a guaranteed, "money-back" Red-Cup and enjoy smooth driving at once.

Don't blame that Chat-tat-tat-tat-chatter on your Ford

It's the Linings

All that chatter which shakes and quakes your Ford when starting and stopping is caused by the glazed condition of the transmission linings, due to usage plus inadequate lubrication. Those linings need grease!

Grease—Not Oil

The engine oil-splash is too light to be held in the fabric linings under pedal pressure and is squeezed out, leaving a hard lining surface which snaps at the revolving drums instead of applying a smooth, even pressure. Thus, the chatter. Grease—just enough to keep the linings soft, but firm—is needed!

Red-Cup Does It

Red-Cup is a device of simple construction that fits on the top of your transmission casing in place of the regular Ford plate of similar shape, and distributes a scientifically correct amount of grease to each of the three transmission drums. At a twist of the wrist, this grease is distributed to the fabric lining and is held there regardless of pressure, thus providing a steady even grasp of the drums when band pressure is applied. The hard, glazed surface is gone—and the chatter with it.

You put a Red-Cup in without mechanical help

New linings are expensive and only stop the chatter for a week or two. Red-Cup keeps your old linings useful three or four times as long as they would ordinarily last—and can be installed by you with only a screw-driver, in ten minutes. No waiting a day or two for your Ford while it is being re-lined. Your three dollars brings the Red-Cup complete for installing in your Ford and ready to operate.

Red-Cup and Grease—then complete Ford comfort

After you have installed the grease filled Red-Cup (any heavy cup-grease except graphite grease will do) give the thumb screw-cap a twist as instructed by the card enclosed with the Red-Cup, hop into your Ford and start off. The effect will be magical and a day's driving will prove to you that chatter is not a necessary Ford evil. As months go by and your linings last, and last, and last—your three dollar investment in driving comfort will pay big dividends in actual money saved. Send the attached coupon today. If dissatisfied with your purchase in any way, your money will be refunded gladly—at once.

THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy

ILLUSTRATIONS by J.H. STREBEL

The Family Council on Oil.

PROLOGUE.

"Man wants but little here below," says the poet, forgetting to add, "but what he gets is less." And Pa Potter, being a man like the rest of us, doesn't want much . . . say a few hundred thousand dollars—only a few—a house or so . . . an auto or two . . . clothes . . . clubs . . . just a few things like that . . . and they are not so far off. either . . . none of your Spanish castles for Pa . . . oil leases—in Tennessee—that's Pa's dish . . . stand by for the oil leases . . . are you ready? . . . Up with the curtain . . . Ta da!

Scene—Living Room in the Potter Flat.

The family are gathered around Pa this evening having a little skull session on oil leases. Demandes au père, as Carpentier would say, il a suit.

BILL: What's the news on the leases, dad?
Slip us the latest dispatches you've had.

MAMIE: "Slip us" is good—you sure talk swell.

BILL: Now what's got into our little Nell?
You don't have to tell me what to say.
How in the deuce do you get that way?

MA: Now, children, it won't do to fuss—
We've got a millionaire with us . . .
He's got so many things to do
He can't be bothered now with you.

PA: Who d'ye think you're trying to kid?
You've never believed in a thing I did.
If you heard what I heard from the bunch this noon
You'd sing an entirely different tune.

MA: I suppose some one started to plow the ground
And the oil shot out and spread all around,
And the leases you bought are worth ten time more—
Don't tell me that story . . . I've heard it before.

PA: There isn't much that you don't know,
To hear you tell it—ain't it so?
And yet it may surprise you some
To learn I ain't exactly dumb.
Today when I went out to lunch
I met the syndicating bunch,

"Today when I went out to lunch . . . "

And one of them says, "They're going to drill
Some wells for us." . . . I says, "Who will?"
And they says, well, that is a secret yet,
But they've started to drill, and don't forget—
If they make a strike . . . hot dog! hot cat!
We'll roll in the dough . . . whaddye think of that?

"Rave on, rave on—see if I care."

MAMIE: I hope they strike some oil down there;
Maybe I'd get some clothes to wear.

BILL: Whaddye want with clothes, old dear?
All you cover is just your ear.

MA: Now, Bill, you mustn't be so smart.

PA: Stop the battling . . . have a heart!

MA: If we wait for oil till we get new clothes,
We'll never have them, goodness knows . . .
Oil . . . ha! ha! . . . the old, old stuff—
To think you'd fall for all that guff!
"They're going to drill a well," says you;
Well, let 'em drill it . . . s'pose they do—
What's one more well? Just one more hole.
Pa's in his dotage . . . poor old soul!

PA: Rave on, rave on—see if I care,
But if they strike some oil down there
'Twill do me good at least to know
You cannot say, "I told you so."

BILL: How soon will you know if they strike a well?

MAMIE: S'pose they strike it, how can you tell?

PA: They'll send me a telegram right away;
I'm looking for one most any old day.

MA: Don't strain your eyes . . . the wire you'll get
Will be, "Send more money . . . we're drilling yet."

(He is the original optimistic pessimist . . . she wouldn't believe they struck oil on Pa's leased land, even if they sent her a sample of it . . . no faith in humanity—that's Ma all over . . . But Bill and Mamie are young and full of vim, vigor, and trustfulness . . . They still have comparatively soft fontanelles and are a bit modest behind the ears . . . their hopes are green and tender like asparagus and shoot up overnight like the succulent mushroom . . . as for Pa—Pa's faith is the kind that moves mountains—and drills oil wells.)

(Telephone rings.)

PA: Answer the phone, Bill.

MAMIE: That's for me.

MA: I think it's for me.

MAMIE: I know it's for me;
Joe said he would call, and he did, you see.

PA: Well, answer the phone.

BILL: It may be for me.

MAMIE: I said it's for me; you let it alone.

PA: (Ring . . . ring) Go answer the phone!

BILL: All right, then, I will.

MAMIE: You let it alone;
I said it's for me—I'll answer the phone.

(Ring . . . ring . . . ring)

PA: Well, go on and do it.

BILL: I think it's for me.

MAMIE: I know it's for me—you let it alone.

PA: Great Jehoshaphat! Answer the phone!

MAMIE: Hello . . . hello . . . yes, this is the Potters' apartment . . . is that you, Joe? . . . O! . . . excuse me . . . who did you want to speak to? . . . Mr. Potter? . . . I'll see; just a minute . . . who wants to speak to him? . . . O, yes. I'll call him right away . . .
It's the telegraph company, Pa . . . they say
They want to talk to you right away.

PA: I wonder what it is.

MA: I bet it's from your oil well, something like this: "We're still digging . . . will you please dig some more youself?"

"Pinch me . . . WHEE! WHAM!"

"Don't tell me that story . . . I've heard it before."

PA: Maybe they struck oil.

BILL: O, boy, wouldn't that be the berries!

MAMIE: Hey, Pa . . . maybe it's oil.

MA: Oil . . . ha! ha! . . . maybe it's gooseberries.

PA (taking up receiver in his trembling hands.):
Yes . . . yes . . . this is Mr. Potter . . . Peter E. Potter . . . yes . . . a telegram. Read it to me . . .

MAMIE: We could move into a swell apartment, couldn't we?

BILL: And I'd get a roadster . . . hot dog!

MA: We hear ducks in Jersey. Oil . . . if you want to see oil, go and look in my sewing machine . . . that's as close as you'll ever get to it.

PA (on telephone):
Yes . . . I'm listening . . . WHAT! "Struck oil at three thousand feet . . . ten thousand barrels a day . . . "
(Drops receiver.)
WHEE! WHAM! What did I tell you, Ma—did you hear that? Oil . . . they struck oil . . . We're off!

MA: We're off? You mean you're off, my dear.

MAMIE: But, Ma, they've struck it . . . can't you hear?

BILL: Well, maybe I'll get that dress suit now.

PA (babbling wildly):
Struck barrels at ten thousand oil a day . . . ten thousand day at three thousand barrels . . . struck barrels at oil a day . . . Pinch me . . . WHEE! WHAM!

MA (dubiously):
Well, mebbe so . . . but I dunno!

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

Do You Buy a Motor Car "Sight Unseen?"

You see the vital aspect of a car only by the way long, hard service affects it.

Will it become loose and noisy? Grow wasteful of oil and fuel? Lose efficiency? Require replacements, frequent repairs and adjustments? Or will it remain free of these disabilities?

There is a Simple Way to Tell

Not by a mere salesroom examination. That cannot show many of the differences which make some cars continue to serve reliably and economically for years. It cannot show all the superiorities of mechanical design, nor the painstaking workmanship on details that in all likelihood you will never see.

And even a demonstration tells nothing of how a car will wear in steady service.

But it is easy to find and examine the real proofs.

What have cars of the same make shown over a period of years?

What is the future expectancy of good service from such cars after twenty or thirty thousand miles?

You have the all-important advantage of being able to ask owners. Make use of it. Find out how the car you are thinking of buying has served other owners. Learn what mileage they get on gasoline, oil and tires. Is the second or the third 10,000 miles more costly than the first? Is it just as satisfactory in performance? Would that owner buy another car of the same make?

Of course there are basic reasons why Essex differs from other light cars—why owners compare it to costly cars.

And we will be glad of an early opportunity to explain the many points of advantage that only costly cars share with Essex.

He Asked 10 Owners

"This spring when I was looking for a car I was undecided just what to buy. I liked the appearance of the Essex—liked its ability to step by the higher priced cars—liked its manner of easy performance and comfort.

"The car gave perfect demonstration but I wanted to find out what an owner would have to say about it. I stopped ten different Essex owners and asked them how they liked their cars and what service they were getting and how long they had been driving them, etc.

"Every owner was a booster. These cars had been driven from ten days to eleven months. They were so enthusiastic I could hardly wait until my car was delivered to see if what they said was true. My car is sure a 'whiz' and I have had no trouble with it whatsoever."

Surely You Must Have Noticed the constantly increasing number of Auburn cars on the streets of your city.

Every one of those cars was sold in straight competition. The owners of those cars could have bought any other car in Auburn's price class—perhaps higher. But they bought Auburns—and for the same reasons you, too, will buy an Auburn.

You will look at other cars offered and you will be forced to admit that even at their lately reduced prices you just simply can not equal Auburn value, at Auburn's new low prices.

You can't get any other car of Auburn's size with Auburn's nationally known Continental 7R Red Seal Motor, and Auburn's general design and construction—at $1695.

Such a car isn't built. So if you really want a car in this price class—

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Lean Years of War Still Felt in Our Modes and Menus

By Mme. X.

WITH a sigh of relief the world which amuses itself settles back into the pleasant round of give and take hospitality which marks summer life in and about Chicago. Have you noticed the permanent change effected in our manner of entertaining by those lean and healthy years of warfare? War fare still continues in our menus to a marked degree.

The hostess who provides many courses, such as was our idea of true hospitality seven years ago, is apt to be criticized today. A dinner of four or five courses is the extreme of sumptuousness, while many a charming meal has only the traditional soup, meat, and either salad or dessert. The still well equipped offer both cocktails and one wine, but where are the variety of vintages which once made a cluster of wineglasses at each place a necessity?

Another custom which is an outcrop of the careful wartimes is that which has abolished the old fashioned damask tablecloth, lustrous and gleaming, and replaced it by the fine lace and embroidered doilies and table stripes which now adorn most tables. These, while expensive in themselves, make the laundress' problem much easier.

With the big tablecloths have gone candle shades, great masses of flowers, and the many silver dishes which meant so much elbow grease in times when domestic labor was hard to get. Rich lace, unshaded candles (either black or the color of the room), some rare bits of Chinese or French porcelain, and either a dish of artificial fruit or a few flowers arranged à la Japonaise, there you have a modern table.

Culinary Triumph in Vain.

We have all grown wiser in the matter of diet. The succession of meat dishes, which were considered necessary a quarter of a century ago, is almost unknown in even the most formal dinners nowadays. It would be a benighted hostess who would offer her dinner guests a hors d'oeuvres, oysters, soup, fish, entrée, roast, game, salad, pudding, ices, fruit, and coffee, escorted by cocktails, sherry, claret, champagne, and liqueurs, and yet that was the customary feast of the '30s and '90s of the last century.

And the guests of that epoch ate and drank heartily of what was set before them. They were a different race from their descendants or successors.

The modern hostess is often sorely tried by finding that half her guests are on some sort of strange diet which sends many of her culinary triumphs away hardly tasted. Asthma, too low or too high blood pressure, dyspepsia, rheumatism, neuritis, too much or too little thyroid, and, above all, that most distressing of maladies, surplus adipose tissue, are all considered amenable to certain kinds of restricted diet.

And, as almost every one has one or more of these troubles, specially among the fair and, shall we say fussy, sex, it is no easy task to provide an acceptable repast for a company of dieteers. Our ancestors knew naught of these things, and lived more carefree, if somewhat shorter, lives than their descendants are likely to enjoy.

Medieval Pomp and Ceremony.

In some directions the war seems to have accomplished little. Over in what we fondly think of as democratic and enlightened France they still cherish ancient customs and manners, the musty fungus growth of destroyed autocracies. Last spring in Paris, for instance, at the "Cercle Nautique" (the Yacht club), of which the Grand Duke Michael is a member and a constant attendant, a party of Americans, in which were some well known Chicagoans, started to go out to the club dining room for dinner, when the steward halted them saying:

"No one may go out until the grand duke leads the way," and he waved his hand towards a corner of the salon where the last remnant of the abolished Romanoffs was holding a miniature court. Great and bediamoned dames were curtseying deeply, and gallant men were bowing and scraping, to the brave Russian, who, as far as we know, never took any prominent rôle in the great war. Nor were the members of the club permitted to leave the dining room, even when they were going to the theater, until the grand duke and his wife, the Countess Torby, made the first move.

It is rather sickening to think that this sort of thing is still going on over there. He was never a very royal personage, having voluntarily forfeited all claim to such consideration when he married the granddaughter of the Russian poet, Pushkin. And what is left today of the imperial Romanoffs, or, for that matter, of any of the European royalties?

It would have been a courageous and not unseemly thing for the Americans to have persisted quietly, but firmly, on their rights as members of the club. Such manifestations of pomp and ceremony seem medieval in the light of the embers of 1914-1918, especially in republican France. The Grand Duke Michael is about as important as the Russian rouble today, with this difference, that the latter may rise in value, while he never will.

It seems as if it took more than a world war to destroy the tribe of curtseying sycophants. They probably weren't on the Chemins des Dames or at Verdun.

Burn a field of wheat and what comes up first? Weeds.

Chinese Fete Abandoned.

What troublesome creatures those Chinese are! First they are starving and then, just as we get well organized to provide them with food, they bob up with a good harvest and our schemes are halted with a jolt that hurts.

The Chinese fete which Mrs. William J. Calhoun and her staff of workers was organizing for June 22 at the Casino is abandoned. One entertainment, however, was too far advanced to be thus given up.

Next Friday afternoon at the Garrick theater the well known actress, Lynn Fontaine, will present Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank's play, "Only the Fair," a one act piece. Others on the program are the Howard Brothers and Sam White of the "Passing Show," Esther Howard and Dan Healy of "The Sweetheart Shop," and Mr. Koniloff in a special Chinese ballet. The Chinese orchestra from Chinatown and a three act Chinese play will give a Chinese luster to the entertainment.

Other artists contributing their talents are Doris Keane and Laurette Taylor. Boxes and seats have already been taken by Mesdames Arthur Meeker, F. D. Stout, Hamilton McCormick, Moses Wentworth, F. T. Brown, Jacob Baur, Robert Peacock, J. G. Coleman, Kellogg Fairbank, Morris Rosenwald, Edward Hines, Ogden McClurg, E. R. Litsinger, Malcolm Caruthers, Chauncey McCormick, and Arthur Curren, and by Eames MacVeagh and, C. C. Pitmorris.

A Country Fair in Evanston.

There are to be great doings in Evanston soon. On June 23 the Evanston county fair opens in the Patten gymnasium on Sheridan road and will summon the world in search of pleasure to inspect its many features. To the blare of big brass bands you will be able to watch Japanese jugglers juggle, ride on the wildest and safest merry-go-round that ever whirled one out of realities, or behold trained dogs caper about. Over 500 women are preparing this feast of simple human joys. There will be homely contests in cake and bread making and in whose baby is the finest specimen. Also, whose cat or dog is the real blue ribbon article.

If these do not interest you, the dancing in the Chinese tea-room may take your fancy. In this tearoom well known maids and matrons dressed in wonderful Chinese costumes will serve you food and drink.

So great is the undertaking that one chairman was not sufficient to cope with it, and the three who are managing it are the Mesdames Charles G. Little, John Towne, and Edward P. Welles. Miss Estelle Ward is head of the finance committee, and three beneficiaries will watch with interest the success of the affair. These are the Northwestern University settlement, the Evanston King's Daughters, and St. Mark's guild, of which the Rev. Arthur Rogers is pastor. As the Patten gymnasium is on the most traveled highway in the west, and as the admission is only 25 cents, the Evanston county fair ought to be crowded from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. It will be open the 23d, 24th, and 25th of June.

Departure of the Marshall Fields.

There is much debate as to whether the Marshall Fields will return to Chicago for more than temporary sojourns. They have given up their apartment at 1200 Lake Shore drive and dispersed their household furnishings, which looks ominous. It seems not improbable that they will not have a home here any longer. Mrs. Field is a New Yorker, and has spent much of her life in Europe. Her relatives, friends, and interests are either in New York or on the other side of the Atlantic.

Chicago, it must be admitted, is an acquired taste for many folk not born here. They do not sense the poetry and romance of our western metropolis. They know nothing of its history. They cannot see those great French pioneers who first came here in the seventeenth century, the flower of France, and saw the infinite possibilities of our site. [It was Joliet who first suggested the present drainage canal.] They have no knowledge of the still greater Anglo-Saxon world builders who founded and reared the city.

To non-Chicagoans there is no continuity of history from the frontier times of a bare century ago down to the present era which sees us the fourth city in point of population in the world today. There is to them no splendor in our incessant activity and untiring ambition. They only see in us a dingy, smoke laden community of workers, with little of the ripe culture which gives older cities a mellow glow. They perceive only the raw quality of our lake winds and our society, not the wholesome, lifa giving vigor of both.

Don't let us be discouraged by such lack of appreciation. Let us rather beware of the time which will inevitably come to so powerful and rich a community when the effete, idle, pleasure lovers will seek us out to supply their wants. That will mark the beginning of our decadence, not our climb towards light.

Active in Philanthropic Work.

The going of the young Fields, however, is a distinct loss to the city. Capt. Field made one of the notable records of the war when he enlisted as a private and by his own merits was promoted through various stages to his captaincy. His continued interest in the soldiers after the armistice was a fine example to the rest of us. In other directions also he proved his good citizenship.

Nor was his wife behind him in her practical efforts to help in various lines of philanthropic work. Among the already established enterprises which she benefited in one way or another were the Country Home for Convalescent Crippled Children, the Boys' Boyhood Republic, the Illinois Home and Aid society, and the Casa Maria Presidential club for girls.

To the latter she was a veritable fairy godmother, giving to it much time as well as money and things which enabled it to open its doors at 411 West Oak street this week to help solve one of the most pressing problems of this city, the providing of wholesome and attractive homes for working girls.

They flock to Chicago from all parts of the country. Every year scores of them become submerged in the torrent of fierce humanity, disappear, and are never heard of again by their families. Those who have such a haven as is provided by such homes as this one and by similar institutions like the Eleanor clubs, the Y. W. C. A., the Girls' Friendly society, and the Salvation Army homes have a better chance to become useful, happy wage earners, wives, mothers, or whatever else fate has in store for them, than if they are left to dreary lodging houses.

So to Mrs. Marshall Field III. this large and important class will owe much in the years to come. We only hope that some time she may return to the city where the name Marshall Field has so much significance.

A Wedding at Melody Farm.

The marriage next Saturday afternoon of Miss Lolita Armour, only child of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, to John James Mitchell Jr., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell, is of great interest to Chicagoans, uniting, as it does, two of our most prominent families. The ceremony will take place at the Armour country seat in Lake Forest, Melody Farm, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. A special train will bring town guests out, leaving the Union station at 2:45 p. m., standard time.

Miss Armour is one of the most popular members of the younger set, where she is noted for her gentle, charming manners and her real sweetness of character. Young "Jack" Mitchell, too, is well liked by those who know him. He had a good war record, where he went in for aviation.

Melody Farm is one of the show places on the north shore, and will provide a wonderful setting for the wedding. Mrs. Armour has a real genius for decoration and creating beautiful surroundings, so it is safe to predict that the Armour-Mitchell wedding will be a memorable occasion.

Another marriage of interest to the older generation of Chicagoans is that of William Deering Howe, son of Richard Howe and grandson of the late William Deering, of Chicago and Evanston, to Miss Polly Brooks, daughter of Mrs. John Chauncey Brooks, which will take place at St. Thomas' church, New York, June 27, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The bridegroom is of an old and prominent Chicago family, his mother, Mrs. Abbie Deering Howe, having been one of the loveliest women of her day. Her untimely death occurred nearly 20 years ago, and so affected her husband, popular "Dick" Howe, that, his health failing, he ultimately broke up his home here and went east to live. His son was brought up by Mr. Howe's aunt, Miss Grace Howe, a remarkable woman, unusually cultivated and liberal in spirit. She died at a ripe age about two years ago.

Will Live in Wales.

Another wedding of interest to Chicagoans was that which was celebrated yesterday when Miss Marion Sturges Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hamline Scott, was married to Capt. Julian Alfred Soames, an English officer. The bride's godmother, Mrs. Samuel Dauchy, gave her house at 11 Hawthorne place, for the wedding breakfast.

An especial halo of romance is given to the marriage because the bridegroom, who made a fine record in the great war, lost a leg in one of the big battles. Such a distinguished badge of courage will always be honored as long as any one of us who lived through those four years of conflict has memory. The bridal couple will make their home in Wrexham, North Wales.

Still another wedding in an old Chicago family is that of Miss Mary Elizabeth Leonard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Leonard, to Hibbard Casselberry, which is set for Saturday afternoon, June 25, at Winnetka, the home of the Leonards. The bridegroom is a grandson of one of our best known pioneers, the late William G. Hibbard, one of the founders of the

MRS OSCAR GODFREY LUNDBERG

An interesting announcement of last week, which came as a surprise to Chicago society, was that of the marriage of Miss Eleanor Jewett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel R. Jewett of 1317 North State street, and Oscar Godfrey Lundberg. The wedding took place on Wednesday at the Fourth Presbyterian church, the Rev. John Timothy Stone officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Gallery of 79 East Elm street announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Marian, to William Gerard McNulty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Joseph McNulty of 627 Melrose street.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Sunset League's Camp for Girls to Open June 28

THE Sunset Camp Service league will reopen its summer camp for girls on June 28. Since its inception in 1915 the camp has grown steadily each year until it has doubled its quota. This spring the league has secured a state charter for the camp, so that now the Sunset Service Camp league is an incorporated organization. The camp is situated on Diamond lake, near Area, Ill., about forty miles from Chicago. It will be open from June 28 to Sept. 6.

Last year 200 girls between the ages of 14 and 18 were given vacations. There were five groups, each remaining for two weeks. The girls were recommended by Jewish social service agencies. At present the league has from 500 to 600 members.

One of the principles is not in any case to raise money by drives or benefit performances. The camp is entirely supported by the league membership dues, direct contributions, and special funds, including memorial and cot endowment funds. From a fund given in memory of Arthur Spiegel the Scholarship Association for Jewish Children created the maintenance of a portable house. This year Joseph N. Elsendath, in memory of his daughter, Louise E. Nathan, gave a fund to maintain another portable house.

In addition to these two portable houses the camp consists of a good sized farm and a large, rambling farmhouse attractively situated. Under supervision, all sorts of diversions and good times are provided for the children. Rowing, swimming, hiking, baseball, hay rides, dancing, and amateur dramatics are the main amusements. All of the camp directors are social and recreational workers from Carnegie institute, Pittsburgh.

As the number of houses has been increased extra supervisors have been taken. This year there will also be a dietician. The league has always been most fortunate in the selection of camp supervisors—they are young, well trained, and have high standards.

The splendid results accomplished by the camp show the great need for all that it offers. Girls who otherwise could only know the hot city streets, the sordid life in tenements, the strain of working in factories, are given a vacation. Besides the great physical benefits derived from wholesome food and fresh air, the camp life gives these young girls new vistas, broader outlooks, and better diversions. Moreover, contact with the great outdoors must ultimately make them much worthier citizens.

The officers of the camp are: President, Miss Juliette Pollak; first vice president, Mrs. A. M. Rosenthal; second vice president, Miss Ella Kahn; treasurer, Mrs. Edgar Greenebaum; corresponding secretary, Miss Amy Rosenberg; recording secretary, Mrs. Edward Sonnenschein.

MRS. CHARLES S. BIGELOW

MRS. WILLIAM S. MONROE

At the recent annual meeting of the Women's league club Mrs. Charles S. Bigelow was elected president for the ensuing year. The club, though comparatively young, is rapidly making for itself a prominent place in the civic and social life of business and professional women. The other officers are: Mrs. John L. Stoecy, Mrs. Archibald Freer, and Miss Flora J. Cooke, vice presidents; Mrs. Alice Austrian, social secretary; Mrs. Alice M. Carr, recording secretary; Miss Alice L. Nichols, treasurer; Mrs. Minnie Starr Goodwin, parliamentarian.

Mrs. William S. Monroe has been an active worker on the Chicago committee of the China famine fund, which has been making an intensive drive for funds to meet the emergent need for food among the starving people of China. Mrs. William J. Calhoun, whose late husband was formerly American minister to China, has been an able leader of the committee through her knowledge of conditions over there and her deep sympathy for and understanding of the Chinese people. Plans for several benefits to have been given for the fund were summarily concluded last week by cablegrams announcing the discontinuance of the campaign owing to the fact that large contributions from Chinese people and abundant rains had caused a radical change in the situation.

A Boost for Darwin

By Guy Lee.

It is Bryan's firm opinion
That the theory Darwinian
Is false—he says we didn't spring from monks.
He's a gentleman and scholar
And he has a pleasing holler
That brings him joy in plaudits and in plunks.

But if proof lies in reversion
I am fixed to cast aspersion
On the Commoner's idea, for you see
I'm experienced: the beauty
That I squire: my sweet patootie,
Most surely makes a monkey out of me!

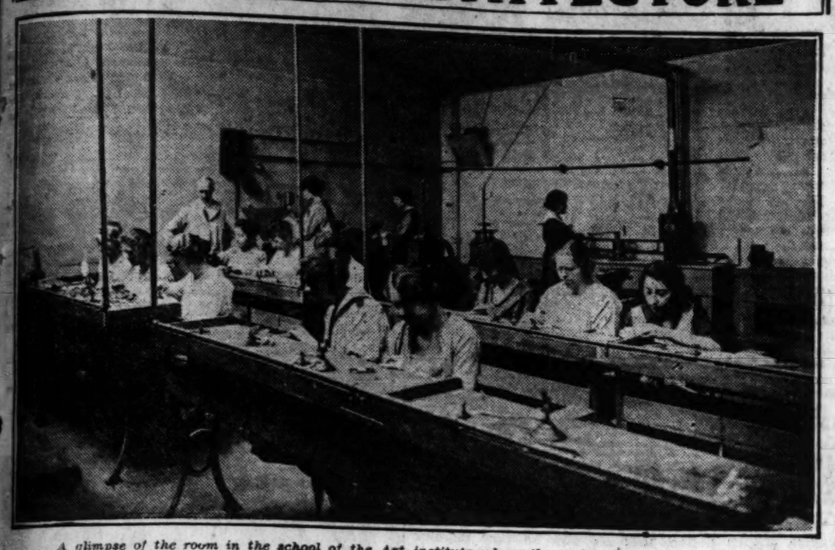
ART AND ARCHITECTURE



A glimpse of the room in the school of the Art institute where the making of jewelry is being taught. This new development is but one of many to improve our industrial art. Given the old Field museum for headquarters, Chicago would have a school in industrial art second to none the world over.

Eggshell Art of Czecho-Slovakia Is Worth Inspection

By Eleanor Jewett.

ONE of the most curious exhibits ever dignified by being placed on view in the halls of the Art institute is that which now rules over the narrow gallery leading across Blackstone hall into Gunsaulus hall. The exhibit is housed in two cases, but, small as it is, the oddity of it makes up for what it loses in size, were it to be compared to other exhibitions that have from time to time graced those walls. A note calling attention to it calls it "the eggshell art of Czecho-Slovakia."

The following account of the history of the development of this now recognized "eggshell" art is interesting. It seems that Czecho-Slovakia is made up of four provinces: Czechy (the old Bohemia), Slovakia, Moravia, and Silesia. Of these Slovakia and Moravia are important for a beautiful peasant art which has been practiced by the peasant women for generations.

In their moments of leisure after their ordinary farm and house work is finished, these women work on fine linens and produce really wonderful cloths and laces and embroideries of great beauty. They also paint decorations on the walls of their homes, inside and out, and they paint—or rather they dye—Easter eggs. It is a collection of these eggs which is now on view at the institute.

In all their art work they use the same art units. That is to say, a study of the Easter eggs will give a correct idea of the patterns of the laces and embroideries which they manufacture, and even of their large wall decorations. They use these art units in an endless series of different combinations. They never copy a pattern. In going through many thousands of the eggs it is exceedingly rare to find even two alike, the variety of their patterns seems infinite.

"These women do not draw their designs. They write them. And, more remarkable, they write them free hand. They paint furniture in the same way. They put on their murals in the same way. Generations of practice have given them an amazing skill in solving instantly the problem of filling a given space to the most beautiful and adequate advantage.

The Easter eggs are decorated in a number of ways. Generally speaking, the process is like batiking and etching. The egg is first covered with wax. Then the design is outlined and the background space is scraped off with a knife blade, or, more usually, a little wooden tool of home manufacture. It is interesting to note here that all the drawing on the egg is done on the wax with this little tool. The egg is then dipped in the background dye and again covered with wax.

That part of the design to be filled in with one color is then scraped off. The egg is dipped in what is now the third color, waxed again, and so on until all the colors have been applied. This is often a delicate and tedious operation, for these women are not content with a sketchy pattern and few colors. Their designs are elaborate and the colors as many as are found in oriental rugs and Turkish shawls.

The white outlines in most of the designs, which look like the natural eggshell, are applied last. These lines are etched on by scraping away the wax and dipping the tool in hydrofluoric acid. For all these dippings the women apparently use nothing more complicated than an ordinary spoon.

In the old Easter customs, many of which were survivals of a period antedating Christianity, eggs were one of the things carried to church on Easter Sunday to be blessed. The blessed eggs were highly prized, and eating them was something of a ceremony. For this reason the people began to decorate them, simply at first, then more elaborately. At last the decorations became so important that, instead of destroying the shell to eat the eggs, the egg was saved for the sake of the shell. The last step in the art was taken when the women began to use the blown shell for decorating purposes, instead of the hardboiled egg.

In Czecho-Slovakia these decorated eggs are now used as we use Easter eggs—namely: to celebrate the day, but they are used also in other ways. The young girls use them as love tokens. On Easter Monday the custom is for the village youths to take switches of larch and go about striking—gently, we trust—when they can, the girl of their choice. In response the girls are supposed to slip Easter eggs into the hands of the youths they prefer.

Knowing all this makes an inspection of this fanciful art more entertaining, but so attractive are the eggs in their complicated beauty that, to tell the honest truth, nothing more than the mere statement of their presence in the bridge passage to Gunsaulus hall should be necessary to induce every one to flock to see them. They are worth looking at.

One of the most interesting adjuncts to the school of the Art institute is the little class in jewelry to be found on various days throughout the week at work in room 136. The department has been opened only a few weeks. It was started the first of April, but so valuable is itp roving that it will be conable is it proving that it will be conand started again with fresh energy in the fall.

People realize too little that the school of the Art institute teaches things other than painting and sculpture. There is a three years' normal course in which the first year only is devoted to art in general; the second and last terms are given over to greater degree to specialization. The school has a large weaving equipment, and a special instructor brought from Europe is to be in charge of that department next winter.

The course in pottery is excellent. For this work, too, the normal school has splendid equipment. Another special teacher, brought from Europe, where these industrial arts flourish with greater vigor than with us, is to carry on this work next year. There are also courses in woodwork, and other work with various textiles, including a remarkable training in stitching that includes all types of hemming taught in the public schools, and of sewing.

Mary C. Scovel is the head of the normal department of the art school. She is assistant (in the jewelry class) to James H. Winn, who has taken over the instruction of this work. Mr. Winn probably stands in the first place in this country as the best craftsman of his trade that we can boast. His work is skillful, his designs beautiful, his completed jewelry lovely to look at and to own. In the institute course he teaches the technical processes connected with the making of jewelry by hand. He instructs in the various necessary steps of sawing, soldering, engraving, and enameling.

Emphasis should be placed upon this work, and in fact upon all the work undertaken by the normal school in its efforts to encourage industrial art in America, because it is just such kind of work that we need in our commercial field. Every one probably is weary of hearing it repeated, over and over and over, that Germany has industrial art schools, France has industrial art schools, England has industrial art schools—and we, America, have none. This is not the fact. It is true that ours are not many in number, nor conspicuous in their extent, but we have some industrial art schools. Through-

Corsets—and the Present Poiret "Tempest in a Teapot"

Third Floor—Dearborn Street.

Poiret in Paris last week asked whether women should wear corsets—just which small class of women, or what particular type of corset did he have in mind? But we believe that most women should wear corsets, because there are so few women who even approximate physical perfection of health; an intelligently selected corset can do more to aid, and many Nemo models even to cure, certain physical defects than any other one thing. There is an irresistible attractiveness about a women who gives the impression of both style and health—she has a magnetism that communicates itself through her personality.

The woman who wears a Nemo Corset is not shapeless, as Poiret says, nor is she the least bit uncomfortable: "She realizes that her body and its needs are as individual as her mind, and requires the same individual cultivation and attention. She studies the kind of corset she wears and knows she must be fitted.

The woman who dresses smartly and sanely, rides a horse, drives a car, works in the garden, dances and is fit the next morning to attend to her daily duties, wears a corset, and a good one—is fitted to it because it keeps her young, helps her muscles support her body, carries the strain, gives her symmetrical lines.

It is not to be expected that all women can study and personally know how to select and choose the corset that is scientifically right for their individual needs, and because so many women realize that fact, our corsetieres are always so busy. Each of our Corsetieres is a graduate of the "N. H. F. I." of New York and is especially trained in all the latest hygienic fitting methods—(no charge for fitting services). NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

86,700 Attended Sunday Evening Club Last Season

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

ANTHONY MATRE K.S.G. MOFFETT PHOTO.

ONE of the most successful seasons in the fourteen years' history of the Sunday Evening club came to a close last month when the secretary, John W. O'Leary, reported an aggregate attendance of 86,700 persons at the Sunday evening services held in Orchestra hall from October, 1920, to June, 1921, an average of 2,500 attendance at the 8 o'clock service and an average of 2,175 present at the 7 o'clock Bible talk and song service led by the president of the club, Clifford W. Barnes.

Among the prominent speakers who were brought to Chicago from all parts of the world to address capacity audiences in Orchestra hall on Sunday evenings were T. Rhondda Williams of London, Gen. Robert Nivelle of Verdun, Maria Jacobson of Armenia, Dr. Minakuchi from Japan, Gov. Charles E. Millikin of Maine, Dr. Edward A. Steiner, Bishop William F. McDowell of Washington, Dr. Henry Van Dyke, Raymond B. Fosdick, Fred B. Smith, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, and the Rt. Rev. James Wise, D. D., Episcopal bishop of Kansas. Well known Chicago clergymen were also among the speakers of the past season, including the Rev. Frederick F. Shannon and the Rt. Rev. C. P. Anderson, D. D., Episcopal bishop of Chicago.

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the Sunday Evening club held several weeks ago the officers of the past year were reelected for a term of three years from May 31, 1921: President, Clifford W. Barnes, founder of the Sunday Evening club; first vice president, Harry A. Wheeler; vice presidents, John G. Shedd, John T. Pirie, Charles L. Hutchinson, and Richard C. Hall; secretary, John W. O'Leary; and treasurer, Solomon A. Smith.

Eleven trustees whose terms of office had expired were elected for three years: Clifford W. Barnes, William C. Boyden, J. Lewis Cochran, Jacob M. Dickinson, Chauncey Keep, Cyrus H. McCormick Jr., John W. O'Leary, George M. Reynolds, Solomon A. Smith, Elmer T. Stevens, and John S. Brooksmit.

The Sunday Evening club robed choir of 100 men and women, under the direction of Edgar A. Nelson, with the quartet of soloists, Rose Lutiger Gannon, Mabel Sharp Herdien, John B. Miller, and Gustave A. Holmquist; Stanley Martin, organist; and Harry T. Carlson, accompanist, has added greatly to the success of the past season. Beginning fourteen years ago with a few volunteer singers, the choir now consists of the best professional and amateur voices in the city, and is the largest organization of paid singers in Chicago, on a par with the best choral societies.

Recent appointments among the Roman Catholic clergy of the archdiocese of Chicago were announced last week by the Most Rev. George W. Mundelein as follows: The Rev. E. L. Donaldville, to be pastor of the Maternity of the Blessed Virgin Mary church, North and Monticello avenues; the Rev. T. H. Sheridan, pastor of St. John's church, 18th and Clark streets; the Rev. Philip L. Furlong, pastor of Ascension church, Harvey, Ill.; and the Rev. James P. Canell, pastor of St. Bernard's church, Ridgewood, Ill. Half a dozen changes among assistant priests were also announced.

Christ church, Woodlawn, welcomes back its former rector for so many years, the Rev. Charles Herbert Young, M. A., now rector of Howe school, at the 11 o'clock celebration of the holy communion this morning, when he will be the special preacher. Father Young will also be present at the choral evensong and festival service at 7:45 o'clock this evening, when the combined choirs of Christ church and Trinity church, 126 East 26th street, will render the musical part of the service.

Anthony Matre, K. S. G., internationally known Roman Catholic dramatist and lecturer of Chicago, who was recently made a papal Knight of Saint Gregory, has just submitted the first annual report of the lecture bureau of the archdiocesan union of the Holy Name society, of which he is the chairman. Fifty prominent clergymen and laymen have given 213 lectures and addresses on educational, welfare, and current topics before the 190 parish branches of the Holy Name society, not only in Chicago but in Dupage, Will, Grundy, Kankakee, and Lake counties during the last year.

Some of the lecturers who have spoken under Mr. Matre's direction are Messrs. D. F. Kelly, Richmond Dean, C. G. Craine, J. J. Crowley, Quinn O'Brien, John R. Ford, C. F. Clyne, Finley Bell, J. C. O'Brien, D. J. Normoyle, J. E. Maloney, and Judges George F. Barrett, Edward K. Jarecki, and Michael F. Girten.

Mr. Matre has just completed a new illustrated lecture on "Father Damien, the Apostle to the Lepers at Molokai, Hawaii," which he will give for the first time on Wednesday evening, June 22, in St. Joseph's parish hall, Downers Grove, under the auspices of the St. Joseph branch of the Holy Name society, of which the Rev. Eneas B. Goodwin, LL. D., is the pastor and spiritual director.

The university preacher this morning in Mandel hall, University of Chicago, will be the Rev. Dr. Clarence L. Barbour, president of the Baptist Theological seminary, Rochester, N. Y., formerly pastor of the Lake Avenue Baptist church in the same city for twenty-one years.

At the baccalaureate service of the Libertyville Township High school held last Sunday evening in the high school auditorium the music was rendered by the choirs of the Presbyterian church and St. Lawrence's Episcopal church under the direction of Mrs. C. N. Durand; the invocation and scripture reading were made by the Rev. C. F. Kleihauer, pastor of the Methodist church; the prayer and benediction were given by the Rev. E. C. Morgan, pastor of the Presbyterian church; and the Rev. Chester C. Hill, former priest in charge of St. Lawrence's Episcopal church, preached the sermon.

Questions dealing with the proposed reorganization of the Presbyterian form of government as it relates to the Presbytery of Chicago will come up for discussion and decision tomorrow morning at a meeting of the Presbytery in the Fourth Presbyterian church, and of the advisability of establishing the office of executive secretary with supervisory powers over the general work of the official boards and agencies.

A lecture on Christian Science will be delivered tomorrow evening in the Fourth church, Harvard avenue and Marquette road, at 8 o'clock by Paul Stark Seeley, C. S. B. On Thursday and Friday evenings Judge Samuel W. Greene, C. S. of Louisville, will lecture in the Seventh church at 6318 Kenmore avenue.

ART and ARCHITECTURE

out the middle west, in fact covering all except the east, the power of the Art institute art school is the most in evidence. In that we have a good industrial art teaching organization.

The demand for graduates from the normal course in the art school is so large it cannot be filled. The students, armed with their three years' training and their Art institute diplomas, can go at once to positions paying $1,500, or $1,800, or $2,000 a year. The trouble is, the school has not enough graduates to send. Last fall the normal school office had fifteen demands they could not satisfy; last Christmas three positions, paying $2,000 each a year, were clamoring to be filled, and the school had no one to send.

Before the war the classes used to average about sixty pupils, but during the war many of the students were drawn into war work and other activities, and the classes dwindled in size. Now they run about twenty-five scholars to a class—which, with the huge demand for trained teachers, is 50 per cent too light.

Perhaps, if attention is drawn to the conditions involved in this normal course of industrial art training, more young women will be induced to enter upon that work. It is one of the most interesting and valuable professions for women which industry can offer. Granted an artistic bent, the girl who takes up industrial art seriously will be of inestimable value to the country at large by making one more of that vast army of people who are becoming more eager each year to introduce more and better art, more and better taste, into the great field of commerce that we are trying to enlarge in competition with the rest of the world.

If Germany, France, England, and the rest think enough of industrial art to develop national schools where men and women are taught along these lines, surely we should think enough of it to develop that which we already have by increasing the attendance of the Art institute normal art school. More than that, we in Chicago should think enough of it to house it conspicuously and properly, in an attractive environment with large windows, fresh air, plenty of sunshine—to put it in a few words, the old Field museum should be caught back from its obscurity, restored, and made into the largest and best equipped industrial art school in the country. It could be done. But will it?

Start Farming

We have enough factories and workers to supply twice the manufactured goods this country can use. Europe was buying our 50% surplus, but is now too poor to buy from us for several years. About half of America's factory workers will have to get other work. There is only one sure outlet and that is to go to the land for a living. Rather than drag along and finally be forced to do this, why don't you secure some good land NOW while prices are still low?

ACT NOW! SAVE MONEY!

If you are in earnest, a little money and courage will start your farm home. We have helped many to do this. Why not you? The first payment is small, balance as low as $8 a month. We offer splendid hardwood lands. Full information, pictures, reports of crops in big booklet. Write us today for your FREE copy.

PAIGE REBUILT

When Bird-Sykes say "rebuilt Paige," they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." Rebuilt, in the Bird-Sykes shop, means taking apart motor, transmission, and rear axle—measuring or testing parts to determine wear—replacing worn parts with new—rebuilding—adjusting—tuning up—repainting body—refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt Paige satisfies the eye as a new car and its performance is the same as new.

Guaranteed by Bird-Sykes.

Every Rebuilt Paige is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes to be as represented and in perfect mechanical condition, and if anything turns out unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes make it good without cost to the purchaser.

Easy Terms—No Brokerage Charge.

We do not ask our customers to pay the exorbitant rates charged by so-called automobile bankers in order to buy of us on deferred payments. You can buy a Bird-Sykes Rebuilt Paige on easy terms, paying only ordinary Bank interest rates on deferred payments.

PAIGE LIGHT SIX, 3 Passenger Roadster, Model 6-39. Rebuilt and refinished dark Brewster green. 5 good tires [32x4]. 2 bumpers, lock, tools, etc. This is a roomy easy riding, economical little car that will give lots of real service. Only $850.

PAIGE LIGHT SIX, 5 Passenger, Model 6-38. Rebuilt and refinished a dark royal blue. Has good top and upholstery and 5 good tires. This is an easy riding, economical little car on which you can get very good gasoline mileage. Price $850.

PAIGE LIGHT SIX, 7 PASSENGER, Model 6-51. Rebuilt and refinished standard dark blue. Has 5 good tires, bumper, lock, etc. This car has had good care, as is shown by the excellent condition of top and upholstery. This is an exceptionally good family car for only $1,050.

PAIGE 6-42, 5 Passenger Touring, 1920. Same chassis as 6-44, except for ½ inch difference in bore of motor. With the care this car has had it is good for years of satisfying service. When turned in it showed only very little wear. Was fully rebuilt wherever necessary and has been repainted Brewster green. Top and upholstery practically new. Cord tires all around and rebound snubbers; nickel plated bumpers fore and aft. When you see this car you will admit it is the finest car you can possibly get for $1,450.

PAIGE 6-42 COUPE, Light 4 Passenger. This is a demonstrator that has been run very few miles. Of course, it has had the best attention and its looks and mechanical condition are like new. It is one of the easiest riding and easiest handling coupes on the market and is a great favorite with the ladies. We guarantee this car, and it is equipped with lock, bumper, and extra tire. $2,250.

PERSHING ROAD O. K.'D BY CHICAGO PLANCOMMISSION

Officially Approved by Charles H. Wacker.

A subcommittee of the streets and alleys committee of the city council has voted to recommend to the streets and alleys committee, which meets tomorrow, that the city vacate Bubbly creek, Halsted street to Racine avenue, 108 feet wide. This will clear the way for rushing Pershing road to completion.

BY AL CHASE.

Official approval of the plan to make Pershing road— former 39th street—one of Chicago's greatest thoroughfares, has been publicly given by the Chicago Plan commission, through Charles H. Wacker, chairman. This long sought for O. K. by the body that is doing most to make Chicago over into a comfortable place to live in, was given during the luncheon to Gen. John J. Pershing at the Central Manufacturing District club on Thursday.

CHARLES H. WACKER.

Along with the approval, Mr. Wacker sounded a warning to the Pershing Road association, made up of all the organizations along that thoroughfare between the lake and the Chicago zoo, that every man must help the Chicago plan commission if the project is to be put through in a hurry. Otherwise, he said, it would drag along.

Here Are the Reasons.

"I have jotted down the principal reasons for the Pershing road improvement and I am voicing not only my own views but the views of the Chicago plan commission with reference to 39th street," said Mr. Wacker.

"First of all, we believe that Pershing road is destined to become one of the most important of the east and west arteries of the city. Sixty years ago it was a southern city boundary and led directly from Lake Michigan to the Desplaines river near Riverside, while today it is very near the geographical center of Chicago, as well as the center of the city's population.

"Since that time Bubbly creek, now being filled, eliminated the street from Halsted to Ashland, a distance of one mile. When opened and adequately widened—and it should not be widened to anything less than 100 feet; it should be 108 feet to make it a proper kind of a traffic artery—its very location will make Pershing road a thoroughfare of great importance, intersected by every important north and south street in the city, such diagonal streets as Cottage Grove, Archer, and Ogden avenues, and the proposed new roadway along the Sanitary canal.

Finest Zoo in World.

"With Jackson park on the south side, with Lincoln park on the north, on the west Pershing road will lead into the forest preserves and the Chicago Zoological gardens, which are to be patterned after the leading zoological gardens of the world. There already is a commission appointed, on which I have the honor of being a member, and that zoological garden is, of course, to be made the most modern and best that can be made.

"The Chicago plan commission heartily approves of the opening of Thirty-ninth street for the following reasons:

"First, because it will facilitate the handling of traffic, if it is made sufficiently wide;

"Second, because it will greatly increase property values, just as all other Chicago Plan improvements have;

"Third, and all important, because of its humanitarian value. This improvement will be a boon to the very large number of people back of the yards, by giving easy and definite access to the health-giving lake front, parks and bathing beaches.

Warns Slackers.

"I desire to take advantage of this opportunity to say to you men that it is up to you; the question of when, how soon and how quickly it will be done is up to you. Lincoln said: 'With popular sentiment, nothing can fail; without it, nothing can succeed.' If you gentlemen put your shoulders to the wheel and assist the Chicago Plan commission in every way that you can, this improvement will be quickly made, will go forward in time, as fast as it can, without that support it may drag along. I give you that warning and I hope that all of you will join forces with us and put this over as quickly as we can make it one of the finest thoroughfares, which we owe the name it has received."

"Every business man along Pershing road from the lake to the zoo is anxious to get the project completed," said Charles G. Mollan, president of the Pershing Road association, and the originator of the idea of making 39th street into Pershing road. "So I don't believe there'll be any slackers."

Architect Frank L. Fry has designed what is said will be the largest colored Masonic temple in the world, to be built on a site 100x161, already purchased by the Prince Hall Masonic association at the southeast corner of State and 56th streets. Work will start as soon as labor conditions permit. The cost will be over $600,000. It will be of red brick trimmed with cream terra cottta. Fifteen south side lodges will be cared for.

NEW SOUTH SIDE TEMPLE TO COST OVER $600,000

Colored Masons to Have Largest of Its Kind.

Chicago is to have what is claimed will be the largest and most complete temple in the world devoted to the interests of colored Masons. Plans have been drawn by Architect Frank L. Fry for a building to cost over $600,000, which is to be erected as soon as possible at the southeast corner of State and 56th streets on a site 100x161 by the Prince Hall Masonic Temple association.

Several thousand Masons will march today at noon from 40th and State, south on State to the site of the new temple, where at 2 p. m. site dedicatory ceremonies will take place in charge of Thomas H. Samuels, grand master of the state of Illinois.

The new temple will care for fifteen lodges and will have five lodge halls. In addition there will be a roof garden, a large auditorium, a billiard room, library and reading room, rest rooms, tea room and other comforts of a metropolitan club. There will be nine stores on the first floor and thirty-two offices.

The officers of the Prince Hall Masonic Temple association for the first year are: President, Samuel Matthews; first vice president, Robert A. Jackson; second vice president, C. C. Granberry; treasurer, W. C. Lee. The building committee is as follows: T. N. Sellers, chairman; Robert A. Jackson, William Woodward and Samuel Matthews.

SENATOR CALDER TO BE SPEAKER AT REALTY CONVENTION

Another nationally known name has been added to the list of speakers to be present at the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in Chicago next month. Senator William M. Calder of New York yesterday wired that he would accept the invitation to address the convention. Present plans call for his appearance at the Auditorium some time during the afternoon of Wednesday, July 13.

SENATOR WILLIAM M. CALDER. [Underwood Photo.]

Senator Calder is chairman of the special senate committee on production and reconstruction, and probably will tell what has been accomplished through the recent senatorial investigation and outline his program of future plans.

News of the Architects

Unless the absolutely unexpected happens, Albert Moore Saxe of Zimmerman, Saxe & Zimmerman will be elected president of the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects at the annual election and dinner on Tuesday. The other officers nominated are: F. W. Puckey, first vice president; Edwin H. Clark, second vice president; Richard E. Schmidt, treasurer, and John Archibald Armstrong, secretary. The two new members of the executive committee are Henry K. Holsman, retiring president, and C. H. Hammond.

Charles H. Wacker, chairman of the Chicago Plan commission, will give an illustrated talk on the latest developments in making Chicago an attractive and conveniently arranged city. There will be music at the dinner, which will be at 6:30, and during the evening.

PLANS 20 FLAT BUILDINGS ON NORTHWEST SIDE

Edward Nelson, who in the last few years has bought and built up two full blocks in the Henry Dirks subdivision with flats and bungalows, is planning to put up twenty apartment buildings of two flats each, five and six rooms, to cost between $11,000 and $12,000, on the vacant 592 feet on the east side of North Linder avenue, between Hirsch and Le Moyne streets. This means an investment of about $225,000 in building construction.

Emil J. Dirks sold the property, which is in the Henry Dirks subdivision, at a reported $23,000, or at an average of $1,150 per lot with all improvements included. There are eighteen inside thirty foot lots and two twenty-six corner lots.

Mr. Nelson recently completed a block of sixteen bungalows immediately east on North Lotus avenue, all of which have been sold. The houses he now plans to build will have furnace and hot water heat and will be sold on a cash payment of $2,000. Contracts have been let for eight of these flats.

$50,000 PAID FOR HINSDALE 40 ACRE FARM

One of the most attractive country estates west of Chicago, the forty acre farm of Mrs. Nellis Bartlett Chase, just north of Hinsdale, on Ogden avenue, has been sold by her to Edgar P. Guthard, president of the Edgar P. Guthard company, tools, 361 East Ohio street, through Rollo Shanks & Co., for a reported $50,000, subject to a $9,000 mortgage.

Mrs. Chase is the widow of the president of the Franco-American Hygienic company, 1300 Indiana avenue, a concern she now operates. She left last week for Europe. Her Hinsdale farm is known as Blythewood. Mr. and Mrs. Guthard will move to Du Page county from 4342 Sheridan road.

North Side Beach Fans to Have Winter Swimming

Finding his guests already are wondering what they're going to do about swimming when the beaches close next fall, Manager George F. Adams of the new Sheridan-Plaza hotel, at Wilson and Sheridan, has decided to go ahead and build the third wing originally planned by Architect Walter W. Ahlschlager just east of the present structure, and make a large pool for chilly day swimming the principal feature. In connection with it will be Turkish and medicinal baths. There will be 150 rooms in the proposed annex and a large roof garden.

WOODLAWN BANK BUYS SITE.

A reported $40,000 has been paid by the newly organized National Bank of Woodlawn to the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee for the Woodlawn Stores syndicate, through W. K. Young & Brother, for the 40x143 site for the proposed bank building at 1328-30 East 63d street. Architect Thomas R. Bishop is drawing plans for a $100,000 structure.

1921 REWARDS TWO BROTHER FLYERS WITH PARTNERSHIP

LIEUT. FLOYD A. PACE.

"1921 is rewarding fighters" in the offices of Pace & Co., Inc. Two wearers of khaki during the world war have just been admitted to membership in that real estate firm. Lieut. Floyd A. Pace is one of the two rewarded. He was a pilot in the United States air service.

His brother, Grover C. Pace, was a second lieutenant in the Royal Flying corps of the British army. He was an observer, and during the latter part of the war succeeded in getting shifted over into the A. E. F.

Pace & Co., Inc., have moved their offices from 64 West Randolph street to much larger quarters in the Strauss building, at the northwest corner of Clark and Madison. Both of the former flyers are in the renting and sales department. The senior member of the firm is J. Madison Pace, a third brother. Pace & Co.'s new phone number is Main 5385.

Beg Your Pardon

The lease to the government by Max Straus and Leon Hartman, trustees, of property at 712-18 West Monroe, for postal uses, made two years ago but filed for record recently, was reported incorrectly in this department last Sunday. In the figures furnished THE TRIBUNE by the county mention was made only of a room 70x187 on the first floor, together with a platform, which was leased for $29,000 annually. One naturally assumed Uncle Sam was paying an exorbitant rental. Word comes from Mr. Hartman that the $29,000 is for a seven story and basement building 70x187, which puts an entirely different aspect on the affair.

$500,000 Loan at 6 Per Cent

The Midway Masonic Temple association has given a trust deed to W. J. Wisdom for $500,000, ten years, at 6 per cent, secured by the property at 6107-25 Cottage Grove, 200x125.

Wells Street Flats to Be Made Into Factory Building

Work will start as soon as possible on converting the three story store and flat building at 901-21 North Wells street into a light manufacturing property. The building fronts 231 feet on Wells, 100 feet on Locust, and 100 on Whiting. R. T. Davis has bought it from the Richardson estate, represented by Frank N. Moore, for a reported $130,000, subject to $30,000, and is having plans drawn by Architect Roy F. France for alterations to cost in the neighborhood of $50,000. William D. Murdock & Co. were brokers.

PRINTERS BUY BUILDING.

The Theodore Rozek company, printers has bought from Frederick H. Hummell, through Paul C. Loeber & Co., the one and two story building at 2511-19 Park avenue, lot 96x104, for a reported $35,000 and will move from Fulton and Desplaines shortly.

GORGEOUS FAR EAST CAFE FOR WILSON AVENUE

One of the most elaborate oriental cafés in the world is planned for the Wilson avenue district as the result of the lease of the entire second floor and roof garden of the new building at Clarendon and Wilson by Eng Gow, president of the Golden Pheasant company, for fifteen years at a reported total rental of $174,000.

Harry W. Rubloff, lessor, announces that the Chinese company, which operates the Golden Pheasant inn at Clark and Madison, will spend approximately $100,000 on the new north side eating place. Albert I. Doerr, manager of the Wilson Avenue Real Estate company, represented the lessee.

The two story building fronts 130 feet east on Clarendon and fifty-eight feet south on Wilson. Architect Alfred S. Alschuler designed the building.

Sells Sixty-third Inside Lot at $1,250 a Front Foot

Five Woodlawn men, comprising the Kimbark Stores syndicate, have bought from James Barsaloux, realtor, the 100x117 at the southeast corner of 63d and Kimbark, improved with old two story frame buildings, containing five stores, with flats in the rear, for a reported $125,000, subject to $40,000. The syndicate members are Grant W. Porter, Kidder & Lewis, F. J. Savoie, James H. Carey, and Fred M. Lorish.

The syndicate then sold the east forty feet to Daemicke Bros., shoe dealers, for a reported $50,000, which is at the rate of $1,250 a front foot. The buyers intend to erect a two story white tile building. No architect has been selected. Mr. Lorish, of W. K. Young & Bro., was broker in the above deals.

BUYS ELMHURST ACRES.

The Lake Shore Realty company has bought from Max Hammerschmidt a tract of land in Elmhurst known as Clover Hills, which is to be subdivided. The Kraus Realty company was broker.

Another Big Restaurant Chain to Open Cafeteria

Slowly the old line get food quick restaurateurs are adopting the help yourself idea of service. The John R. Thompson company was the first of the arm chair syndicates to try it, but for some reason never went farther than the initial one installed years ago in Madison street. The Weeghman corporation, however, is gradually switching some of its eateries to self-service and now John Raklios & Co., which operates twenty-four restaurants in Chicago, twelve of which are in the loop, announces a cafeteria to cost $40,000 at 172-74 West Jackson boulevard, in the Medinah temple. A ten year lease has been taken, through Rosenberg & Lurie, at a reported term rental of $150,000, the leasehold interests of James F. Haslip and the Healtheries Foods company having been secured.

Chicago Furnace Supply Buys Factory Building

The Chicago Furnace Supply company, which was burned out at 549 West Monroe street, has purchased from David F. Bremner Sr. the three story manufacturing building at 1276-80 Clybourn avenue, for a reported $45,000, through Thomas H. Mullay of Roy L. Reichert & Co. The grantee will occupy part of the building and leave the present tenants in the remainder.
